

It is absolutely essential to carry out a national geological survey before proceeding any further with this scheme. I have been a supporter of nuclear power for many, many years having worked in the nuclear industry for 40 years. However, like many other previous supporters, the deceit and duplicity of DECC has made me strongly anti-nuclear. I never thought that this could ever happen. What is the point of arranging a consultation and when the conclusion does not agree with your view, you simply re-open the consultation, eliminating the one body which objected to your proposals in the first place? This means that your consultations are merely cosmetic and meaningless, without any value.

G P Snape