LABOUR DISPUTES IN QATAR

Any member of the public seeking British Embassy assistance in a labour dispute should contact the Labour Department of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs. The Labour Law of Qatar provides a body of laws and regulations outlining the legal rights, restrictions and obligations of workers, employers and workers committees. They offer a conciliation service aimed at solving difficulties without recourse to the law. They speak English and have access to legal advisers.

The British Embassy cannot offer legal advice on employment disputes. We can provide a list of Local lawyers who you may seek advice or assistance from at your own cost.

After investigating a worker's complaint, the Labour Department will try its best to resolve the issue without referring it to court. The department will contact the employer and request for proofs and documents if necessary

The National Human Rights Committee (NHRC), which is also available to deal with human rights violations. For details, visit www.nhrc-qa.org.

The Labour disputes department is located in the Industrial Area, Street No.13. They can be contacted on the following number or you can visit the department personally.

A full of the Labour Law can be found on the Hukoomi E Government Portal :
