Hi

With apologies – I appreciate that the call for views closed yesterday - I would like, if it is possible to make late submission, to make the following brief suggestion/comment in relation to Article 83(7) of the GDPR and the scope for Member States to lay down rules on whether and to what extent administrative fines may be imposed:

· Regulator sanctions against public authorities in the form of a straight penalty may not be the most effective way in which to encourage a change in behaviour or to channel public funds. Would there be scope for the ICO to make a penalty 'suspended', with it only taking effect if specific compliance actions are not undertaken by a set time?
