1: Introduction

All landlords in England have a responsibility to prevent those without lawful immigration status from accessing the private rented sector. Allowing those without a lawful right to be in the UK to rent property supports them in establishing a settled life here, rather than to make provision to return to their home country. This creates a significant cost to the public purse, including through the provision of local authority support, and also reduces the amount of housing stock available to those who are lawfully residing in the UK.

An individual will have the “right to rent” in the UK provided they are present lawfully in accordance with immigration law. Under section 22 of the Immigration Act 2014 (“the 2014 Act”), a landlord should not authorise an adult to occupy property as their only or main home under a residential tenancy agreement, unless the adult is a British, or Irish citizen or has the “right to rent” in the England.

The legislation underpinning the Right to Rent Scheme (in this code the restrictions and civil penalty provisions are referred to as “the Scheme”) is currently in force only in England. This Code is therefore relevant only to premises let in England.

Section 23 of the 2014 Act allows the Secretary of State to serve a landlord or letting agent with a notice requiring the payment of a penalty of a specified amount where they have let property to a person who does not have the right to rent in respect of a tenancy subject to the Scheme. This code outlines which tenancies are subject to the Scheme and how any penalty will be applied as a result of the Scheme. Landlords have the option to appoint an agent to act on their behalf. Where an agent has accepted responsibility in writing for compliance with the Scheme, the agent will be the liable party in place of the landlord.

About this version of the code of practice

This code updates the version issued in July 2021. It has been updated to reflect the Immigration (Restrictions on Employment and Residential Accommodation) (Prescribed Requirements and Codes of Practice) and Licencing Act 2003 (Personal and Premises Licences) (Forms), etc., Regulations 2022.

This is the fifth version of this code, and the changes detailed within apply from 6 April 2022. This version of the code should be applied to all right to rent checks from this date, including where a follow-up check is required to maintain a statutory excuse, even if the initial check was undertaken using a previous version of the code which was current at the time.

Right to rent checks which were carried out in the prescribed manner prior to this code having effect will be considered by the Secretary of State in line with the version of the code which was current at the time the right to rent check was made.

When was the Scheme introduced?

The Right to Rent Scheme applies only to residential tenancy agreements first entered into:

- on or after 1 December 2014 in Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Dudley, Sandwell and Walsall
- on or after 1 February 2016 in the rest of England.

How should this code of practice be used?

This code has been issued under section 32 of the Immigration Act 2014. It sets out the actions a landlord should undertake to comply with the Scheme and establish a statutory excuse against liability for a civil penalty. The code sets out:

- the factors the Secretary of State will consider when determining whether a residential tenancy agreement grants a right of occupation of premises for residential use
- the factors the Secretary of State will consider when determining whether a person is occupying premises as their only or main home
- the actions a landlord should undertake to comply with the Scheme and establish a statutory excuse against liability for a civil penalty, including:
 - the reasonable enquiries a landlord should make to determine who will occupy their accommodation, whether or not those occupiers are named on the tenancy agreement
 - the initial and follow-up checks a landlord should perform with details of the documents they can rely upon to satisfy these checks
- the factors the Secretary of State will consider when deciding on the amount of the penalty which should be imposed under the Scheme.

This code has been issued alongside the Landlord's guide to right to rent checks. This document sets out how to conduct right to rent checks and how the Home Office administers the Scheme.

How to avoid discrimination

It is unlawful to discriminate against individuals on grounds of protected characteristics, including race, when entering into residential tenancy agreements. Those experiencing unlawful discrimination may claim compensation in the civil courts.

A separate 'Code of practice for landlords: Avoiding unlawful discrimination when conducting 'right to rent' checks in the private rented residential sector' gives further advice on how to operate checking processes that are non-discriminatory and in accordance with statutory equalities duties.

Landlords should apply checks to all occupiers, whether or not they may already believe the occupiers to be legally in the UK.

Checks should be performed without regard to race, religion or any other protected characteristics or equality grounds as specified in the Equality Act 2010 on all adults who will be living in the property.

Who should use this code of practice?

This is a statutory code. This means it has been approved by the Secretary of State and laid before the UK Parliament. Courts and Employment Tribunals may take account of any part of this code which may be relevant. Home Office officials will also have regard to this code when administering civil penalties under the Act.

A statutory excuse under section 24 of the Immigration Act 2014 allows landlords (section 26 for agents) to be excused from paying a penalty for letting their property to someone disqualified from renting. Landlords can establish a statutory excuse against liability for a civil penalty by conducting simple checks before allowing adults to occupy rented accommodation. Landlords should not let property for use by an adult who cannot satisfy a right to rent check. Some checks will allow for an unlimited right to rent, while others will allow for a time-limited right to rent.

This code explains the actions a landlord can take to avoid liability for a civil penalty if they breach section 22 of the Act, which prohibits a landlord from renting to a person who does not have the right to rent. This is called establishing a statutory excuse against liability for a civil penalty. A statutory excuse may be continuous or time-limited in relation to a particular occupier.

The legislation underpinning the Right to Rent Scheme (in this code the restrictions and civil penalty provisions are referred to as “the Scheme”) is currently in force only in England. This code is therefore relevant only to premises let in England.

References in this code of practice

In this code, a reference to:

‘Adult’ means a person who has attained the age of 18.

‘Breach’ means that section 22 of the Immigration Act 2014 has been contravened by renting to an adult who is a disqualified person.

‘Certificate of Application’ (CoA) is a digital, or non-digital document which individuals can rely on to demonstrate their eligibility to rent, work and access benefits and services. This document is issued when a valid application is made to the EU Settlement Scheme (EUSS).

‘Civil penalty’ or ‘penalty’ means a financial penalty imposed by the Home Office on a landlord who has allowed a tenant to occupy private rented residential accommodation, but the tenant does not have the right to rent.

‘Current document’ means a document that has not expired.

‘Days’ has two separate meanings:

- when referring to a tenant - means calendar days, including Saturdays, Sundays and bank holidays
- when referring to the Landlord Checking Service – it does not include Saturdays or Sundays, Christmas Day or Good Friday, or any day which is a bank holiday in England.

‘Disqualified person’ means a person with no legal immigration status in the UK and therefore doesn’t qualify for right to rent.

‘Document’ means an original document unless specified in the code of practice that a copy, electronic or screenshot is acceptable.

‘EEA or Swiss citizens’ refers to citizens of EEA countries or Switzerland.

The EEA countries are:

Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Croatia, Republic of Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain and Sweden.

‘eVisa’ refers to a digital visa provided by the Home Office as evidence of a person’s immigration status (permission to enter or stay in the UK).

‘Home Office Landlord Checking Service (LCS)’ refers to the enquiry and advice service operated by the Home Office that landlords are required to contact in certain circumstances to check whether a person has a right to rent.

‘Home Office online right to rent check’ means the online checking service allowing landlords to check whether a person is allowed to rent in England. For avoidance of doubt, this system is accessible for landlords on the 'View a tenant's right to rent in England' page on GOV.UK. No other online portal relating to immigration status may be used instead for right to rent purposes.

'Identity Document Validation Technology (IDVT)' are forms of technology operated for the purpose of verifying the identity of a person, whereby a digital copy of a physical document relating to that person is produced for verification of the document's validity, and whether that person is the rightful holder of the document.

'Identity Service Provider (IDSP)' is a provider of identity verification services using IDVT. In the context of this code of practice, an IDSP may be certified to provide identity verification to specific levels of confidence, specified by government standards. IDSPs are sometimes referred to as 'identity providers'.

'Immigration document' means a document of a prescribed description which:

- a) is issued as evidence that a person who is not a national of an EEA state or Switzerland is entitled to enter or remain in the United Kingdom by virtue of an enforceable EU right or of any provision made under section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972, or
- b) grants to the holder a right to enter or remain in the United Kingdom for such period as the document may authorise.

'Landlord' means a person who lets accommodation for use by one or more adults as their only or main home. This includes people who take in lodgers and tenants who are sub-letting. References to 'landlord' also include agents who have accepted responsibility for complying with the Scheme on behalf of landlords, except for when agents are specifically and separately referred to.

'Leave to Enter' or 'Leave to Remain' see 'Permission to Enter' and 'Permission to Stay'.

'Level of Confidence' (LoC) is determined through a process required of IDSPs called 'identity checking' which is made up of 5 parts. Each step of the identity checking process is scored, and these scores are used to determine the Level of Confidence which has been achieved.

'Lodger' means someone who takes a room within accommodation that they share with their landlord (this could be the owner or an occupier of the property).

'Market rent' means the amount of rent that can be expected for the use of a property, in comparison with similar properties in the same area.

'Negative Right to Rent Notice' (NRRN) is a negative confirmation that a person does not have the right to rent from the Landlord Checking Service. If a landlord receives an NRRN, but continues to enter into a tenancy agreement with this person, the landlord will not have a statutory excuse and may be liable for a civil penalty.

'Occupier' means a person who is, or who will be, authorised to occupy the property under the residential tenancy agreement, whether or not they are named on that agreement.

‘Permission to rent’ means a person who is disqualified from renting by virtue of their immigration status but to whom the Secretary of State has granted permission to occupy premises.

‘Permission to Enter’ also known as ‘Leave to Enter’. Immigration documents and guidance may refer to either term, both are acceptable. This means that a person has permission from the Home Office to enter in the UK.

‘Permission to Stay’ also known as ‘Leave to Remain’. Immigration documents and guidance may refer to either term, both are acceptable. This means that a person has permission from the Home Office to be in the UK.

‘Positive Right to Rent Notice’ (PRRN) is a positive confirmation of a person’s right to rent from the Landlord Checking Service. This will provide the landlord with a statutory excuse for twelve months from the date specified in the Notice.

‘Pre-settled status’ means an individual will have a time-limited right to rent, and the landlord must carry out a follow-up check.

‘Rent’ means a tenant's regular payment to a landlord for the use of property or land.

‘Residential tenancy agreement’ means an arrangement in any form (whether or not in writing) between parties that grants a right to occupy premise for residential use and provides payment of rent not including certain specified types of tenancy which are excluded from the right to rent provisions and are set out in Schedule 3 of the Immigration Act 2014.

‘Right to rent’ means allowed to occupy privately rented residential accommodation by virtue of qualifying immigration status.

‘Right to rent checks’ refer to manual document checks, prescribed Home Office online right to rent checks and prescribed use of an Identity Service Provider (IDSP).

‘Settlement’ (formerly Indefinite Leave to Remain) means how an individual settles in the UK. This gives an individual the right to live, work and study in the UK for as long as they like and apply for benefits if they are eligible. They can use it to apply for British citizenship. This is sometimes referred to as ‘settled status’.

‘Sub-tenant’ means a person who leases property from a tenant.

‘Statutory excuse’ means the steps a landlord can take to avoid liability for payment of a civil penalty.

‘Tenant’ means the person or persons to whom the residential tenancy agreement is granted.

‘Valid application’ means individuals who comply with the validation requirement of an application process, including the enrolment of biometrics, if required, and the provision of evidence of nationality and identity.

‘Validity period’ in the context of this code of practice means the period for which an immigration document issued to the limited right occupier by or on behalf of the Secretary of State is valid.

‘View a tenant’s right to rent in England’ means the Home Office online service on GOV.UK which enables landlords or agents to check whether a person has a right to rent and, if so, the nature of any restrictions on that person’s right to do so.

2: Who can occupy residential accommodation?

Under the Scheme, people will fall into two broad categories depending on their immigration status. The majority of individuals will have an unlimited right to rent, and others will have a time-limited right to rent.

This section sets out information about who falls into these categories and also three further groups; those with no right to rent, those who have been given permission to rent and children.

Those with an unlimited right to rent

There are three groups of people who have an unlimited right to rent. These are:

1. British citizens
2. Irish citizens
3. people who have the right of abode in the UK, or who have been granted settlement or have settled status, including via the EUSS, or have no time limit on their permission to stay in the UK.

A landlord will not be liable for a civil penalty if they let accommodation for occupation by someone with an unlimited right to rent.

Those with a time-limited right to rent

Those who do not have an unlimited right to rent will have a time-limited right to rent if they have valid permission to stay, including pre-settled status, in the UK. They will have a right to reside in the UK and will be able to provide documentary evidence (physical or digital) to demonstrate this.

A landlord will not be liable for a civil penalty if they let accommodation for occupation by someone with a time-limited right to rent. However, to maintain a statutory excuse against a penalty, a landlord will need to conduct follow-up checks in these cases.

Those with no right to rent

A person is not permitted to occupy residential accommodation if they require permission to be in the UK and do not have it. This means they do not have the right to rent.

A landlord will normally be liable for a civil penalty if they authorise occupation of accommodation for use as an only or main home by a person who does not have the right to rent.

Those who have been granted permission to rent

The Secretary of State may grant someone permission to rent, even though their immigration status means they would otherwise not have the right to rent. A landlord will not be liable for a civil penalty if they let accommodation to an adult who has been granted permission to rent. The landlord must contact the Landlord Checking Service (LCS) for confirmation that the prospective tenant has been granted permission to rent.

Children

This Scheme does not apply to children. This means that a landlord may allow all those under the age of 18 years to occupy property. A landlord can consider a person to be a child where they are reasonably satisfied that they are not 18 years of age or over.

Landlords may allow those who will turn 18 years of age during a tenancy agreement to continue to occupy property. A landlord is not required to conduct a right to rent check at the point the child turns 18 years of age. However, where follow-up checks are required for the existing tenants, the now adult should be included in those checks when they are due.

3: Which letting arrangements fall within the Scheme?

Under the Scheme a landlord must not authorise any adult to occupy a property under a residential tenancy agreement which provides for the payment of rent unless they have a right to rent or have been granted permission to rent.

What is a residential tenancy agreement?

A residential tenancy agreement, either written or oral, means a tenancy that grants a right of occupation for a property for residential use, provides for the payment of rent (whether or not market rent), and is not an Excluded agreement. A tenancy includes any lease, licence, sub-lease or sub-tenancy. An agreement will grant a right of occupation for residential use if it allows one or more adults the right to occupy the property as their only or main home, whether or not the property can be used for any other purpose.

The Scheme, therefore, applies to:

- landlords (both businesses and individuals) who let accommodation with a lease or tenancy agreement
- occupiers who sub-let their accommodation (including those in social housing), who will be landlords for the purposes of the Scheme and landlords or occupiers who take in lodgers to share their accommodation with a licence to occupy the property.

A right to rent check should be carried out on all adult tenants before a residential tenancy agreement is entered into, regardless of whether they are named in the tenancy agreement. This includes where the tenancy is:

- varied – where a landlord agrees to the variation of a tenancy which grants the right of occupation to one or more new adult(s)
- assigned – where a landlord agrees to the assignment of an existing and ongoing tenancy from one or more tenants which grants a new adult(s) the right of occupation
- surrendered – where a landlord agrees to the surrender of an existing residential tenancy agreement and grants a further agreement starting from the time the surrendered tenancy ends, to one or more of the original occupiers and one or more new occupiers ‘a new joint tenancy’.

However, a residential tenancy agreement is not to be treated as being entered into for these purposes where:

- it arises by virtue of an order from a court, by or under any statutory provision, or by operation of law
- it arises between the same parties at the end of a term granted by a residential tenancy as a result of a contractual right exercised by the tenant.

Property for use as an only or main home

The Scheme applies to all types of property that a person will use as their only or main home (with exclusions as detailed in Excluded agreements). For the purposes of the Scheme, a property will be considered a person's only or main home if:

- it is the only property they live in
- if they live between multiple properties, their personal, legal or family ties to that property are such that it is where they live their settled day to day life.

When an occupier lives away from the home for extended periods due to employment, the address to which they return when they are not working is usually taken as being their only or main home.

Holiday accommodation

The Scheme only applies to residential tenancy agreements which allow someone to take up occupation as their only or main home.

Holiday accommodation refers to properties usually let for leisure purposes for short periods to people who also maintain an only or main home elsewhere (whether in or outside of England). Holiday accommodation could be in a hotel, guesthouse, caravan, cottage, holiday apartment or elsewhere.

As a guide, the Home Office would consider that bookings of three months or more may indicate that a person is using the accommodation for a purpose other than leisure purposes and could be intending to use the accommodation as their only or main home.

If the booking is open ended, or the initial booking was time-limited but has subsequently been extended on one or more occasions such that the occupier appears to be using the premises as their only or main home, then it would be advisable to undertake right to rent checks.

House guests

House guests, such as friends or family members, will not ordinarily be treated as an 'occupier' under the Scheme because a guest will generally not be living in the accommodation as their only or main home. A landlord should make reasonable enquiries as set out in Property for use as an only or main home at the time the residential tenancy is entered into (including when it is renewed or varied) and make an assessment based on those enquiries as to whether someone will be living on the premises as their only or main home.

Where a person is living in accommodation as their only or main home and is paying rent to another occupier, they may be regarded as having entered into their own residential tenancy agreement with that occupier (as a sub-tenant or licensee) and it will fall to that occupier to conduct the right to rent checks. For further detail on sub-letting please see Transfer of liability.

Excluded agreements

Some types of property and residential tenancy agreements are excluded from the Scheme. These are:

- accommodation arranged by local authorities
- social housing
- care homes, hospitals and hospices and continuing healthcare provision
- hostels and refuges
- mobile homes
- tied accommodation
- student accommodation
- long leases.

Further information on excluded agreements can be found in the Landlord's guide to right to rent checks.

4: Who may be liable for a penalty?

Liability

Responsibility under the Scheme lies with the landlord; that is the person who authorises the occupation of accommodation by the occupier under an agreement providing for the payment of rent. There are some circumstances in which responsibility for compliance with the Scheme can be transferred to another person. These are described below in Transfer of Liability.

Transfer of liability

Sub-letting

If an occupier subsequently sub-lets and authorises occupation by other adults under another residential tenancy agreement, then they will be responsible for occupation by the sub-tenants and sub-occupiers. Any occupier who sub-lets all or part of their accommodation to a person for payment of rent will be a landlord for the purposes of the Scheme. They may be liable for a civil penalty if they do not undertake the prescribed checks and allow occupation by a person who needs and does not have a right to rent. This applies equally to occupiers sub-letting private or social housing.

However, where an occupier sub-lets and so becomes a landlord, they can ask their landlord (the 'superior landlord') to agree to accept responsibility for occupation by the sub-tenants and any contraventions of the Scheme. The superior landlord will then be responsible for conducting right to rent checks and will incur any liability for a penalty. This should be an agreement in writing.

Where the superior landlord has agreed to be responsible, they are treated as though they have authorised the occupation by the sub-tenants themselves and are the responsible landlord for the purposes of the Scheme. To protect themselves from liability for a penalty, they will need to take the same steps that they would if they were granting the residential tenancy agreement themselves. These steps are: ascertaining who will be authorised to occupy the property as their only or main home under the sub-tenancy, checking the status of those persons, making any follow-up checks and reports where necessary, or instructing an agent to comply with these requirements for them.

Unless the superior landlord confirms that they are willing to accept this responsibility in writing, then the occupier who is sub-letting will be the responsible landlord for the purposes of the Scheme.

Agents

Landlords may appoint an agent to conduct checks on their behalf, but should keep a written agreement which should also make clear if the agent is to be responsible for the initial right to rent check and any follow-up checks for those with a time-limited right to rent. Landlords are advised to agree the timescales the agent should follow when making the checks and the form that the agent should use to communicate these (written or verbal). Under this arrangement, the liability for civil penalties transfers to the agent, but liability cannot be transferred beyond the agent.

Sitting occupiers and changes in landlord

If a landlord acquires a property with sitting occupiers, the new landlord should confirm with the transferring landlord that right to rent checks have been undertaken and retain evidence, for example copies of the documents (physical or digital) checked by the previous landlords, to demonstrate this. Careful note should be taken of whether and when further follow-up checks must be undertaken to ensure a statutory excuse against a penalty is maintained.

If the tenancy was entered in to before the Right to Rent Scheme came into force, landlords do not need to confirm with the transferring landlord that a right to rent check has been carried out. However, landlords should ask for proof of the date of the tenancy was entered in to and keep a record of this.

The Scheme specifies who may be liable for a civil penalty in circumstances where a disqualified person with no right to rent is found to be in occupation and the landlord has changed since the time the original residential tenancy agreement was granted. If the occupier should never have been allowed to occupy the property under a residential tenancy agreement as they had no right to rent at the time the agreement was granted, then the original landlord who granted the residential tenancy agreement will be liable for a civil penalty, even if they have since sold the property on to a new landlord.

If an occupier had a right to rent at the time the residential tenancy agreement was granted, but they have subsequently lost that right to rent and the necessary follow-up checks were not conducted, then the landlord at the time the breach is identified will be responsible. This would occur where the occupier's permission to stay in the UK has expired and the landlord's statutory excuse in relation to that occupier has also expired.

5: How to establish a statutory excuse for right to rent checks

In order to establish an excuse from payment of a civil penalty in the event the landlord is found to be renting to someone without lawful status, landlords must do one of the following before commencing a tenancy:

- a manual right to rent check
- a right to rent check using Identity Document Validation Technology (IDVT) via the services of an Identity Service Provider (IDSP), or
- a Home Office online right to rent check

Increasingly, the Home Office is issuing eVisas rather than issuing physical documents as proof of an individual's immigration status. This means those individuals will only be able to evidence their right to rent using the Home Office online service.

The Home Office online right to rent service sets out what information and/or documentation is needed in order to access the service. However, it will not be possible to conduct an online right to rent check in all circumstances, as not all individuals will have an immigration status that can be checked online at this stage.

In circumstances in which a Home Office online check is not possible, landlords should conduct a manual right to rent check. For British or Irish citizens who hold a valid passport (or Irish passport card) landlords can use the services of an IDSP instead of conducting a manual right to rent check if landlords wish.

When conducting follow-up checks for those whose right to rent is time-limited, landlords may conduct either a manual check or use the Home Office online service where applicable.

There are three steps involved in establishing and maintaining a statutory excuse against liability for a civil penalty:

1. conduct an initial right to rent check before authorising an adult to occupy rented accommodation
2. conduct a follow-up check at the appropriate date if initial checks indicate that an occupier has a time-limited right to rent
3. make a report to the Home Office if follow-up checks indicate that an occupier no longer has the right to rent.

When to undertake an initial right to rent check

In order to establish a statutory excuse against a civil penalty, right to rent checks must be undertaken within specific time limits as prescribed:

- a check on a person with an unlimited right to rent may be undertaken at any time before the residential agreement is entered into
- a check on a person with a time-limited right to rent must be undertaken and recorded no earlier than 28 days before the start date of the tenancy agreement.

However, there will be some limited circumstances where it is not possible to undertake checks before the residential tenancy is agreed. For instance, a prospective tenant may be overseas and wish to arrange accommodation for work or study in the UK in advance of their arrival. In these circumstances, landlords are permitted to check a person's right to rent before they take up occupation of the property, rather than before the start of the residential tenancy agreement.

Ways to evidence right to rent

Manual document-based right to rent checks

There are three basic steps to conducting an initial document-based right to rent check:

1. Obtain original versions of one or more of the acceptable documents for adult occupiers
2. Check the documents in the presence of the holder¹
3. Make clear copies of the documents and retain them with a record of the date on which the check is made. For example: the date on which this right to rent check was made: [insert date].

Landlords must check the validity of the documents in the presence of the holder. The documents must be checked to ensure that:

- They are genuine
- The person presenting them is the prospective or existing tenant
- The photograph and date of birth are consistent across documents and with the person's appearance.

Landlords must make a clear copy of each document, in a format which cannot later be altered, and retain the copy securely, electronically or in hardcopy. Landlords must make a record of the date on which the check was made and retain copies securely for at least one year after the tenancy agreement comes to an end.

For a manual check, landlords should take all reasonable steps to check the validity of the documents presented to them. If a landlord is given a false document, they will only be liable for a civil penalty if it is reasonably apparent that it is false. "Reasonably apparent" means:

¹ The person must be present in person or via a live video link.

where a person who is untrained in the identification of false documents, examining it carefully, but briefly, and without the use of technological aids could reasonably be expected to realise that the document in question is not genuine.

For a step by step guide on how to complete a right to rent check please refer to the Landlord's guide to right to rent checks.

List of acceptable documents for right to rent checks

The documents that are considered acceptable for establishing a statutory excuse when conducting a manual right to rent check are set out in two lists, List A and List B.

Where a right to rent check has been conducted using the Home Office online service, the information is provided in real-time, directly from Home Office systems and there is no requirement to see any or a combination of any of the documents listed below.

List A contains the range of documents which may be accepted for checking purposes for a person who has a permanent right to rent in the UK (including British and Irish citizens). If landlords carry out the prescribed checks, they will establish a continuous statutory excuse for the duration of that person's tenancy. The landlord is required to check one document from List A (Group 1) or two documents from List A (Group 2).

List B contains the range of documents which may be accepted for checking purposes for a person who has a time-limited right to rent in England. If landlords carry out the prescribed checks, they will establish a time-limited statutory excuse. Landlords will be required to carry out a follow-up check as set out below.

Examples of the documents, how to check them and how to copy them can be found in the Right to Rent Checks: A user guide for tenants and landlords.

List A – acceptable documents to establish a continuous statutory excuse

If a prospective tenant can produce either one document from group 1 or two documents from group 2 then they will not require a follow-up check.

List A Group 1 – If a prospective tenant can produce one document from this group then a continuous statutory excuse will be established

1. A passport (current or expired) showing that the holder is a British citizen, or a citizen of the UK and Colonies having the 'right of abode' in the UK.
2. A passport or passport card (in either case, whether current or expired) showing that the holder is an Irish citizen.

Using an Identity Service Provider (IDSP)

From 6 April 2022, landlords can use Identity Document Validation Technology (IDVT) via the services of an IDSP to complete the digital identity verification element of right to rent checks for British and Irish citizens who hold a valid passport (including Irish passport cards).

Digital identity verification conducted by IDSPs is the process of obtaining evidence of the prospective tenant's identity, checking that it is valid and belongs to the person who is claiming it.

If landlords use the services of an IDSP for digital identity verification, holders of valid British or Irish passports (or Irish passport cards) can demonstrate their right to rent using this method. This will provide landlords with a continuous statutory excuse. It is the landlord's responsibility to obtain the IDVT check from the IDSP. Landlords will only have a statutory excuse if they reasonably believe that the IDSP has carried out their checks in accordance with guidance issued here:

Landlords must not treat less favourably those who do not hold a valid passport, or do not wish to prove their identity and eligibility using an IDSP. Landlords must provide individuals with other ways to prove their right to rent and should carry out a manual document-based right to rent check in these circumstances.

For a detailed guide on how to complete a right to rent check, including detailed guidance on using an IDSP, please refer to: Landlord's guide to right to rent checks.

Basic steps to conducting a RTR check using an IDSP:

1. IDSPs can carry out digital identity verification to a range of standards or levels of confidence. The Home Office recommends that landlords only accept checks via an IDSP that satisfy a minimum of a Medium Level of Confidence. A list of certified providers is available for you to choose from on GOV.UK: Digital identity certification for right to work, right to rent and criminal record checks not mandatory for you to use a certified provider; you may use a provider not featured within this list if you are satisfied that they are able to provide the required checks.
2. Landlords must satisfy themselves that the photograph and biographic details (e.g. date of birth) on the IDVT output are consistent with the individual seeking to rent the property (i.e. the information provided by the check relates to the individual and they are not an imposter).
3. Landlords must retain a clear copy of the IDVT identity check output for the duration of the tenancy and for one year after the tenancy has come to an end.

Should landlords be found to be renting to individuals without their identity and eligibility being verified correctly in the prescribed manner, you will not have a statutory excuse in the event the individual is found to be renting illegally by reason of their immigration status. The landlord remains liable for any civil penalty if there is no statutory excuse.

Conducting a Home Office online right to rent check

Landlords can conduct a check by accessing the Home Office online service 'View a tenant's right to rent in England' on GOV.UK. The online service allows checks to be carried out by video call, and landlords do not need to see physical documents as the right to rent information is provided in real-time, directly from Home Office systems.

Currently, the Home Office online service supports checks for a range of individuals, depending on the type of immigration documentation they are issued. The use of digital proof of immigration status forms part of our move towards a UK immigration system that is digital by default. This will be simpler, safer and more convenient. A full list of those who can access the Home Office online service is in our guidance, available on GOV.UK at: Landlord's guide to right to rent checks.

Some individuals have been issued with an eVisa and can only use the online service to prove their right to rent.

Biometric Residence Card (BRC), Biometric Residence Permit (BRP) and Frontier Worker Permit (FWP) holders are also only able to evidence their right to rent using the Home Office online service. This means landlords cannot accept or check a physical BRC, BRP or FWP as proof of right to rent.

There are three basic steps to conducting a Home Office online right to rent check:

1. use the Home Office online right to rent checking service 'View a tenant's right to rent in England' page on GOV.UK in respect of an individual and only rent to the person or enter in to a tenancy agreement with the person, if the online check confirms they have the right to rent;
2. landlords must satisfy themselves that the photograph on the online right to rent check is of the individual; and
3. retain a clear copy of the response provided by the online right to rent check (storing that response securely, electronically or in hardcopy) for the duration of the tenancy and for one year after the tenancy has come to an end.

If the Home Office online right to rent check does not confirm that the individual has a right to rent, the landlord will not have a statutory excuse if they enter into a tenancy agreement with them.

The Home Office Landlord Checking Service

In certain circumstances, a landlord may need to contact the Home Office Landlord Checking Service (LCS) to verify an individual's right to rent and establish a statutory excuse. The landlord should contact the LCS when the individual:

- has a document (a non-digital CoA or an acknowledgement letter or email) confirming receipt of an application to the EUSS on or before 30 June 2021

- has a digital or non-digital CoA confirming the individual has made a valid application to the EUSS on or after 1 July, and is directed to the LCS
- is an asylum seeker or has an appeal pending against a determination in respect of their asylum claim
- has an ongoing immigration application or appeal with the Home Office
- has their documents with the Home Office
- has been granted permission to rent by the Home Office.

The LCS can confirm if Home Office records show that the applicant has lawful status and, if appropriate, will issue a Positive Right to Rent Notice (a 'yes' response).

The statutory excuse will continue from the expiry date of an existing tenant's permission for a further period of up to 28 days to enable the landlord to obtain a 'yes' response from the Landlord Checking Service. This '28-day period' does not apply to checks carried out before the start of a tenancy. In such circumstances, the landlord should delay entering into a tenancy agreement with the individual until they have received a 'yes' response from the Landlord Checking Service.

For individuals who make an application to the EUSS on or after 1 July 2021, please refer to the Right to rent Checks: Landlord's guide for further information.

How: A landlord must request verification of right to rent from the Home Office's Landlord Checking Service using 'Request a Home Office right to rent check' on GOV.UK.

This is a different process to the online checking services described in Conducting a Home Office online right to rent check.

The Landlord Checking Service will respond to the landlord with a clear 'yes' or 'no' response within two working days. This will only be sent to the landlord by the Landlord Checking Service and will contain a unique reference number.

The information provided by the Landlord Checking Service will clearly set out whether a check will be required, and if so, when.

If the Landlord Checking Service has not considered the request within two working days, an automatic response will be sent to the landlord informing them that they can let their property to the prospective tenant. Any response from the Home Office Landlord Checking Service must be retained in order to maintain a statutory excuse against liability for a civil penalty.

Please note that the Landlord Checking Service is for the use of landlords and agents only.

Eligibility Periods

If presented with a document in List B, the landlord will establish a statutory excuse for a limited time period, "the eligibility period". The eligibility period will be the longest of the following:

- one year, beginning with the date on which the checks were last made
- until the period of the person's permission to be in the UK expires

- until the expiry of the validity period of the immigration document which grants to the holder a right to enter or remain in the UK for such period as the document may authorise.

To maintain a statutory excuse against payment of a penalty, a check should be conducted before the expiry of the eligibility period. At this point, landlords will need to conduct follow-up checks.

A further check can take place at any time, such as when a tenant tells the landlord that they have extended their immigration permission and by undertaking a further check their eligibility period may be extended.

Nationals of an EEA country, Australia, Canada, Japan, New Zealand, Singapore, South Korea or the USA who are visitors to the UK

Nationals of the EEA, Australia, Canada, Japan, New Zealand, Singapore, South Korea and the USA, who enter the UK as a visitor are able to use eGates at UK airports, seaports and Brussels and Paris Eurostar terminals. Those individuals wishing to do so must hold a biometric passport. Those individuals not in possession of a biometric passport will be processed by a Border Force Officer at the manned passport control point. In either scenario they will not have their passports endorsed with a stamp. Those who are processed by an officer will be informed of their permission to enter/remain and its associated conditions verbally.

Those coming to live in the UK for more than six months will have a visa in their passport and will collect their biometric residence permit post-arrival or will have been issued with an eVisa.

Those entering the UK as a visitor or business visitor will be granted automatic Permission to Enter for a maximum period of up to six months and will not have a document to evidence their lawful status in the UK. These nationals are, therefore, permitted to use a combination of their passport, plus evidence of entry to the UK to demonstrate a right to rent. Although, by exception, some individuals may receive a stamp in their passport which will evidence their date of entry to the UK. In these circumstances, a landlord can conduct a right to rent check by checking their passport and the endorsement in it.

Acceptable evidence of entry to the UK may include (but is not restricted to) one of the following, or a combination of:

- An original or copy of a boarding pass or electronic boarding pass for air, rail or sea travel to the UK, establishing the date of arrival in the UK in the last six months
- An original or copy airline, rail or boat ticket or e-ticket establishing the date of arrival in the UK in the last six months
- Any type of booking confirmation (original or copy) for air, rail or sea travel to the UK establishing the date of arrival in the UK in the last six months

- Any other documentary evidence which establishes the date of arrival in the UK in the last six months.

Under the Immigration Rules, upon arrival, non-visa nationals can be granted Permission to Enter the UK for up to six months from the date of their arrival. However, a different legislative framework governs the Right to Rent Scheme, purposely designed to minimise the frequency of checks a landlord needs to undertake. Landlords who have correctly conducted a right to rent check on visitors of these nationalities will obtain a statutory excuse for 12 months and must schedule a follow-up check before the end of the 12 month eligibility period if the individual is still occupying the accommodation.

Follow-up checks

A follow-up check should be undertaken before this time-limited statutory excuse expires in order to maintain a statutory excuse against a civil penalty.

The landlord should ask the occupier for proof of their continued right to rent.

If the occupier cannot produce any documents (physical or digital), but claims to have reasons for this, the landlord must request a right to rent check from the LCS.

If positive confirmation is received, by way of a 'yes' response from the Landlord Checking Service, the response will also establish a statutory excuse, and will clearly detail if and when a follow-up check is required and must be retained as evidence.

If the Landlord Checking Service informs the landlord that the occupier no longer has a right to rent, by way of a 'no' response, the landlord must make a report to the Home Office in order to maintain a statutory excuse, as detailed below. If they do not do this, their statutory excuse will expire, and they will knowingly be letting to a disqualified person.

If the occupier cannot produce evidence of their continued right to rent, the landlord must make a report to the Home Office in order to maintain their statutory excuse, which will provide a defence against liability for a civil penalty.

Making a report to the Home Office

If the follow-up checks indicate that an occupier no longer has the right to rent, or an existing occupier or occupiers are not co-operating, the landlord must make a report to the Home Office using the online form. The landlord must make the report as soon as reasonably practicable after discovering that the occupier no longer has a right to rent, or they are faced with non-compliance and before their existing time-limited statutory excuse expires.

Copies of documents (physical or digital) should not be submitted when making a report, but should be retained as set out in initial right to rent checks to satisfy a right to rent check and for future enquiries.

Making a report in the specified way will generate a unique reference number. Landlords must ensure they keep a copy of that number as evidence of their continued statutory excuse. All copies of documents taken should be kept for the duration of the tenancy agreement and for at least one year thereafter.

Making a report to the Home Office maintains a statutory excuse where the eligibility period in respect of an occupier has expired. A statutory excuse can only be established initially by conducting checks before the beginning of the tenancy.

A landlord who has failed to conduct the requisite checks before the beginning of a tenancy cannot establish a statutory excuse by making a report to the Home Office at a later date.

6: An overview of how the civil penalty is administered

If a landlord is found letting to a person who has no right to rent, the landlord or property owner may be issued with a Referral Notice informing them that the details of their case are being referred to officials for consideration of liability for a civil penalty. The notice will also detail how the case will be considered and the possible decision outcomes.

The landlord will then be sent an Information Request giving them the opportunity to present further information and evidence which will inform the decision on liability and, if appropriate, the level of the penalty.

If a landlord is then found liable for a civil penalty, they will be issued with a Civil Penalty Notice. This notice will include details of why the Home Office considers the landlord to be liable, the amount of the penalty and how to pay it, and information on how a landlord may pay the penalty or object to the penalty. If a landlord is not found liable for a civil penalty, they will be issued with a No Action Notice which makes clear that no further action will take place under the Scheme on this occasion.

In the event that the Home Office visits a property and the landlord is able to demonstrate to officials at this time that they have a statutory excuse in respect of the occupiers identified as having no right to rent, the landlord will not be served with a Referral Notice in respect of these occupiers. Instead, they will be issued with a No Action Notice indicating that no action will be taken on this occasion under the Scheme and the case will be closed. This notice will not be taken into account for the purposes of calculating penalty amounts in the event of any future breach of the Scheme.

Objecting to the penalty

If the landlord receives a Civil Penalty Notice from the Home Office, they can object in writing within 28 days of the due date specified in the notice. Details of the reason for objecting must be supplied along with evidence supporting one or more of the acceptable grounds for objection as set out on the Objection Form.

The Home Office will send an Objection Outcome Notice if the penalty is to be cancelled, reduced or maintained. If the penalty is to be increased, a new Civil Penalty Notice will be sent. Each of these notices will include a Statement of Case.

Appealing against the penalty

Upon receiving an Objection Outcome Notice informing the landlord that they remain liable for a civil penalty of the same or a reduced amount, the landlord may then appeal to the Courts if they are not satisfied with the Secretary of State's considerations. The landlord must appeal to the Courts within 28 days of either the date specified in the new Civil Penalty

Notice or the date specified on the Objection Outcome Notice. The deadline for appeal will be specified on the new Civil Penalty Notice or Objection Outcome Notice.

If the landlord does not receive an Objection Outcome Notice within the 28-day period, an appeal must be brought within 28 days of the date by which the Home Office should have replied.

A landlord may only appeal on the same grounds on which they could object to a penalty as set out in objecting to the penalty.

Paying the penalty

The landlord must pay the civil penalty by the date specified in the Civil Penalty Notice or the Objection Outcome Notice maintaining or reducing the penalty. This will be at least 28 days after the date on which the notice is given.

A landlord may request permission from the Home Office to pay their civil penalty by instalments. In such cases, landlords should provide the full details of their inability to pay the full penalty in one payment.

There is also a fast payment option that gives a landlord the opportunity to pay a 30% lower amount if payment is received in full within 21 days of the Civil Penalty Notice being issued. This option is only available for landlords in receipt of their first penalty under the Scheme. A fast payment option may not be paid by instalments.

If the landlord does not pay the penalty in full or set up and comply with payment by instalments, or object or appeal by the deadlines given in the Civil Penalty Notice or Objection Outcome Notices, the Home Office will start action to recover the civil penalty.

7: Determining liability and calculating the penalty amount

When considering a landlord's liability for a civil penalty, the Home Office will follow the framework set out below. It comprises three stages of consideration and explains how the level of breach is to be calculated.

Stage 1: Determining Liability

Where a landlord has been found to have authorised occupation of property by someone with no right to rent, do they have a statutory excuse? If the answer is yes, the Home Office issues a No Action Notice. If the answer is no, proceed to stage 2.

Stage 2: Determining the level of the breach

Has the landlord breached the Scheme within the past three years? If the answer is no proceed to Stage 3, level 1. If the landlord has breached the Scheme in the past three years, the case will proceed to Stage 3, level 2.

Stage 3: Calculating the penalty amount

Calculating the penalty amount comprises of two levels. Level 1 (first breach) maximum penalty:

- Category A (lodgers in a private household) £80
- Category B (occupiers in rented accommodation) £1,000

Level 2 (subsequent breach) maximum penalty:

- Category A (lodgers in a private household) £500
- Category B (occupiers in rented accommodation) £3,000

A penalty may be imposed in relation to each person who requires a right to rent but does not have one, who is found to have been authorised to occupy the premises under a residential tenancy agreement.

If a landlord has been found to have authorised occupation of property by someone with no right to rent, the Home Office will use the decision process below to first determine liability of the landlord, and then in the case that the landlord is found liable, calculate the final penalty amount per disqualified person. The penalty amount is based on whether the landlord has previously breached the Scheme as well as the nature of the breach.

Does the landlord have a statutory excuse?

In stage 1 of our consideration, we will determine if the landlord has a statutory excuse against liability for a civil penalty. A landlord will have a statutory excuse if they have correctly carried out the prescribed right to rent checks before entering into a tenancy agreement with the tenant(s).

Where a tenant has a time-limited right to rent, and the landlord has, therefore, established a time-limited statutory excuse, they are required to conduct a follow-up right to rent check to retain this excuse.

It is the landlord's responsibility to demonstrate that they have complied with the requirements to establish and, where necessary, retain their statutory excuse.

A landlord will not have a statutory excuse if:

- They cannot provide evidence of having conducted the prescribed right to rent checks before entering into a tenancy agreement
- They have rented to someone when it is reasonably apparent that they are not the holder of the document they present (either in person or digitally via a check carried out using an IDSP), or the person named and shown in the Home Office right to rent check (i.e. that person is an imposter)
- They have conducted a manual check and it is reasonably apparent that the document is false (the falsity would be considered to be 'reasonably apparent' if an individual who is untrained in the identification of false documents)
- They have used the services of an IDSP, but it is reasonably apparent that the result of the check sent to the landlord is incorrect or that the document which they are relying upon is not genuine, or that, for some other reason, in the circumstances, the landlord could not reasonably have believed the IDSP had carried out the prescribed checking requirements
- They have conducted a Home Office online check and it is reasonably apparent that the website they have used to do that check is not the official GOV.UK Home Office online right to rent checking service
- They have attempted to conduct a Home Office online check but have not accessed the landlord 'View a tenant's right to rent in England' part of the service, they have only viewed information online that has been provided directly to the migrant
- They have rented to someone when it is clear from the right to rent check that the person does not have valid right to rent in England
- The statutory excuse was time-limited and has expired.

If we are satisfied that a landlord has a statutory excuse, the landlord will not be liable for a civil penalty.

But if we consider that the landlord has not established a statutory excuse, we will consider the level of their civil penalty. Please see stage 2: determining the level of breach.

Stage 1: Determining Liability

In stage 1 of the consideration process, the Home Office will determine if a landlord has a statutory excuse against liability for a civil penalty. A landlord will have a statutory excuse if they:

- have correctly carried out the prescribed right to rent checks using acceptable documents in List A or List B or
- used Home Office online checking service and
- made any necessary reports.

Where an occupier has a time-limited right to rent and a landlord has therefore established a time-limited statutory excuse, they will need to have conducted follow-up document checks to maintain a statutory excuse. If the follow-up checks indicate that the occupier no longer has the right to rent, the landlord will need to have made a report to the Home Office. If an agent is performing the check, they will need to have informed the landlord of the outcome in writing.

Where the Home Office determines that a landlord has a statutory excuse, the landlord will not be liable for a penalty in respect of that occupier. However, where the Home Office considers that a landlord does not have a statutory excuse, the landlord will be liable for a penalty and the decision will proceed to stage 2.

Stage 2: Determining the level of breach

In stage 2, the Home Office will consider whether a landlord has previously been in breach of the Scheme, as this will affect the penalty amount issued. If in the past three years, a landlord has been issued with a Civil Penalty Notice under the Scheme and exhausted all their objection and appeal rights, the landlord will be subject to Level 2 penalty amounts of either £500 or £3,000 per occupier identified as a disqualified person. If a landlord has not previously been in breach of the Scheme, they will be subject to the lower penalty amounts specified under Level 1, £80 or £1,000 per occupier identified as a disqualified person.

Stage 3: Calculating the final penalty amount

In stage 3, the Home Office will consider the nature of the breach to determine the final penalty amount per occupier. If the breach is in relation to a lodger in a private household, the landlord will be subject to the relevant Category A penalty amount (£80 or £500). If the breach is in relation to an occupier in private rental accommodation, the landlord will be subject to the relevant Category B penalty amount (£1,000 or £3,000).

9: Annex B: Temporary COVID-19 adjusted right to rent checks (the following guidance was issued to landlords)

To support social distancing measures during the global pandemic, temporary changes were made to the way in which landlords carried out right to rent checks between 30 March 2020 and 30 September 2022 (inclusive).

Landlords will maintain a defence against a civil penalty if the check they have undertaken during this period was done in the prescribed manner or as set out in the COVID-19 adjusted checks guidance on GOV.UK. However, any individual identified with no lawful immigration status in the UK may be liable to enforcement action.

COVID-19 Adjusted Guidance

Landlords should:

- ask the prospective or current tenant to submit a scanned copy or a photo of their original documents via email or using a mobile app
- arrange a video call with the tenant – ask them to hold up the original documents to the camera and check them against the digital copy of the documents record date you made the check and mark it as “adjusted check undertaken on [insert date] due to COVID-19”
- if the tenant has a current Biometric Residence Permit or Biometric Residence Card or has been granted status under the EU Settlement Scheme or the points-based immigration system, landlords are required use the Home Office online service while doing a video call – the tenant must give the landlord permission to view their details.

Checks continue to be necessary and you must continue to check the prescribed documents set out in the Landlord’s guide to right to rent checks or use the Home Office online service. It remains an offence to knowingly rent to anyone who does not have the right to rent in England.

End of COVID-19 Adjusted Checks

COVID-19 adjusted checks end on 30 September 2022. From 1 October 2022, landlords are required to carry out right to rent checks as set out in legislation and guidance. Checks should now be carried out either face to face with physical document checks, using the services of an IDSP or using the Home Office online service.

Retrospective checks

Landlords do not need to carry out retrospective checks on those who had a COVID-19 adjusted check between 30 March 2020 and 30 September 2022 (inclusive). This reflects the length of time the adjusted checks have been in place and supports business during this difficult time.

Landlords will maintain a defence against a civil penalty if the check you have undertaken during this period was done in the prescribed manner or as set out in the COVID-19 adjusted checks guidance. However, any individual identified with no lawful immigration status in the UK may be liable to enforcement action.
