INTRODUCTION

How To Use This Guide

This booklet has been designed to complement the information provided during the Housing, the Options briefings delivered to those due to leave the Service.

Making decisions about your future housing is a very complex business and should never be looked at in isolation from your future employment. Whether you intend to rent or buy you will need to ensure that your housing arrangements fit in with your work plans and, where appropriate, with the needs of your family.

This booklet is about options. Many of you will have given considerable thought to your plans when you leave. During the course of this one-day Resettlement Briefing we will ask you to review your plans in the light of the information you have been given. Very often much of what you hear will be repetition of the facts that you already have at your disposal. However, our experience suggests that even the best informed of you will find it useful to sit down for the day and think about your options.

Please note. We aim to keep this booklet up to date by reviewing its contents regularly. In fact, if you attended a course three months later there would inevitably be changes in the information we presented to you. If you experience difficulties in using the information or believe it to be inaccurate do let us know. From your observations, we can make amendments that may help your successors.

THE JOINT SERVICE HOUSING ADVICE OFFICE

Our Role

The Joint Service Housing Advice Office (JSHAO) mission statement is: To provide Specialist Housing Information and Advice to encourage all Service personnel (and their dependants) to consider their civilian housing options and to assist in their transition to civilian life. Where possible, to place Service persons and their dependants, in suitable accommodation and to assist Ex-Service personnel still occupying Service Accommodation.

The JSHAO Executes Its Role By:

- Providing a Housing Advice Line
- Providing one on one support and guidance to Service personnel and their dependants
- Delivering, on average, fifty “Housing, the Options” briefings through Regional Resettlement Centres in the UK and Army Education Centres overseas for Service personnel and their dependants who are mainly within their last two years of service (Tasked by TESR Resettlement)
- On request, delivering a series of “Housing Solutions” briefings to Service personnel at Unit level prior to the resettlement phase
- Managing the provision of the Single Persons Accommodation Centre for the Ex- Services
- Managing the MoD Referral Scheme by maintaining close links to UK social housing providers
- Maintaining a fundamental awareness of products and services that are available to Service personnel from the public, private and charitable sectors
- Producing Housing Matters Magazine which has a 10,000 copy worldwide monthly distribution within the Service community
- Managing and maintaining a comprehensive Website (www.gov.uk/housing-for-service-personnel-and-families)

LOCAL AUTHORITY HOUSING IN GREAT BRITAIN

Local Authority housing is in great demand and there may be difficulties in obtaining the type of house or flat you would like. Even if you are already registered with a local authority and are on their housing needs register, this does not guarantee they will have accommodation to offer when you leave the Service. All local authorities are aware of the problems facing Service personnel about to be discharged and will do their best to help. However, they are not always able to offer you somewhere to live.

Applying for Local Authority Housing

Local Authorities have some leeway in how they choose to implement Government Housing policy regulations and guidelines. The result is that housing allocations policy, and the way in which applications are prioritised, can vary from one authority to another.

Am I Eligible?

Generally you are able to apply to any Housing Needs Register. If the local authority look to award priority then they will consider the points below:

- your connection with the area*
- your need for rehousing
- your financial circumstances

Local Connection

While you can apply to any local authority, you stand a better chance of being housed if you (or your partner):

- have lived in the area prior to enlistment (or marriage) or
- have close family ties with the area (parents, brothers & sisters etc.) or
- have permanent civilian employment in the area (or at least a guarantee of it) or
- have been posted there or have previously been posted there

Housing Need

Because of the great shortage of property, many local authorities will only be able to

Local Authority Information

Each Local Authority has their own website that details their individual policies. Most also have their application form available on line.

The easiest way to access the Local Authority that you are interested in is through : www.xxxx.gov.uk (where xxxx is the county, city or area that you re interested in).

provide accommodation if you have an urgent need of housing. As a result, local authorities will generally not consider an application from you in earnest until at least your last 6 months of service. If applications are accepted earlier, you are normally put on a pending list and your application will be activated once you have your Certificate of Cessation (see Appendix 5.), from DIO. But be aware, a growing number of councils will only look at applications from service personnel in their final 28 days of service, or in extreme circumstances, 28 days before the 'Legal Eviction Date'.

Financial Circumstances

The larger your terminal gratuity and/or savings, the more likely a council is to suggest other solutions to your housing problem. This could mean low cost, or outright, home ownership. Some local authorities actually state in their policies that they will not accept people onto their lists who have more than a specified amount of capital. Also, if you own a home, it is unlikely you would qualify for local authority accommodation unless there was a good reason for you needing rented accommodation (e.g. if you face repossession due to circumstances beyond your control).

Registration Procedure

You can apply to your local authority as early as possible. If your date of discharge is known when you register, advise the housing department accordingly. Keep them informed of any changes in your circumstances.

* Since August 2012, in England only, a local authorities can no longer refuse access to their housing needs register because of no local connection. (see page 13)

Due to the high demand for properties, the majority of Housing Needs Register are oversubscribed. Once accepted as an applicant, you will be given a priority and allocated a points score or 'band'.

If you are additionally applying to housing associations, you will need to make separate applications. However, in some parts of the country, you will find "COMMON REGISTERS" where you only need to complete one application form to put your name down with the council and housing associations in the area.

You will have to renew the registration at regular intervals - either by responding to letters sent by the local authority or by you making a point of verifying this yourself. If you do not, your application is likely to be cancelled.

The 6 Months Point

Six months before your discharge date, you should advise the local authority of the forthcoming need for assistance. At this time you can request a copy of your Certificate of Cessation which should be forwarded to the housing department and this should increase your priority on the register.

28 Days Before Discharge

If you have not had any indication that you will be offered a property, or if the council insists you must move back to their area before considering your application in earnest, then you should apply as homeless. See Homeless Chapter for further details.

Single People & Couples Without Dependents

By and large, local authorities do not cater for households without children and are likely to give you low priority despite your impending homelessness. It's not all bad news as some local authorities do have accommodation which may be suitable to your needs. It's always worthwhile asking.

Even if the local authority themselves cannot help, they may be able to help you to get a housing association flat by nominating you from the waiting list or, in some instances, could help you get into the private sector if they operate a "Bond Guarantee Scheme."

Special Needs Housing

If you are being medically discharged or a member of your family has a serious physical or mental disability, voluntary organisations are often able to provide information about specialist housing. Often local authorities or housing associations contact such organisation when they have specialist accommodation available. They may be prepared to consider families who would not normally meet their lettings criteria to enable the property to be used effectively.

Rejecting Offered Accommodation

Before rejecting an offer of local authority housing, think very carefully. Some local authorities will remove your name from their register if you turn down a property. If you feel that the property is unsuitable for you or your families' requirements you need to write to the Housing Department requesting "a review of the offer under the Housing Act 1996". This must be done within 21 days of the original offer. When you receive the acknowledgement of this, check that the recipient of your request for a review is not the person who made the original offer. If the review finds in your favour, a new offer will be made. If not, you can still accept the original offer.

Choice Based Letting

Many local authorities now operate Choice Based Letting. A list of available properties is published, and individuals on the list can "bid" on the properties that they wish to rent. The Housing Department will give you details of how the system works.

Settling in Wales

Wales is covered by the National Homelessness Strategy 2003, which states that any Service leaver with a Welsh connection will be helped to find suitable housing in the community.

In addition it states that a person who is homeless after leaving the Armed Forces will be classed as in Priority Need. See chapter on Homelessness (page 11).

Settling in Scotland

Under the provisions of the Homelessness Act 2003 (Scotland), Service leavers must be considered as having a Priority Need for housing if deemed to be vulnerable. The definition of vulnerable used is 'less able to fend for themselves'.

Scotland homelessness is considered to start at 56 days before discharge (Loss of Right of Abode) under Part II of the Housing (Scotland) Act 2003.

Local Authorities' Homeless Persons Unit will need to be satisfied that applicants are:

- Homeless
- Are in Priority Need
- Are not Intentionally Homeless; and
- Have a local connection to the area

Detailed guidance is contained in the Scottish Executive's "Code of Guidance on Homelessness", updated in October 2003. This Code provides guidance to authorities on how to interpret each of the criteria. Copies are available from Local Authority Housing Department Offices.

Settling in Northern Ireland

Social housing in Northern Ireland is managed by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (NIHE). The Executive is split into regional offices and, when making an application, you should contact the appropriate office. JSHAO or the NIHE Main Office in Belfast can give further details.

HOMELESS? KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

If you are leaving the Forces you will be faced with the prospect of having to leave your Service Accommodation. In this case you should make yourself aware of your options, especially if you are not in a position to find somewhere else to live and face being homeless.

The law governing homelessness is to be found in the Homelessness Act 2002 (England), and this law imposes duties on all local authorities to assist homeless people in some way. However, even if you are accepted as homeless, you do not have a legal right to permanent rehousing.

Under the new act, the criteria is quoted as :

Vulnerability Additional priority may be given to personnel deemed vulnerable. The majority of ex service personnel will be able to find and maintain accommodation, but some may find it more difficult and can be classed as vulnerable as a result of their service in HM Forces.

The critical test of vulnerability is “whether, when homeless, the applicant would be less able to fend for himself than an ordinary homeless person so that he would be likely to suffer injury or detriment, in circumstances where a less vulnerable person would be able to cope without harmful effects”.

In considering whether former members of the armed forces are vulnerable as a result of their time spent in the forces, a housing authority may wish to take into account the following factors:

- i. the length of time the applicant spent in the armed forces;
- ii. the type of service the applicant was engaged in (those on active service may find it more difficult to cope with civilian life);

iii. whether the applicant spent time in a military hospital (this could be an indicator of a serious health problem or of post traumatic stress);

iv. the length of time since the applicant left the armed forces, and whether he or she had been able to obtain and/or maintain accommodation during that time;

v. whether the applicant has any existing support networks, particularly by way of family or friends.

Applying for Local Authority Housing

As local authority housing is becoming a scarce resource, not everyone is able to apply for it. Each local authority in Great Britain has its own way of looking at who can go on the waiting list and what priority their applications receive.

Am I Eligible?

Generally you are able to apply to any Housing Needs Register. If the local authority look to award priority then they will consider the points below:

- your connection with the area
- your need for rehousing
- your financial circumstances

Local Connection

While you can apply to any local authority, you stand a better chance of being housed if you (or your partner):

- have lived in the area prior to enlistment (or marriage) or
- have close family ties with the area (parents, brothers & sisters etc.) or
- have permanent civilian employment in the area (or at least a guarantee of it) or
- have been posted there or have previously been posted there

What to do

As soon as you are aware that military accommodation will cease to be provided for you, you should approach your local authority to apply to go on their housing needs register.

However, if the local authority is not able to help quickly and you are likely to be homeless in the next 28 days, (for Scotland - homeless in the next 56 days), you should go to the Homeless Persons' Section of the local authority with which you have a connection. This will often be in the Housing Department.

Make sure that you tell the person you see that you are homeless, and that you are asking for help under the Homelessness Act 2002. Make it clear that you need help urgently and have not come just to put your name on the housing needs register.

Which local authority should I approach?

You should apply to the local authority with which you or your partner have a 'local connection'. If you are unsure which local authority this is, seek advice.

If you apply as homeless to a council where you have no connection, the council will refer you to a local authority where a stronger connection exists. If you have connections with more than one local authority, make it clear which one you prefer to be referred to.

It must be ascertained that the other local authority will help you before you can be referred. You must not simply be sent along there. If you have nowhere to stay while these arrangements are made with the other local authority, you must be housed temporarily.

LOCAL CONNECTION with respect to Local Authority (Council) Housing Needs Applications

There are two major changes with respect to Service Personnel or Service Veterans and the Local Connection policy as implemented by Local Authorities (Councils). Copies of the letters announcing the changes can be found on the next pages.

The first happened in December 2008. Time spent in Service Accommodations was now included in the residence of choice or employment category. Section 315 being an amendment of section 199 of the Housing and Regeneration Act 2008. This meant that a right of residence could be established and used as a local connection. 6 months in the last 12 months, or 3-years in the last 5-years, in service accommodation, being resident in an area, giving an automatic local connection.

The second happened in July 2012, though only applies to England. Essentially it means that as service personnel, you can not be excluded from any (English) Local Authority Housing Needs Register application, due to having no local connection.

Not all Local Authorities are aware of implementing this recent policy, and if you have difficulties with your application, please contact the JSHAO (Joint Service Housing Advice Office) on 01980 618925 or 94344 8925 or send e mails to aws.JSHAO@mailbox.mod.uk who will assist.

Local Connection policy still applies in the case of Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland.

To: Chief Housing Officers of Local Authorities in England

Dear Chief Housing Officer

The Allocation of Housing (Qualification Criteria for Armed Forces) (England) Regulations 2012 (SI 2012/1869)

This letter notifies local housing authorities that The Allocation of Housing (Qualification Criteria for Armed Forces) (England) Regulations 2012 will come into force on 24 August 2012.

These Regulations are made by the Secretary of State under section 160ZA(8)(b) of the Housing Act 1996, inserted by section 146 of the Localism Act 2011. Section 160ZA(8)(b) gives the Secretary of State the power to set out in regulations criteria which local housing authorities may not use to decide what classes of persons are not qualifying persons for an allocation of housing accommodation.

The Regulations ensure that, where local housing authorities decide to use a local connection requirement as a qualification criterion, they must not apply that criterion to the following persons so as to disqualify them from an allocation of social housing:

- a) those who are currently serving in the regular forces or who were serving in the regular forces at any time in the five years preceding their application for an allocation of social housing
- b) bereaved spouses or civil partners of those serving in the regular forces where (i) the bereaved spouse or civil partner has recently ceased, or will cease to be entitled, to reside in Ministry of Defence accommodation following the death of their service spouse or civil partner, and (ii) the death was wholly or partly attributable to their service
- c) existing or former members of the reserve forces who are suffering from a serious injury, illness, or disability which is wholly or partly attributable to their service

The Regulations give effect to the Housing Minister's commitment to ensure that those who serve in the regular and reserve armed forces, and their families, are not disadvantaged in their access to social housing by the requirements of their service.

The Government takes the view that a local connection criterion is likely to disadvantage those who have recently been discharged from the regular armed forces, as well as serving personnel, because of the service requirement to be mobile. For this reason, the prohibition in the Regulations extends to applications from former service personnel, where the application is made within five¹ years following discharge.

Bereaved spouses and civil partners of service personnel who are required to leave service families accommodation following the death of their spouse or partners are likely to experience similar issues to service families on discharge from the forces. The Regulations are intended therefore to protect bereaved spouses and civil partners from the time they are required to leave service families accommodation until they are able to obtain alternative settled accommodation.

The Regulations also apply to members of the reserve forces who suffer from a serious illness, injury or disability as a result of their service, recognising that they may find that their current accommodation is no longer suitable for their needs or affordable, or that they may have to move to access care or support.

The Department consulted on draft regulations earlier this year designed to prevent housing authorities from applying residency requirements to disqualify Service personnel. Following consultation, the final regulations have been extended to apply to bereaved spouses and civil partners of Service personnel and to reservists, and strengthened so that local authorities must disregard – not just residency requirements – but any local connection to their district.

The Regulations are published by the Stationery Office and are available on the OPSI website at: <http://www.legislation.gov.uk/uksi/2012/1869/contents/made>

¹ 5 years reflects guidelines issued by the local authorities associations which propose a working definition of normal residence for the purposes of establishing a local connection (see paragraph 4.1(i) to Annex 18 of the Homelessness Code of Guidance 2006).

28 November 2008

To Chief Housing Officers of all
Local Housing Authorities in England

Dear Sir or Madam

HOUSING AND REGENERATION ACT 2008: COMMENCEMENT OF SECTION 315: CIRCUMSTANCES WHEN LOCAL CONNECTION MAY BE ESTABLISHED UNDER SECTION 199 OF THE HOUSING ACT 1996

This letter notifies chief housing officers that section 315 of the Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 comes into force on 1 December 2008.

Section 315 of the Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 ("the 2008 Act") amends section 199 of the Housing Act 1996 ("the 1996 Act"). Section 199 of the 1996 Act sets out the circumstances when a person may establish a "local connection" with a district for the purposes of an application for homelessness assistance under Part 7 of the 1996 Act or an application for social housing under Part 6 of that Act.

The effect of the amendments is that someone serving in the Armed Forces will be able to establish a local connection with a district through residence of choice or employment there, in the same way as a civilian person. The amendments apply in respect of all applications for housing under Part 6, or housing assistance under Part 7 of the 1996 Act made on or after 1 December 2008.

Local authorities are reminded that, as for other applicants, serving or former members of the Armed Forces may have a local connection somewhere other than the district where they have most recently been living or working. This could include residence in an area where they had previously been posted or residence in an area prior to joining the Services. This is likely to be particularly relevant in the case of Service personnel returning from a final posting overseas.

The statutory codes of guidance on homelessness and the allocation of housing will be revised to reflect these changes, in due course.

Any inquiries regarding the changes to Part 6 of the 1996 Act (allocations) should be directed to Francis Walker. Inquiries regarding Part 7 of the 1996 Act (the homelessness legislation) should be directed to Alan Edwards.

Yours faithfully

06 JUL 2011

EVICTON OF SERVICE PERSONNEL FROM SERVICE ACCOMMODATION

I held a Service Personnel Housing Summit in May to explore ways of tackling the housing challenges faced by serving and ex-service personnel. At this meeting it was brought to my attention that members of the armed forces are being told by some local housing authorities to remain in service accommodation until they are legally evicted by the Ministry of Defence despite having a Certification of Cessation of Right to Occupy.

I am writing to remind you of the relevant sections of the statutory Homelessness Code of Guidance for Local Authorities regarding former armed forces personnel required to leave service accommodation.

As set out at paragraph 8.33 of the statutory guidance the Secretary of State considers that housing authorities should not insist upon a court order for possession for former armed forces personnel to establish that entitlement to occupy has ended. The Ministry of Defence issues a Certificate of Cessation of Entitlement to Occupy Service Living Accommodation six months before discharge. Authorities should take advantage of the six month period of notice of discharge to ensure that service personnel receive timely and comprehensive advice on the housing options available to them when they leave the armed forces. The guidance also provides that where service personnel are required to vacate service quarters the Secretary of State considers that they should not be considered to have become homeless intentionally.

Under section 182 of the Housing Act 1996 local housing authorities are required to have regard to guidance issued by the Secretary of State.

I am confident that the vast majority of areas are not treating ex-service personnel in this way but this is a timely reminder about ensuring local housing policies honour the Military Covenant.

I am sending this in parallel to the Secretary of State for Defence.

How does the local authority decide if I am homeless?

The local authority will look into your circumstances and make a homeless assessment (see below). If you have to leave your quarter before they finish their enquiries and reach a decision, they must accommodate you temporarily until they notify you, in writing, of the outcome of your homeless application.

NOTE: You are entitled to stay in Service Accommodation up until your last day of Service.

The Homeless Assessment

Under the law, the Council needs to look at the following:

- Are you unintentionally homeless or threatened with losing your home?
- Are you in priority need?
- Do you have a connection with the area?
- Is there other suitable accommodation in the area (e.g. private rental property)?

In addition, the local authority will ask you about your financial circumstances as well as other personal details.

Who is homeless?

You are homeless if:

- You/your family have nowhere you can live together.
- You have been forced to leave your home because of violence or threat of violence from someone in your family.

If you have been served with a Notice to Vacate your Service Accommodation and it is 28 days or less to the final date that you can legally occupy the quarter, you are threatened with homelessness. (56 days in Scotland).

Who is in Priority need?

The following groups of people fall into the 'priority need' category:

- Households with dependent children (either under 16 or, in certain cases, under 19 and in full-time education).
- Households that include someone who is pregnant.
- Households that are homeless because of fire, flood or similar emergency.
- Households that include someone who is elderly, handicapped or disabled.
- Households that include someone who is vulnerable due to leaving the Armed Forces (see page 11).

If you are UNINTENTIONALLY HOMELESS and fall into one of the PRIORITY GROUPS, the council has a duty to rehouse you or assist you in finding settled accommodation.

REMEMBER, even under the new legislation, if you are in good health, under state retirement age and either single or a couple without children, you are unlikely to be considered to be in Priority Need. The local authority will not have a duty to rehouse you even if you are homeless. But local authorities are legally bound to offer appropriate information, advice and assistance to help you secure settled accommodation yourself. Most local authorities may do more than this legal minimum.

Intentional Homelessness

The council you approach is under little obligation to help you if it finds you have made yourself homeless either by something you did or failed to do wilfully or negligently. Examples of things which would lead to you being classed as intentionally homeless include:

- You voluntarily give up your quarter before you are evicted.
- You refuse an offer of accommodation from the Local Authority or refuse the Local Authority's help in finding another home.
- You lose your home through your own fault (e.g. not paying rent).

NOTE: If the Local Authority decides you are 'intentionally homeless', their legal duty is to provide you with advice and assistance only. However, they may decide to accommodate you for a short time if you literally do not have anywhere else to live.

The local authority's decision

After the investigations are completed, the local authority must inform you of its decision in writing. They will:

Either

- Agree to offer temporary accommodation then an offer of permanent accommodation. You will be offered a fixed term tenancy (Introductory Tenancy, move to Assured Tenancy, providing they are a good tenant). Please note, under sections of the Localism Act, the government has given local authorities powers to now only award fixed term tenancies with the view to encourage those who can move on from Social Housing to do so.

or

- Refuse to arrange accommodation for you and give their reasons in writing.

A local authority could refuse to find accommodation under the Law for one of the following reasons:

- They decide you are not homeless or threatened with homelessness.
- They decide you are homeless but do not have a 'priority need'. (However, they must still give you advice and assistance.)

- They decide you are homeless and in 'priority need' but they say you are "intentionally homeless".

What kind of housing is provided?

If you are priority homeless, you have a legal right to be housed. Many local authorities place homeless people into emergency or temporary accommodation first. This can be Bed & Breakfast accommodation (for a maximum of 6 weeks in England if you have children), the local authority's own hostels or other temporary housing earmarked for occupation by homeless families.

Where to get independent advice

Joint Service Housing Advice Office
SHELTER
Any Citizens' Advice Bureau
Any Solicitor or Law Centre

By way of summary, refer to the following checklist if you are facing losing your quarter and are thinking about applying for social housing.

CHECKLIST

- DO try to get your name down on the Local Authority's Housing Needs Register as soon as possible. Look at other options too.
- DO seek independent advice before making an application as homeless.
- DO keep records of letters you send to and receive from the local authority, and of people you speak to etc.
- DON'T leave your married quarter before you have to, otherwise you could be classed as intentionally homeless.
- DON'T refuse offers of accommodation without thinking about the consequences.
- DON'T rely on only one source of help. Apply to as many appropriate organisations as you can.
- AND DON'T LEAVE IT TOO LATE BEFORE YOU MAKE ENQUIRIES.

OPTIONS FOR THE SINGLE SERVICE LEAVER

It is generally recognised that if you are single and have made little or no arrangement for accommodation before leaving the Service, you could find considerable difficulty. The following are suggested possible courses of action to improve your prospects.

MOD Housing Initiatives

MOD Referral Scheme

The Referral Scheme applies equally to singles as to families. Singles are eligible to apply to any area where we have nomination rights to 1 bed properties. Please see the Chapter on MoD Referrals or contact the Referrals Coordinator for more details. (Mil: 94344 8219 / Civ: 01980 618219).

Single Persons Accommodation Centre for the Ex Services (SPACES)

Set up in partnership with English Churches Housing Group and funded by the MoD, SPACES offers advice and placement with housing associations to single service leavers. Although primarily for ex-regulars with less than six years service, SPACES welcomes ALL enquiries.

SPACES is also the only route of access to The Beacon which is temporary accommodation in Richmond, North Yorkshire for Service leavers while they settle into civilian life. This fully staffed Hostel (actually high quality independent apartments) offers assistance in training, job seeking and finding appropriate permanent accommodation.

Annington Homes

The owner of the Married Quarters Estate in England & Wales, will be selling a number of surplus quarters each year and service personnel may be entitled to discounts. See Chapter for details.

Other Schemes

Home Base (London Only)

Managed by Community Housing and Therapy, in Partnership with Central and

Cecil Housing Trust, Home Base offers 6 months Assured Shorthold Tenancies to service leavers who would otherwise be homeless.

Each resident has an Action Plan which is reviewed regularly. This enables the resident and the staff to review the situation on housing need, re-training etc. Counselling sessions are also available to talk over difficulties confidentially, with a professional. This can help ease the transfer to civilian life, which can often be very stressful. Contact Joint Service Housing Advice Office for details.

The Foyer Federation

Foyers are locally based schemes, which provide affordable accommodation for young singles, usually 16 to 25 year olds, who would otherwise be homeless. Tenants are given assistance with training, seeking employment and finding more permanent accommodation. The average length of stay is 12 - 18 months. Prospective residents will be required to demonstrate that they are in housing need and are fully committed to taking part in a programme of training and preparation for employment if not currently employed.

There are approximately 100 Foyers throughout the UK, helping over 5000 young people each year. Details available on www.foyer.net

The Royal British Legion Industries Aylesford (nr Maidstone), Kent

The RBL have short stay accommodation, not normally exceeding three years, for single male service leavers at The Mountbatten Pavilion in Aylesford, Kent. The accommodation is on two floors and comprises single bedrooms with shared bathroom facilities on each floor. Weekly charges include the provision of three daily meals in the communal dining room and laundry facilities. Some accommodation is suitable for disabled personnel.

The scheme is staffed by a Welfare Officer and a Warden who covers out of hours and weekends.

Social Housing - Local Authorities & Housing Associations

Local Authority (Council) Housing
Under homelessness legislation, councils only have a duty to provide housing advice for single people under 60 and who have no major disability or health problems. You should, therefore, contact the Housing Department where you have family or previous residential connection to see if you can register an application on the normal waiting list. Note: some councils do have specific initiatives for single applicants.

Housing Associations

Housing Associations operate in many areas throughout the country and, like councils, offer a housing service to people in need. Some work very closely with the councils where they have property and re-house referrals from the local authority waiting list as well as from their own lists.

Local Authorities are obliged to provide lists of Housing Associations in the area. You should obtain this information, in particular details of any Association which may have accommodation for “non-elderly” single people.

NOTE: Your unit can formally certificate your loss of entitlement to occupy service accommodation on MoD Form 1166. Use this to support any applications you make to Councils and Housing Associations.

Low Cost and Shared Ownership Schemes

These schemes enable people on low incomes to be able to become home owners on a part buy/part rent basis. Not all Associations are involved in shared ownership and the Regional Home Buy Agent can advise you which are the best to contacts for any given area, see www.homebuy.org.uk.

Be aware that some developments are popular and therefore Housing Associations will have some form of prioritisation. Single persons are generally eligible to apply to buy one or two bedroomed properties only. For Do It Yourself Shared Ownership (DIYSO), a nomination is usually necessary through a Local Authority to the housing association funded for the scheme. Unless the Local Authority considers you a priority case, the prospects for DIYSO are not high.

Private Sector Housing

Private Rented Accommodation (Self-contained)

This is an expensive option. If you have a local connection to the area you may be able to contact your local Housing Department of the Local Authority for assistance both in accessing accommodation and for financial assistance. This may be in the form of Housing Benefit or as a Rent Bond Scheme.

Lodgings

To keep costs down, consider flat/house sharing on a self-catering basis (i.e. own bedroom but shared use of kitchen/bathroom etc.). Adverts for sharers can generally be found in the local press or newsagents’ windows.

LOCAL AUTHORITY HOUSING IN SCOTLAND

There are two main ways in which people in housing need may be housed by the Local Authority:

- joining the local authority's general Housing Needs Register and then waiting for the offer of a permanent local authority house, or registering to a Choice Based Letting (CBL) scheme and applying for vacancies.

or

- being officially assessed and declared as "homeless", in which case the local authority has to make either temporary or permanent accommodation available.

It is therefore very important to know how the local authority assesses someone's housing needs and why they give greater priority to some needs than to others. You should check this with your local authority office.

Housing for homeless people

Homelessness is something that happens to many ordinary people all over Britain. Society has for many years accepted that it must find accommodation for those people who become "homeless", as defined by Act of Parliament.

Local authorities have a legal duty to help homeless people. Firstly by interviewing them and assessing their housing situation and, secondly, by offering them temporary or permanent accommodation - provided that the applicant's circumstances warrant it, according to criteria laid down in Part II of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987 or as amended by the Homelessness etc (Scotland) Act 2003.

People presenting themselves as homeless are interviewed by skilled and experienced staff from the Council's Homeless Persons' Unit. The four main criteria, which must be satisfied by applicants, are that they:

- are homeless;
- are in priority need;

- are not intentionally homeless; and
- have a local connection to the area.

Detailed guidance is contained in The Scottish Executive's "Code of Guidance on Homelessness", updated in October 2003. This code provides guidance to Authorities as how to interpret each of these criteria. Copies are available from local authority housing department offices.

Key points to note about each of the criteria, are as follows:

Homelessness

This means the applicant and anyone who would reasonably be expected to live with them either -

- has no accommodation in the UK or elsewhere which he or she is entitled or permitted to occupy.
 - is going to be in such a homeless situation within 2 months
- or
- that it is unreasonable to expect the applicant to go on living in their present home - typically because of the threat of violence from another member of the household or because the accommodation is so sub-standard that it presents a real danger to the health of the applicant.

Priority Need

The following have a priority need for accommodation:

- a person who is pregnant or a person with whom a pregnant person resides
- a person having dependent children
- a person who is homeless or threatened with homelessness because of an emergency such as flood, fire or any other disaster or, the person is vulnerable due to:

- being a 16 or 17 year old or a young person up to and including the age of 21 who was looked after (in care) at school leaving age,
- having been discharged from any part of the regular Armed Forces of the Crown

- or for any other 'special' reason, e.g. being 'at risk' of sexual or financial exploitation, alcohol or drug abuse, domestic violence or racial harassment or having recently suffered a miscarriage.

Intentionality

The local authority must satisfy itself that the applicant did not deliberately do something or fail to do something which resulted in homelessness e.g. refusing to pay rent for no proper reason; a teenager leaving the parental home without presenting a compelling reason why he or she could not return.

Local Connection

The applicant must have a local connection with the local authority area in which he or she wants to live. You should check with the council for their particular local policy. Applicants in special circumstances are assessed on a case by case basis. This includes people fleeing domestic violence or someone who has no local connection with anywhere in the United Kingdom.

Homeless persons' assessment

Where an applicant is homeless, temporary accommodation will be secured. The local authority aims to reach a final decision on each application from a potentially homeless person within a reasonable time. People facing a homeless situation should seek legal advice where appropriate.

The assessment period for applications allows local authority staff enough time to make the necessary enquiries to verify each applicant's homeless circumstances properly. Applicants are kept regularly informed by the staff concerned on the progress being made with the assessment of their application.

Dissatisfied applicants may appeal the decision. There is a statutory right to get your decision reviewed. You will be able to find out from your local authority the procedures for appealing.

At any one time, varying numbers of homeless applicants are registered with the local authority. Many applicants do not fulfil the criteria to obtain permanent housing and are only given temporary accommodation and advice and assistance.

Homelessness can affect any type of household. Vulnerable homeless applicants may well require additional forms of support to help them through these difficult periods in their lives and the local authority's housing staff work closely with other local authority staff and all the relevant local agencies to ensure that such support is provided.

The type of accommodation used by the local authority to house homeless applicants can include - bedsit, hostels, purpose-built chalets, as well as properties leased from private landlords, occasionally bed and breakfast and designated furnished and unfurnished local authority houses and other available properties. Accommodation is provided until a decision is reached on their application. Thereafter only those who fulfil all the criteria will continue to be provided with temporary accommodation pending an offer of permanent housing. Check with your local authority on the approximate length of stay in temporary accommodation.

For households that are not going to be offered permanent housing, temporary accommodation and advice and assistance will be offered for a reasonable period to allow the household to secure alternative accommodation.

An offer of permanent accommodation will be referred to a housing association or other local landlord for rehousing. If these offers are unreasonably refused, the applicant(s) will have to vacate the temporary accommodation and secure their own accommodation, as the local authority will have fulfilled its obligation to them.

What to do if you are homeless

- Contact the local authority's Homeless Persons' Unit and any of the other agencies offering housing information and advice who will refer you to the appropriate office.
- If you are unable to secure your own accommodation, you should ask for an interview with one of the homeless persons staff as soon as possible. This can be done in person by calling into the office, or by phone.
- Attending the interview is very important. It will give you useful information and advice and should result in you knowing quickly whether you may be entitled to temporary accommodation. Written detail of your situation may be required, e.g. a letter from your current or most recent landlord, at the interview to verify your circumstances.

Local Authority housing for housing needs register applicants

The local authorities have houses and flats, general needs properties and units of sheltered housing designed for people who require a housing support worker or (warden) support.

The local authorities own and manage approximately 25% of all the housing stock in Scotland and remain the biggest provider of social rented housing.

Who can apply for Local Authority accommodation?

Anyone aged at least 16 provided he or she meets at least one of the following conditions:

- is living in the area
- works or has been offered work in the area
- wishes to move to the area to look for work
- wishes to move into the area to be near a relative or carer
- is subject to harassment and wishes to move into the area
- runs the risk of domestic violence and wishes to move into the area

- has special social or medical needs for wanting to live locally

Where and how to apply for Local Authority housing

Anyone who wishes to become a local authority house tenant must first fill in a straightforward application form. The form can be obtained by writing to, phoning or visiting the local local authority office.

Applicants will be given a leaflet that summarises the application system, allocations policy and points or assessment system. A more detailed description of the local authority's system is also available from the local authority although the information and advice given is described below in an amended form. Applicants would be well advised to study the assessment system carefully before filling in their application form.

The Local Authority's housing allocation policy and points system

Each local authority in Scotland decides the policy to be used in allocating properties and it is the responsibility of the Housing Department to implement this policy and allocate local authority housing. In most cases, a points/assessment system is used to decide which applicant on its waiting list should be offered the tenancy of any property that becomes vacant. The more points an applicant has, the greater their chance of being offered a local authority house. Although it must be borne in mind that however near the top of the waiting list an applicant is at a particular time, other applicants may subsequently receive a higher number of points or assessed to be in greater need and therefore housed prior to them. There is a balance of allocations to all categories of general needs, homeless or special case applicants. Only if there is an equality of points for the same premises will the time an applicant has been waiting be taken into account.

The importance of providing full and up to date information in the application form

It is very important for applicants to provide accurate information when filling in the application form. If an applicant is not sure whether a piece of information about their circumstances is important then the local authority's housing staff would be happy to provide advice. It is important for the form to reflect the applicant's circumstances, some of which may be of a personal nature, but all applicants are assured of confidentiality.

Moreover, if applicants remember something they forgot to put on the form after they have submitted it, or if their circumstances change as time goes by, they should let the local authority's housing staff know, in writing, as soon as possible. This will ensure that their application form can be amended and the points total adjusted accordingly.

What happens after the Local Authority has got the application?

The local authority's housing staff go through the form carefully, ensuring eligibility and then points are awarded (if a points system is used) according to each aspect of housing need.

Procedures vary between local authorities. You should ask about the local process, how you will be kept informed of progress, the possibility of a home visit, order of priority how your place may move up and down on the list assuming it is not the date order system that is being used.

How many houses will an applicant be offered?

An applicant will normally be made a maximum number of three offers. (You should check with your local authority the number of offers that will be made to you.) The second offer is only made after refusal of the first etc. If the maximum number of offers have been made and the refusals are considered unreasonable, the local authority may not make another offer for at least twelve months after the date of the applicant's final refusal.

How long will an application be held on the Register?

Check with the local authority what the local policy is. In many areas applications are only held on the register for one year unless the applicant completes and returns an updating form sent out at that time which confirms that he/she still wishes to remain on the register. A reminder is sent by the local authority after a period of time but if no reply is received soon thereafter, the application will be withdrawn.

Notifying the Local Authority of changes of address, or other circumstances

It is very important, therefore, that applicants tell the local authority if they change address after they have submitted their application form. Otherwise there is a danger that the applicant may never receive the letters from the local authority. Their name will be removed from the list if no contact is made with the local authority's housing staff. It is in the applicant's best interest to maintain regular contact with housing staff and notify them as soon as possible of any changes in their circumstances.

REGISTERED SOCIAL LANDLORDS

Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) are not-for-profit housing organisations that are registered with, and regulated by, the Homes & Community Agency (HCA). The most common form of RSL are Housing Associations.

What Are Housing Associations?

Housing Associations vary in size but share the common aim of providing affordable, good quality homes for rent and sale.

Housing Associations provide self-contained flats and houses (but also some shared accommodation) for single people, couples and families in housing need. In recent years, associations have become the main providers of new social housing and so present a significant alternative to local authority housing.

There are over 2,000 Housing Associations operating in the UK. The accommodation offered will be of at least similar standard to local authority housing and, as with this housing, will be appropriate to your needs (i.e. one bedroomed properties for single people & couples etc.). Rents tend to be slightly higher than that for a similar local authority property, but still significantly less than in the private sector. Many associations are small and have a limited turnover (i.e. few vacancies per year) and even the larger ones often have long waiting lists.

How Do Housing Associations Find Tenants?

You can apply directly to go onto an association's waiting list. However, in areas of high demand, some associations may close their lists from time to time.

- You can apply via the local authority. Associations fill many of their vacancies with "nominations" from their local councils. In some parts of the country, especially London and the SouthEast, many associations do not keep waiting lists and, instead, contact the local authority when they have vacancies.

- Associations will also take referrals from other agencies like Social Services, Welfare Organisations or, in some instances, even the MOD.

You will need to complete a separate application form for each association that takes direct applications in the area you wish to settle. However, some local authorities have now set up "common registers" with housing associations, which means you only need to fill out one application form to register with most of the social landlords in the area.

Which Housing Associations Work Where?

If you want addresses and telephone numbers of housing associations in any particular local authority area in Great Britain, check out the Local Authority web site, look under 'Housing Associations'. In this booklet you will also find a list of some of the biggest associations in the country and an indication of where they have properties. Some of these associations do help Service Leavers in some way.

Remember that associations that give SPECIAL PRIORITY to ex-regulars are in the minority but these three provide housing exclusively for ex-regulars.

Haig Homes

Haig Homes was established in 1928 as a housing trust and as a lasting memorial to Field Marshal Earl Haig, who worked ceaselessly to highlight and solve the problems of ex-service people and their families.

Over 350 homes were built before the Second World War, another 450 at its conclusion; this has since increased to over 1300 homes in 42 locations. Tenancies are allocated exclusively to ex-servicemen and women according to their housing need. Accommodation consists of 1 to 4 bedroomed flats, houses and maisonettes.

Anyone who has served in the Armed Forces or their widowed partners can apply.

For further details - see Appendix 1.

Lancaster War Memorial Village

This charity owns 78 houses and 10 flats on the outskirts of Lancaster. The properties have been leased to Northern Counties Housing Association who give priority to ex-regulars and their families who apply for accommodation in the Village. Ideally applicants should have a connection with Lancaster or the North West.

HOUSING ASSOCIATION - RENTED HOUSING IN SCOTLAND

There are around 200 housing associations and housing co-operatives in Scotland registered with Communities Scotland. Registered housing associations are, with a few exceptions, non-profit making friendly societies run by professional staff, but controlled by voluntary management committees. Housing associations get grants from the Government's national housing agency - Communities Scotland - towards the costs of building homes for rent or shared ownership.

It is important to recognise that nowadays housing associations are the main providers of new and affordable housing opportunities for local people in housing need, since government policy has made it financially unattractive for councils to build new homes.

Each housing association operates a housing register and some cater for particular client groups. At present a new tenant of a housing association does not necessarily have the statutory right to buy. It is important to remember this because if you are on the council register you could be allocated a housing association property. This is because most housing associations have an agreement with the local council to allocate an agreed number of houses to applicants on the council register. However, the agreement only gives the council the right to suggest names of applicants - the council has no rights over to whom the association decides to allocate its houses.

Meantime if you are interested in getting a housing association tenancy you should apply directly to the housing associations in the area in which you want to live.

You can get a directory of all Scottish housing associations from Communities Scotland.

You should not hesitate to ask housing association staff for further information and advice if it is required. Detailed written information is available, but staff are happy to discuss any questions you may have.

Rents for housing association houses are generally somewhat higher than Council house rents. Rent levels for similar size properties, however, vary according to certain factors, including the remoteness of the location and the lack of services in the area and/or the amenities within the particular property.

In Appendix 2 you will find a list of the larger associations in Scotland. This list is not exhaustive and most of the associations listed own between 600-1000 properties and cater for a wide range of groups from families to the elderly.

Remember that associations which give SPECIAL PRIORITY to ex regulars are in the minority but below you can find details of some which do have a Service connection.

Scottish Veterans' Garden City Association

The SVGCA was formed in 1915 with the aim of providing low cost accommodation for ex-Service and Merchant Navy personnel. Personnel being medically discharged are given priority - providing their "disability" is a permanent condition. The Association has approximately 600 houses in districts throughout Scotland (the majority of which are in the Forth and Clyde Valleys). All the properties have gardens.

THE MOD REFERRAL SCHEME

In the early 1990s, the MOD established a Scheme to re-house Service Leavers through nomination rights originally acquired when surplus MOD properties were sold to Housing Associations. However, because these rights have now ended, the Scheme is wholly dependent on the goodwill of Housing Associations, whose properties are not specifically intended for, nor do they belong to, the JSHAO. The Scheme is reliant on Housing Associations requesting referrals for vacant properties but applicants may also be referred to Housing Association waiting lists through this Scheme.

Unlike Local Authority policies, the Scheme is beneficial because it does not demand that you have a local connection with the area for which you are applying. You may apply for a (reasonable) number of areas by listing the locations or counties where you would like to live. A member of the team will then get in contact to discuss the options available in those areas. You are not restricted by where you now live, where your family live, or where you will work, so the Scheme is particularly beneficial for those struggling with the local connection policy.

Single Service Leavers and couples without children may also find it difficult to access housing provided by the Council. On the MOD Referral Scheme, singles and couples are just as likely to be housed as families because applicants are chosen by their suitability for the type of property offered by the Housing Association. The JSHAO and the MOD Referral Scheme have no housing stock, no internal connections with Local Authorities and unfortunately there is no guarantee that applicants will be housed through the Scheme. We cannot estimate how many offers we might receive, when we will receive them or where the properties will be located. This means that while nothing may be available, or suitable to your needs, in your area of choice, it is equally possible that, for example, a number of one bed flats may become available which would only be suitable for singles or couples.

Furthermore, some Housing Associations do not require deposits and, although rents are slightly higher than Council rents, they are considerably lower than private rentals. Furthermore, most Associations grant Assured Tenancies, allowing tenants to remain in the property as long as they wish, provided they adhere to the terms of their tenancy agreement.

Nevertheless, all applicants are strongly advised to contact their Local Authority and consider alternative housing options, in addition to applying for the Scheme, in order to maximise the chances of being housed. The Scheme attempts to provide another route into Social Housing, not replace such actions as directly contacting Local Authorities.

Service Leavers with families and separated spouses with children may also wish to contact the Services Cotswold Centre, which offers temporary accommodation. Information, advice and hostel accommodation is also available from the Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Families Association (SSAFA) Forces Help. Single Service Leavers should contact SPACES (Single Persons Accommodation Centre for the Ex-Services), who may also be able to help. Details for these Associations can be found on our website.

Additionally, for those who would benefit from adapted and sheltered (both supported and unsupported) accommodation, this type of housing is accessible through the Scheme. Please contact the Scheme Coordinator for more information.

Eligibility

To be eligible for the MOD Referral Scheme, applicants must be Armed Forces personnel within six months of their discharge date and currently occupying Service Accommodation. Applications for the Scheme can be accepted from Service Leavers, married or single, and from Separated spouses living in married quarters or hostel accommodation provided by SSAFA Forces Help and the Services Cotswold Centre. It is important to note that while personnel in Single Living Accommodation (SLA) are eligible until six months post-exit date, those in Service Families Accommodation (SFA) are eligible until they leave that Service property.

Please do not apply if you are Ex-Service or Single and beyond the six months after your exit date. If you own or part-own a property or are privately renting, you will not be considered for housing through the Scheme. Similarly, if you have sufficient capital to buy a property you are unlikely to be housed. Pensions and expected gratuities will also be taken into account when processing your application.

The Application And Referral Process

If you are eligible, you will need to complete an application form. You will find the form and an application checklist in Appendix 4, at the back of this book. Alternatively, the form can be downloaded from the JSHAO website, or if you require it to be sent to your postal address, please contact the office.

You need to include evidence of the date on which you are required to leave your Service Accommodation. Please consult the application checklist for the accompanying documentation required.

Your application will be acknowledged in writing and you will be added to our database for consideration when properties are offered to us.

We assess each property offer by its appropriate allocation to a certain family size and we consider applicants who have that location as an area of choice. Applicants are then placed by priority, starting with Medical discharges, followed by normal Service Leavers, Non- extenders and PVRs, then irregular occupants and separated spouses. We then contact the most eligible and highly prioritised applicant and forward their details to the Housing Association.

Please be aware that applicants are restricted to ONE offer through the scheme.

All completed application forms should be returned to:
MOD Referral Scheme, JSHAO, Building 183,
Trenchard Lines, Upavon, Wiltshire.
SN9 6BE Tel: 01980 618219 or
Upavon Military: (94344) 8219

ALL applications will be acknowledged in writing, whether successful or unsuccessful. Please contact the JSHAO if you have not received a letter within fourteen days.

Please consult the checklist (Appendix 4) before you send the JSHAO your application form.

AFFORDABLE HOUSING

This chapter deals with Government sponsored schemes, there are also several commercial schemes available within the Private Sector. Even if you are not in a position to buy a property as you leave the Services, there are several ways open to you becoming a homeowner through Local Authorities & Housing Associations.

The Right To Buy (England & Wales)

If you become a “secure” tenant then you should have a legal Right To Buy the home you are renting. In general you are only likely to be a secure tenant if you rent from a council. Most new housing association lets (excluding tenancy assignments) are on “assured” tenancies, which do not afford the Right to Buy in this form.

Service Personnel who become secure tenants are in an advantageous position when they come to exercise their Right To Buy:

You do not usually have to wait the usual 5 year qualifying period to apply (assuming you have served at least 5 years) and

The length of time you have occupied Service Accommodation counts towards the discount you are entitled to claim on the purchase of the property. This applies to single accommodation as well as Service Families Accommodation. If you had a previous tenancy with a council, housing association or any other public sector landlord prior to enlistment, the length of time you spent as a tenant may also count towards your discount.

REMEMBER: If you sell the property within the first five years, then some, or all, of the discount is repayable to the local authority.

Right To Acquire (England, Wales)

This is a legal right from April 1997 for any Housing Association tenant in England and Wales to buy the property that they are renting at a discount, if the property qualifies. The property must have been built or refurbished with “social housing grant.” This grant has only been available from April 1997. Tenants of properties in rural communities may not have the right to acquire their home.

The discount you can claim is a fixed amount dependent on the part of the country you are living in. If the property that you are renting does not qualify the Social Landlord may offer you an alternative property if there is one available. The length of time you have been a tenant or have served in the Armed Forces does not count in working out the discount.

Other Affordable Homes Initiatives

There are a number of affordable housing schemes in England, Scotland and Wales that are designed to help members of the Services buy their own homes.

As Armed Forces Personnel, you have priority status’ to access them whilst serving, and for a further 12 months after you leave.

Affordable housing schemes are intended for single people as well as for families.

This chapter provides information about some of the schemes available and the extra measures that have been added for the benefit of Armed Forces personnel. It will also tell you where you can get further information to help you decide which scheme best meets your needs. It sets out the position at the time of publication, but it is not a complete description of the schemes. Before committing yourself to one of these schemes, you are strongly advised to seek professional financial advice on whether it is right for you.

A similar scheme exists in Northern Ireland, but you do not have priority status. Information on it is included at the end of this chapter.

Key Facts

Affordable housing schemes help people to get on to the property ladder, by introducing new ways to find necessary money. The Government has designated its MOD Personnel as 'Priority Status', which means they receive priority when applying for affordable housing schemes across all regions in England. The Devolved Administrations in Scotland and Wales have also given a priority status to Armed Forces personnel when accessing their own schemes. This status ensures applications from Service Personnel are given a higher priority than some others when they are assessed for the schemes. It doesn't mean you will automatically be accepted. There are many different types of schemes to help you buy your own home. This chapter briefly explains the main Government schemes. Ask for more information from scheme providers to help you decide which one is right for you.

Are you eligible for these Government and Devolved Administration schemes?

- In England you are eligible if your household income (normally the combined income of you and your husband/wife/partner) is £60,000 or less, and you cannot afford to buy on the open market without help.
- In Scotland and Wales you are eligible if you cannot afford to buy a property that meets your household's needs without help.

For all schemes you may also be eligible if you have sold a property, and cannot afford to repurchase in a new posting area that is more expensive without assistance, to meet the needs of your family.

If you apply for one of the schemes, the providers will decide with you your household's needs. They will also assess how much you can afford to pay. They will not want you to over-reach yourself, but they may expect you to buy as big a share in the property as you can.

Common to all of the schemes in England, Scotland and Wales are the following key benefits:

- Priority status begins from the date that you are on trained strength, as long as you meet the eligibility criteria.
- You can let (rent out) your property to someone else if you are posted, as long as your mortgage lender agrees.
- You can apply to purchase a property through a scheme in any region, in order to settle your family - it doesn't have to be near your duty station.
- You can apply for a property from an overseas station and let it until
- you return to the UK, provided you intend to occupy it long term.
- Once you have a property, it doesn't matter if your circumstances change. If you leave the Armed Forces, you do not have to vacate or sell the property, and no additional financial penalties will apply.
- You will retain your priority status for 12 months after you leave the Armed Forces.
- In the event of death in Service, priority access to the schemes for 12 months is transferred to bereaved spouses, civil partners and other partners of Service personnel.

Special arrangements apply if you have received a lump-sum payment under the Armed Forces Compensation Scheme (AFCS).

- If you need adaptations made to the property, the AFCS payment will be disregarded when you are assessed for a Disability Facilities Grant in England and Wales, or grants for disabled adaptations in Scotland.

- In England and Wales, the AFCS payment will be disregarded when scheme providers assess how much you can afford to pay. In Scotland, your compensation payment may be disregarded when making the assessment - it depends on your circumstances.

Long Service Advance of Pay (LSAP) can be used in conjunction with all of these schemes, as long as you comply with the usual terms for LSAP (see Joint Service Publication 752).

Schemes In England

There are two main products available from the Government in England to help you buy a property. They operate in different ways:

- Shared Ownership which involves a Shared Ownership (leasehold) arrangement. You buy between 25% and 75% of a new build property with a normal mortgage (or savings). The scheme provider, usually a Housing Association, finances the rest. As well as your mortgage payments, you pay a subsidised rent on the scheme provider's share of the property, which will be a maximum of 3% in the first year, and is then reviewed. The scheme provider will hold the deeds of the property. At any time you can buy a bigger share, up to 100%, though there may be restrictions in some rural sites.
- Equity Loan - HomeBuy Direct
Eligible applicants will be offered an equity loan of up to a maximum of 30% of the purchase price based on the full market valuation of the property. Applicants are required to fund at least 70% of the purchase price by means of a conventional mortgage, savings and any deposit where required. Applicants must obtain their conventional mortgage from a Qualified Lending Institution. For the first five years there is no fee charged on the equity loan component. At the start of year six a fee is collected of 1.75% of the market value of the property at the time the loan is entered into multiplied by the outstanding percentage under the equity loan, rising after year 6 at RPI + 1% p.a. The equity loan is provided by the HCA and developer as a second charge.

- Equity Loan - FirstBuy
Eligible applicants will be offered an equity loan of up to a maximum of 20% of the purchase price (based on the open market value). Applicants are required to fund at least 80% of the purchase price by means of a conventional mortgage, savings and any deposit where required. Applicants must obtain their conventional mortgage from a Qualified Lending Institution. For the first five years there is no fee charged on the equity loan component. At the start of year six a fee is collected of 1.75% of the market value of the property at the time the loan is entered into multiplied by the outstanding percentage under the equity loan, the annual fee of 1.75% will be uplifted by RPI + 1% p. a. The equity loan is provided by the HCA and developer and held as a joint second charge.

For either scheme, if you sell the property you will need to repay your mortgage and equity loan providers using the money you get from the sale. If the property has increased in value you will share the profit with the equity loan providers (for example if you had a 25% equity loan, your equity loan provider gets 25% of the proceeds when you sell). If the value goes down, you may not have to repay the equity loan provider in full, but you will still need to repay the whole of your mortgage.

There are also schemes for those who are interested in buying a property, but are not yet able to do so:

- Intermediate Rent Scheme and Rent to Home Buy. With Priority Status you can rent an available new build property through a Registered Social Landlord such as a Housing Association. You will pay approximately 80% of the local market rent for that type of the property. But you also get the right to purchase a share of the property after a specified period (usually around 5 years, or sooner if you are able) by switching to the Shared Ownership scheme outlined above, after saving for a deposit while renting. Time restrictions apply.

Schemes In Scotland

In Scotland, you can use your priority status to access one of the shared equity schemes that form part of the Low Cost Initiative for First Time Buyers (LIFT), which is provided across the Scottish regions. These are the New Supply Shared Equity Scheme, the New Supply Shared Equity with Developers Trial, and the Open Market Shared Equity Pilot. Under these schemes, which are operated by Registered Social Landlords, you will have to show that you cannot afford to buy a house that meets your needs without assistance. If accepted, you will normally purchase between 60% and 80% of the property with a standard mortgage arrangement. You will need to demonstrate what you can afford to pay, and the amount you contribute must be the maximum mortgage that you can afford. In most cases the Scottish Government will fund the remainder. You will hold the deeds of the property. You are not required to pay any additional rents or charges to the Scottish Government, but if you sell the property you must pay back to them the percentage share they funded.

The differences between the schemes are as follows:

- New Supply Shared Equity Scheme. Registered Social Landlords will only offer new build properties to meet the needs of your family under this scheme.
- New Supply Shared Equity with Developers Trial. This scheme operates like the New Supply Shared Equity Scheme, except that you purchase a home built by a developer rather than the Housing Association, and the Scottish Government and the developer will each fund part of the cost of your home through an interest free equity loan.

- Open Market Shared Equity Pilot. This scheme can be used to buy new or existing properties. However, the value of the property must be inside the limits set by Registered Social Landlords for each region of Scotland to meet the needs of your family.

Also offered across Scotland is a Shared Ownership scheme:

- Shared Ownership. This scheme allows you to buy 25%, 50% or 75% of a new build property to meet the needs of your family on a leasehold arrangement, using a normal mortgage (or savings). A Housing Association finances the rest and will hold the deeds of the property. In addition to your mortgage repayments you pay an occupancy charge, which the Housing Association will set based on the stake you are buying. You can increase your share at any point to own either 50%, 75% or 100% of the property.

Schemes In Wales

In Wales you have priority access to the HomeBuy Scheme.

- HomeBuy Scheme. You are eligible to apply for this scheme if you cannot afford to buy a property that meets your household's needs without help. The Welsh Assembly Government will provide an equity loan, normally of between 30% and 50% or the purchase price of the property. You take out a mortgage for the remainder. The equity loan offered by the Government will take into account your family needs, regional house prices and what you can afford to pay on a mortgage. You do not have to pay interest on the equity loan. However, if you sell the property you must pay back the same percentage of the sale price as you borrowed from the Government.

MOD Armed Forces Home Ownership Pilot Scheme

You may also be eligible for the MoD's Armed Forces Home Ownership Scheme (AFHOS), launched in January 2010. The 4 year pilot is independent of the wider government schemes and is available in England only. It has its own eligibility criteria and offers a range of benefits for Service personnel which are different from the benefits of the other Government schemes described above.

- Armed Forces Home Ownership Scheme. Currently this scheme is only available to serving personnel of all ranks between 4 and 6 years service. It can only be used to purchase a property in England. However, Service personnel do not have to be located in England in order to join the Scheme. The MoD will fund between 15% and 50% of the property's value up to a maximum of £75,000. Properties valued up to £300,000 can be purchased. Whilst you are still serving in the Armed Forces no charges or interest are applied (to the MoD element of the funding) unless you wish to sublet the property or it is located over 50 miles from your work location. In that case, a charge of £200 per year applies. If you wish to move whilst serving you can 'port' the loan to another property. On leaving the Armed Forces you have a further 12 months without charges, but after 12 months has passed, charges will apply at a gradually increasing rate.

Currently eligibility for this scheme does not transfer to bereaved spouses in the event of the death of serving partner.

Schemes In Northern Ireland

The scheme available in Northern Ireland is as follows:

- Co-Ownership Housing Scheme. This is a Shared Ownership (leasehold) arrangement. You must show that you cannot buy a property to meet your needs, without help. You can choose a property on the open market, anywhere in Northern Ireland, costing up to £175,000. You must buy at least 50% of it. As well as your mortgage payments, you will pay an annual charge of 2.5% of the amount which is paid by the scheme provider. The scheme provider will hold the deeds of the property, but you can increase your share at any time, up to 100%, and the annual charge is adjusted to match this. The scheme is operated on a first-come first-served basis, and there are no priority groups.

Joint Service Housing Advice Office

The MOD Joint Service Housing Advice Office can offer further information on the schemes mentioned in this chapter, as well as many other issues related to housing.

Budget 2013: Although details were still to be announced as this booklet was published, The 2013 Budget included information on further government efforts to enable easier access to mortgage finance. The Help-to-Buy scheme is similar to the existing FirstBuy scheme in that it includes a 20% equity loan, which will allow prospective home buyers to provide a sufficient deposit to enter the housing market. This equity loan will be guaranteed by the government, and it is hoped this will encourage mortgage lenders to offer finance to those with as little as a 5% deposit available.

HOME OWNERSHIP VIA THE SOCIAL SECTOR IN SCOTLAND

Even if you are not in a position to buy a property when you leave the Services, there are many ways open to you of becoming a homeowner with councils and Housing Associations.

The Right to Buy

On the 30th September 2002, the Scottish secure tenancy (SST) came into force. It replaced the previous secure tenancy held by local authority tenants, and the secure and assured tenancies that applied in the housing association sector. The SST provides a single, common tenancy for virtually all tenants of LAs and RSLs in Scotland and brings with it quite significant changes to the Right To Buy.

If you are a Scottish secure tenant with your council or RSL you may have the legal right to buy your home at a discount. However, details of your right to buy will be determined by the particular circumstances of your tenancy or when your tenancy started.

If your tenancy begins after the 30th September 2002, there is a 5 year qualifying period before you can purchase the rental property that you are living in. Thereafter you can then purchase at a discounted price.

- The discount starts at 20% with an additional 1% for each year of the tenancy.
- There is a maximum to the discount of 35% or £15,000 (whichever is the lower).

Service personnel who become secure tenants are in an advantageous position when they come to exercise their Right To Buy:

The length of time you have occupied Service accommodation counts towards the discount you are entitled to claim on the purchase of the property. This applies to single accommodation as well as Service Families Accommodation. If you had a previous tenancy with a council, housing association or any other public sector landlord prior to enlistment, the length of time you spent as a tenant will also count towards your discount.

NOTE: If you sell the property within the first three years, then some, or all, of the discount is repayable to the local authority.

WARNING

If there is a break in tenancy between leaving forces accommodation and taking a local authority or RSL tenancy then your time in forces accommodation may be lost.

The Scottish Government has proposed to end the Right to Buy (RTB) for new social housing. They will not take away the existing RTB entitlement but remain committed to reviewing the policy in line with their manifesto agreement. The Scottish Government will work with key stakeholders to examine a range of options and will conduct a short- term review of the Summer, and draw up detailed proposals for public consultation.

Shared Ownership

A number of Housing Associations build flats and houses for sale on a part buy/part rent basis. As this scheme is Government-funded, it is intended primarily to assist people who do not already own a property to get a foot on the home ownership ladder. As a result, Housing Associations give priority to applicants who cannot afford to get a large enough mortgage to be able to buy similar accommodation on the open market. Shared ownership could be an option not only for ex-regulars in lower paid employment but also for those without immediate employment who are leaving with gratuities and pensions.

Initially, you buy a certain percentage of the property (normally 25, 50 or 75%) either with cash or a mortgage and you pay rent to the association for the portion of the property you do not own. After 12 months you can elect to buy a further share (normally at a minimum of 25%) or buy all of the remaining part you do not own. If you wish, however, you do not have to buy further shares.

Application And The Eligibility Criteria

Some Housing Associations require you to have a minimum income before being eligible for shared ownership. Check this out. Otherwise you apply for shared ownership property by completing and returning a shared ownership application form (this is a separate form from the one used to apply for the Association's rented accommodation).

Associations normally give priority to applicants who are living in public rented sector housing (i.e. associations, local authority or Scottish Homes' tenants) because the effect of a successful allocation to one of these applicants is to free up an affordable rented unit for another household in housing need.

Associations are also expected to give priority to applicants who have never owned or part-owned a home before and who are seeking to step onto the home ownership ladder for the first time. Consideration will, however, be given to applicants who have previously been owner-occupiers, where the personal circumstances warrant it (e.g. significant deterioration in the applicant's financial circumstances or a relationship breakdown).

Applicants who can afford to buy a house outright on the open market are not eligible for shared ownership housing, nor are those who could not properly afford to purchase a 25% or 50% share of the equity.

The procedure that associations use for considering shared ownership applications, therefore, includes a careful assessment of the applicant's financial circumstances, which requires verification from the applicant's bank or building society that they can afford and sustain all the costs involved. If you would like to know whether there are shared ownership opportunities in an area you wish to settle, contact the Shared Ownership HOMES agency on 020 7963 0200.

Low-Cost Initiative For First-Time Buyers (Lift)

The Scottish Government is committed to helping people meet their aspirations to become home owners. Shared equity is one way to do this.

The Scottish Government's Shared equity schemes enable people to buy a home in partnership with a registered social landlord. An owner generally pays between 60 and 80 per cent of the price of a home - with the remainder held by a registered social landlord using a Government grant.

The New Supply Shared Equity scheme and the Open Market Shared Equity Pilot scheme aim to help people on low incomes who wish to own their home but who cannot afford to pay the full price for a house. They are part of the range of assistance from the Scottish Government under its Low-cost Initiative for First-Time Buyers, LIFT.

The Scottish Government's shared equity schemes mainly aim to help first-time buyers, such as people living in social housing, people in the Armed Forces or veterans, the schemes can however help others too. For example, they may be able to help people who are looking for a new home after a significant change in their household circumstances. They may also be able to help disabled people access more suitable housing.

What Is New Supply Shared Equity And How Does It Operate?

The New Supply Shared Equity scheme aims to help people on low incomes who wish to own their own home but who cannot afford to pay the full price for a house.

New Supply Shared Equity is administered by the Scottish Government, the City of Edinburgh Council and Glasgow City Council.

The Scottish Government gives grants to registered social landlords - normally a housing association or housing co-operative - to help them build or buy new homes specifically for New Supply Shared Equity. The homes that are provided are for a variety of household sizes and are designed to meet a range of housing needs.

Registered social landlords offer New Supply Shared Equity properties for sale on a 'shared equity' basis. You will pay for the majority share in the property (normally between 60 and 80 per cent) and the Scottish Government will hold the remaining share under a shared equity agreement which they will enter into with you. You will own the property outright but the interests of the Scottish Government will be secured by a mortgage (or 'standard security' as it is known in Scotland) on your property.

If you can afford a 75% share of a property the Scottish Government's contribution will make up the remaining 25%. You will have a 75% stake in its value, whatever changes there are to the property's value over time. The price that the property is worth when you buy it is worked out by the District Valuer (a government valuer independent of the registered social landlord).

You will have to appoint a solicitor to act on your behalf to complete the work involved in buying a home. The registered social landlord will instruct its own solicitor to deal with the Scottish Government's interest in the purchase.

You will pay for your share of the purchase price in the usual way, along with legal costs, survey fees and any other costs associated with the purchase. You will also pay for the documenting and securing of the Scottish Government's interest including all registration dues and (if applicable) stamp duty. You do not pay any form of rent on the property.

How Do I Find Out More?

New Supply Shared Equity projects are developed and promoted by registered social landlords and may be advertised through a variety of local and national media and the internet. The best place to find information on New Supply Shared Equity will be from the registered social landlords in your area. If you don't know who they are, check the following websites.

The Scottish Government's website also contains some more general information about the New Supply Shared Equity scheme, and general information on the house buying process.

What Is The Open Market Shared Equity Pilot Scheme?

The Open Market Shared Equity Pilot scheme allows people to buy homes that are for sale on the open market in the following local authorities:

Aberdeen City;

Aberdeenshire;

The City of Edinburgh;

East Lothian;

Highland;

Midlothian;

Moray;

Perth & Kinross;

Stirling;

and West Lothian.

As the Open Market Shared Equity Pilot is aimed at low income households, you will be assessed by the registered social landlord to see whether or not you qualify. To allow this to happen, a form of 'means testing' will be carried out.

The amount that you contribute must be the maximum mortgage that you are able to obtain plus any personal contribution that you are able to make. The overall amount must be enough to pay for your stake and cover all the costs of buying a home, such as survey and legal costs. Limits are set on the price you can pay for a property under the Open Market Shared Equity Pilot. You can find out what these limits are at: www.communitiesscotland.gov.uk/lift.

The stake that you hold will normally be determined by the maximum mortgage that you can raise, plus any personal contribution that you are able to make towards the purchase. For example, if a property is valued at £100,000 and you can afford to contribute £70,000 (the maximum mortgage that you can raise plus any personal contribution) you would hold a 70% stake in your home.

How Do I Apply?

You need to contact the Registered Social Landlord operating the scheme in the area you are interested in.

RENTING IN THE PRIVATE SECTOR

Many people leaving the services will not meet the criteria needed to obtain social housing and, if wanting to rent, will need to look in the private sector. It is always best to rent from a Letting Agent who is a member of a professional organisation such as the Association of Residential Letting Agents (ARLA). Members are bonded, hold professional indemnity insurance and have to have been in the lettings business for a minimum of two years before they can join the Association. All these things serve to protect YOU AND YOUR BOND MONEY.

Finding Somewhere To Rent

Any of the following would be good places to find out what's available:

- Letting Agents - specialist property management organisations which find tenants, collect rents, deal with repairs etc. on behalf of landlords. You can find details in the Yellow Pages (www.yell.co.uk) Agents registered with the Association of Residential Letting Agents (ARLA) are particularly recommended as they conform to strict professional standards.
- Estate Agents - some have property management departments.
- Local Newspapers - usually carry advertisements in the classified section.
- Local Councils - some local authority housing departments and Housing Advice Centres keep lists of landlords in their area. Some councils also have schemes to guarantee bonds with landlords in their area.
- Shop Windows - usually Post Offices or newsagents.

What Sort Of Accommodation?

- Self-contained accommodation, where you have exclusive use of the property you are renting, comprises anything from bedsits and one bedroomed flats to large detached houses. The accommodation may or may not be furnished.
- House/Flatshares. This is a good option for single people or couples. A homeowner may take in lodgers or a landlord with a large furnished property may decide to let it to several people. Such arrangements tend to be on a self-catering basis and whilst you have your own bedroom, you would share the living areas, kitchen, bathroom (and bills) with the other occupants.

This is an ideal way of keeping costs down. Obviously, you will need to satisfy yourself that the people you are going to be sharing with are compatible - although if they are not, it is generally easy to move out as you have to give relatively little, if any, notice.

Costs

Rent

Private sector charges are much higher than council or MoD rents. What you pay will naturally be dependent on the size and condition of the property as well as its location. If there is a scarcity of rented accommodation in an area, this will be reflected in higher rents. As a rough guide you can expect to pay 4-6% of the property value per annum. For example, a £130,000 property will be £6,500 pa or £550 per month. A landlord normally expects you to pay at least a month's rent in advance. Check also whether, and how often, the rent is likely to be increased during your tenancy. If you feel an increase to be excessive you may be able to refer the case to a Rent Assessment Committee. Do be aware, that this Committee can decide you are not paying enough rent as well!

Bond

This is generally equivalent to 1-2 month's rent and is held by the landlord (or agent) as a deposit against damage to the property, decor or furnishings. Naturally, if there is no damage at the end of your tenancy, you should receive your bond back in full.

Landlord's duties

Under the new rules, landlords will have to choose one of three schemes and inform the tenant about the details of how the deposit

TENANCY DEPOSIT PROTECTION from 6 April 2007

From 6 April 2007 landlords or agents can only take a deposit from a tenant if that deposit is protected by a TDS. The two types of schemes being introduced are:

- a custodial scheme, whereby the deposit is held by the scheme during the tenancy and during any legal dispute
- two insurance based schemes where the landlord or agent keeps the deposit, but the deposit is insured in case of any dispute and thus protected for the tenant.

At the end of a tenancy both landlord and tenant must agree on the amount of deposit to be returned, the scheme must then repay the agreed amount within 10 days of the agreement.

is protected within 14 days of receipt of the deposit. Unless these duties are met, the landlord will be unable to serve a notice requiring possession (a Section 21 notice, although the landlord will still be able to seek possession under any of the grounds in Schedule 2 Housing Act 1988).

The penalty for landlords that fail to comply with the new rules is compensation to the tenant of an amount equivalent to three times the deposit, to be paid within 10 days.

Service Charge

If the landlord (or agent) provides a service like cleaning and maintenance of communal areas (usually the case with flats), this extra charge may be levied on top of your rent. Check what services are provided and what the cost is before taking on a tenancy.

Agent Fees

Whilst you should not have to pay an introduction fee to a letting agent, you may be charged for the administration involved in preparing your tenancy paperwork.

Other Costs

If you are taking on self-contained accommodation, you will normally be expected to pay the Council Tax (Rates in N. Ireland), Water Charges, Fuel Bills, TV Licence Fee etc. yourself. Some landlords may include such charges in with the rent. Find out which applies in your case. If you are furnishing a property yourself, you will need to insure your belongings.

IMPORTANT

Always make sure you know what the full costs of renting are going to be before you sign a tenancy agreement.

Can I Get Help With My Housing Costs?

Yes - if you are on a low income or on welfare benefits. In this case you would apply for Housing Benefit from the local council. Housing Benefit is a rebate on some (or all) of your rent (and possibly service charges) - dependent on your personal and financial circumstances. Note: some landlords may refuse to offer you a tenancy unless you are in employment or have a regular source of income other than welfare benefits.

Restrictions apply to your eligibility for housing benefit if you are a student. Also, restrictions apply to the amount of benefit you can get if you are under 25 or rent a property that is larger than you actually need. Find out whether you qualify for help before taking the tenancy.

If your circumstances change after taking on the tenancy, and you wish to stay on, get advice on your entitlement to housing benefit as soon as possible. Claims are rarely backdated. Also tell the agent/landlord about your new circumstances.

Inventories

These are essential, especially for furnished tenancies. They should be made at the start and end of the tenancy to highlight the condition of the property and also to show where damage, breakages or losses have occurred. Letting Agents normally provide inventories as a matter of course. If you are dealing with a landlord directly, ensure an inventory is drawn up at the start of a tenancy and that both parties sign it. If this is not done you have little comeback if the landlord decides not to return your bond.

- References
You may be asked to supply addresses of referees for the agent (or landlord) to write to and confirm your ability to meet the rental commitment. Referees would include your bank or building society, employer, previous landlords or, for some, your solicitor and/or accountant.
- Repairs & maintenance
Be clear from the outset about who is responsible for doing repairs. Tenants are normally expected to do minor things like change lightbulbs, tap washers etc. Clarify how you report repairs to the landlord or agent and what you should do in an emergency occurring outside "office hours."

Types Of Tenancy

Most landlords let their property on a fixed short-term basis - ranging from a minimum of six months upwards. Such tenancies are called "assured shorthold tenancies" ("short assured tenancies" in Scotland). The landlord has a legal right to get his property back at the end of the term by applying to the County Court. You cannot be legally evicted without a Court Order.

If you are in a flat/house share situation with a landlord who lives in the property, you will not have such a formal tenancy arrangement. Agree with the landlord in this case how much notice you can expect if you are required to leave.

Some landlords are happy to let their property out on a long-term (open-ended) basis. This is referred to as an "assured tenancy" - a landlord is legally obliged to serve a notice with your tenancy agreement to confirm the tenancy is assured. Landlords do not have an automatic right to get their property back if they let it on an assured basis and need to prove to a Judge that you have broken your tenancy agreement on certain legally specified grounds (e.g. arrears).

REMEMBER: whatever type of tenancy you take, the tenancy agreement which you sign will lay down your rights and responsibilities as a tenant as well as those of the landlord. You should always keep a copy of your tenancy agreement.

Leaving & Staying On

You should be aware from the outset whether you are taking an open-ended or fixed term let.

If you need to leave before the expiry of the tenancy, you are required to give notice. This is normally in writing if you have a formal arrangement. You may need to negotiate in advance of taking the tenancy, how much notice you have to give. If not, and especially in the case of shorthold tenancies, you may incur a financial penalty. This would normally be the rent outstanding to the end of the term that the tenancy is for (or until the property can be relet to someone else - whichever is the sooner).

If you want to stay on, it may be possible to renew your tenancy. If you are dealing with an agent, they may well have other suitable property on their books in any case. Do remember: you cannot be lawfully evicted from a property without a valid Court Order.

Problems? Where To Go For Help

If you run into difficulties with your landlord (e.g. over outstanding repairs or the threat of eviction) you must get independent advice about your rights as soon as possible. Your local Citizens' Advice Bureau, Law Centre, Shelter Office or Housing Advice Centre would be the best place to go for help initially. Solicitors can also deal with problems - but they will charge you for their services.

HOUSE PURCHASE

Most people in the UK own or are buying their own home and, in fact, in many parts of the country, home ownership will be the only realistic option for many ex-regulators. However, before rushing into house purchase do think very carefully about where you want to live and, more importantly, where there are sufficient employment opportunities to finance house purchase.

Think About The Mortgage

It is extremely unlikely that you can contemplate buying a house without borrowing money. You will need to do careful research to find out what you can afford to borrow and what mortgage providers are prepared to lend you. Take time to do this and familiarise yourself with the different types of mortgage on offer.

A mortgage provider or broker should be able to give an approximate loan figure, based on income; add any money you may have available to this and you should be able to establish the price range in which to look for your house. Remember you will get more for your money in some areas of the country than in others.

Mortgage providers are reluctant to lend to unemployed people. They have to ensure that borrowers are able to repay the loan.

MORTGAGE PROVIDERS look at 3 things when deciding whether to offer you a mortgage:

- Security for their loan (i.e. they won't lend you more than the property worth.)
- Your ability to repay (based on your and your partner's income).
- Your willingness to repay (they will do a credit check).

Work Out The Costs Of Buying

The monthly mortgage payment isn't the only thing you need to budget for - there are many other costs to take into consideration:

- The deposit
Usually 5-10% of the purchase price, but you can pay more if you wish.
- IFA Fees
Some Independent Financial Advisers charge a fee for their services, some don't. You will be notified, in writing, of any costs upfront.
- Lender Fees
The lender's valuation of the property, mortgage arrangement charges, mortgage indemnity insurance for loans over 75% of the property valuation, to name but some.
- Insurance
For the structure of the building as well as for your own personal belongings.
- Survey Fees
A survey is required to ensure that there are no problems with the property.
- Conveyancing Fees
Either a solicitor or a licensed conveyancer will handle the legal side of the purchase for you. Make enquiries and get several written quotes.

In addition, you will also need to budget for removal expenses, decoration of your new home and purchase of carpets, curtains, furniture and appliances. Also you will need to know how much it will cost for gas, electric and telephone reconnections (if appropriate) and what the council tax and water charges will be.

Look At House Price Trends In The Area

This will give you an indication as to whether you can afford to realistically live in the area. Major lenders like Halifax and Nationwide produce helpful quarterly bulletins which can give you a broad idea of house prices in particular regions of the country.

Look For A House

Quite simply, the next step is to find a house. You have many sources of information to find out about individual properties for sale. These include:

- Solicitors' Property Centre
- Estate agents
- Internet
- Builders
- Local newspapers (although some Nationals advertise properties in the luxury end of the market as well as new developments by leading builders.

You should give an estate agent details of exactly what you are looking for and the price range you can afford. They will give you details of the suitable houses they have on their books and post you details of any further houses they are instructed to sell. Do not be tempted to go beyond the price you believe you can afford. Most Estate Agents post all the information on their Web Site BEFORE they send out details by post. Remember to log on regularly to stay up to date.

Most people tend to buy a property in the best area that they can afford. Remember also that you need to have an idea of the saleability of any property you are interested in, should you need to sell it in the future. It is often said that the three most important factors to consider when buying a house are:

Location Location Location

This is not far from the truth. What sort of amenities are there in the area - schools, shops, leisure facilities, transport connections, etc?

Whilst it is good to be within easy reach of such amenities, do you want them on your doorstep? - the privacy a house enjoys from local nuisances and eyesores needs to be taken into consideration too. You will need to visit the house you are interested in at different times of the day to get a better idea of the situation.

What about the general appearance of the property itself - does it give you the impression of being neglected? If so, there may be hidden maintenance costs.

Making notes when you visit a property is the easiest way to make sure that you don't miss anything; it also helps when trying to choose between properties later. There is a handy checklist of the things to look out for at the end of this chapter.

Making An Offer

No matter how much you like a property NEVER make an offer on the first visit. Always go home first and give yourself some time to think about it.

Before making an offer, it is a good idea to find out from the seller:

- How long the property has been on the market (this will give you an idea as to how flexible they will be in accepting lower offers or whether there might be a hidden reason for the property not selling sooner).
- How much interest there has been in the property and whether other offers have been made?
- Why is the seller moving (a good reason - needing larger house, moving for job reasons or for a negative reason - noisy neighbours)?
- Does the seller have a house to go to (if they are going to be stuck in a chain, then it might frustrate your attempts to buy the house)?

Don't forget though, that the seller may not be entirely honest about some of these details. If in doubt instruct your solicitor to ask the same questions in writing (they usually will anyway). If the seller is not honest in a written reply to a solicitor then they are guilty of misrepresentation. Remember, until the Exchange of Contract is signed, you can pull out at anytime if the answers are not positive.

Once you are sure, make the offer either to the agent or to the seller direct. Usually an offer below the advertised price will be accepted and it is always worth making such an offer especially when it is a buyer's market. Even new houses can be purchased below the listed price, particularly when site completion is approaching and the developer is anxious to move on. However, in Northern Ireland, estate agents tend to operate a competitive bid system rather than advertising properties at a fixed price.

Applying For A Mortgage & Initiating The Conveyancing

The next stage is to make a formal application to the mortgage lender for a loan. The lender will require a fair amount of information about the property and the borrower. They will wish to make sure that you have the ability to repay the loan over a long period. Employers may be asked to certify income. It is fraudulent to withhold or knowingly give inaccurate information and you must declare things like Service expiry.

The Valuation & Survey

The mortgage lender will commission a qualified surveyor to inspect the property so that its suitability for mortgage purposes can be established. This "Report and Valuation" is not a Structural Survey. You are strongly advised to get a more detailed Survey. A HomeBuyers Report will give you valuable information about the property, including any problems with damp, subsidence etc. A full Structural Survey will give you even more information. These are fairly expensive but either will be well worth the money to be certain there are no structural faults, which may prove even more expensive to repair. The Survey will also detail any minor defects that will need attention sooner or later. Both of these documents will include the Report and Valuation, so it will save a little money if the surveyor you use is agreed by the mortgage lender.

Normally the loan is unconditional but if there are defects in the property, the lender may:

- Offer the full amount of the loan but on condition that remedial work is undertaken within a specified time, or
- Offer part of the loan only, with the balance being paid when the remedial work is completed.

Unless the valuation report is unsatisfactory, the mortgage lender makes an offer of advance based on the valuation of the property or the purchase price - whichever is the lower. You will usually be expected to meet at least 5% of the purchase price yourself.

Once you have accepted the offer of advance, the legal procedures to complete the sale begin. These are the same in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The Solicitor's Job

At this stage you will need to choose a Solicitor or conveyancer to act for you. Before finally deciding, it is worth obtaining quotes of their costs from solicitors as these can vary remarkably. Another important factor is compatibility. There is little point engaging a solicitor (even if they are the cheapest) if you are not going to see eye to eye with them. Your chosen Solicitor will do the following:

- Ensure you will obtain vacant possession of the property
- Enquire as to local developments that may affect it.
- Advise on the draft contract for the purchase.
- Examine and explain to you the details of the mortgage deed.
- Advise on any covenants restricting the use of the property.
- Ensure you obtain proper title to the house and land.
- Prepare the final conveyance and arrange any registration of title on your behalf.

The purchase becomes fixed when contracts are exchanged. This occurs when the various searches and enquiries are completed. At this stage a deposit, usually 5 or 10% of the purchase price, has to be paid to the vendor's Solicitor. Once contracts have been exchanged, neither party can normally withdraw. The risk regarding the property passes to the purchaser from this stage, so you need to make sure the property is adequately insured from the date of the exchange of contracts.

Becoming A Home Owner

The house changes ownership at a specified time after exchange of contracts. This process is known as completion. Hence completion can be the same day as the exchange of contracts or several weeks later. The purchase monies (less the deposit paid on Exchange of Contracts) are paid over to the vendor. The contract will contain provision for a financial penalty against a buyer who fails to complete on the specified date. The vendor can charge interest on the outstanding purchase monies at a rate of interest specified in the contract. The vendor's Solicitor can serve 'Notice to Complete' on the purchaser and if the purchaser still fails to complete; the vendor can keep the contract deposit and sell to someone else.

Alternatively, the vendor can instigate legal proceedings to force the buyer to complete or sue for breach of contract. If the vendor is at fault, then the purchaser's Solicitor can serve Notice and the purchaser forces completion or sues for breach of contract.

REMEMBER: In Scotland, the legal procedure for buying a house is different.

The Council of Mortgage Lenders has produced excellent booklets on:

- The CLM guide to home-buying in England & Wales
- Adverse Credit Mortgages

These can be obtained from www.cml.org.uk

Help With Mortgage Costs

If you lose your job once you have already bought a house or your ability to pay the mortgage is affected by other circumstances, the help you could expect to claim from the State is limited - in fact you would not receive any help until after at least 9 months. On account of this it is recommended that you take out mortgage protection insurance with a new loan to ensure you do not fall into arrears if you are laid off or if your income is reduced for a long period of sickness.

As with any other policy, shop around and find out in what circumstances you can expect to receive payouts. In addition, if you do anticipate problems, notify your mortgage lender IMMEDIATELY. Do not hope the problem will go away. It is in your lenders interest, as well as your own, to work out a way through the problem and keep you in your property.

Service Personnel and Veterans Agency (Centurion) SPVS(C)
Centurion Building, Grange Road, Gosport, Hants PO13 9XA

JPAC Enquiries
Mil: 94560 3600 Civ: 0141 2243600 (Option 4)

Applications

Service Personnel & Veterans Agency are noticing that there are common problems when Service personnel are applying for LSAP. Users should be aware that there is a new process for LSAP Applications via Self Service Employee on JPA.

A new Self Service Guide is available to Service personnel to help walk them through the process when applying for LSAP.

Users should particularly note the following to reduce the delay in SPVA processing claims:

1. Allow plenty of time for your application. SPVA needs 6 / 8 weeks from receipt of the approved paper copy.
2. Do not use the old paper Claim (JP AE024) form. Although, anyone who does not have access to JPA, can still use the JP AE024 form. The Service person will need a covering letter stating why the application cannot be submitted via JPA and this should accompany the JP AE024 form.
3. When completing online claims do not complete a duplicate paper claim as well.
4. Do not resubmit a claim if you remember something or want to change it. Ring the Helpdesk (94560 3600) with the information and ask them to raise a SR/ Helpdesk call.

5. Select the appropriate PStat Cat (for definitions of these categories refer to JSP 752 Ch 1 Sect 4).
6. Always provide as much information as possible. Fill in every box, even the free text.
7. All personal details will be double checked against JPA records.
8. Service personnel must read JSP 752 Ch 2 Sect 4 and tick appropriately, otherwise the claim will automatically be rejected.
9. JSP 752 states that Service personnel can't have second property anywhere, but it is within the regulations to sell the previous property and then buy a new property.
10. LSAP is only granted for property within the UK as per JSP 752.
11. If there are extenuating circumstances that relate to the claim, then the Service person will need to provide ALL documentary evidence to support the claim.
12. The print button will only appear once the workflow has been completed and has been approved. The print button will appear in the top right corner once this has happened.

Pre-approval of an LSAP application will be sent via workflow from JPAC to the applicant. The workflow must be opened, as it contains a link to a printable copy of the original application.

Click on the "view details" button to open workflow. Once opened you can only print the application by clicking on the "printable page" button.

The form must be printed, authorised and posted to JPAC for final approval. Please note that once pre-approval has been given via JPA, only the printed application form will be accepted. Once the claim has been received it will take 6/8 weeks to process the claim'.

Amount Of Advance

For applicants who have not owned a property during the last twelve months the amount of the advance will be limited to the lowest of the following calculations:

- £8500 or 182 days gross basic pay
- Difference between the mortgage obtained and purchase price plus certain expenses
- In the case of a redundee, a sum not exceeding 90% of terminal benefits.

Payment will be made direct to the applicant's solicitor or, for house extensions, direct to the builder.

For those who are current homeowners or who have owned a property during the last twelve months, restrictions on the amount of the loan will apply. This will be dependent on capital realised from the sale of the property.

A BRIEF GUIDE TO MORTGAGES

How Much Can I Borrow?

There are some very good mortgage calculators available on line. Most of the major lenders have calculators where you can play with the numbers to find out what is best for you. One word of warning, if you need to log in all your details before accessing the calculator, it may be best to stay clear. The reason is that this may be taken as an application which in turn will show adversely on your credit check.

This gives you a general idea how much you can borrow and how much it will cost each month. The second step is the mortgage offer in principle, this means approaching a lender and getting an offer of a loan. This can be done directly - walk in, or ring, a high street lender to see what they can offer you: or you can use an intermediary - a Financial Adviser.

Financial Advisers

Financial Advisers come in several guises:

- Tied - these Advisers can only offer information/advice on one companies products (remember that some companies operate under several names). This is the adviser that you will find in a High Street lender's branch.
- Multi Tied - these Advisers work with a limited number of lenders, they can advise only on the companies that they deal with.
- Whole of Market - a truly Independent Financial Adviser (IFA) can access and advise on EVERY mortgage on the market.

IFAs are regulated by the Financial Services Authority. They are qualified, insured professionals who must justify, in writing, their advice. Rather than offering a few products for you to choose from they will actively advise you on what they believe to be best for you. This will involve a fairly lengthy discussion about your finances, your lifestyle and your attitude to monetary risk. Only when the IFA believes that they have an understanding of you will then start to recommend products.

Be Totally Honest With Your IFA!

If you hide a debt, or underestimate your expenses, your IFA will not be able to give you the best advice, and you may end up with a mortgage you cannot afford. In addition, debts will show up when the Lender completes a credit check on you. This will look bad for you as you did not declare it. If your IFA knows upfront then they can deal with every eventuality - even bankruptcy or CCJs.

Advisers receive commission from the lender on your mortgage, some work entirely on this, some will charge a fee for the advice that they give you. An IFA must give you a disclosure document that will identify everything about them. This will include what they will charge, the type of advice/information they can give, the details of their FSA status etc.

There are vast numbers of "Independent Financial Advisers" who advertise in Yellow Pages/Thomson's Directory/Housing Matters some of whom have established strong links within the Service community.

The Offer

At a later stage in the mortgage application process, the lender will get in touch with your employer to confirm your salary. They will also want to make sure you have paid regularly into your existing mortgage or have made regular rent payments. The lender is likely to consult a credit reference agency. In the case of self-employed people, at least two and probably three years audited accounts of the business will be needed. Most lenders offer mortgages of up to 90 per cent of the price that you are paying for it. A few offer 95 per cent mortgages, but loans with a very small or low deposit very often incur a charge to cover the lender taking the extra risk.

What Kind Of Mortgage

A mortgage has two main ingredients: the capital, which is the amount of money you borrow, and the interest, which is charged on the capital until you have paid it back.

The interest rate can be:

- VARIABLE : so that it changes when the lender changes its mortgage interest rate.
- DISCOUNTED : which reduces the lender's standard variable rate by a set percentage. The discount is usually for a short period and then the rate reverts to the lender's variable rate.
- FIXED : for a specific period, say two to five years, or even longer. After the fixed-rate term has ended the interest rate charged will change to the prevailing variable rate or you may be offered a new fixed rate.
- A TRACKER : is normally based on a rate not controlled by the lender but by an outside body. This usually takes the form of a set % above the Bank of England base rate.

Ways To Repay Your Mortgage

Despite the number of products on the market, there are really only two ways to repay your mortgage: Capital and Interest Repayment or Interest Only.

Capital And Interest Repayment Mortgage

This is a basic type of mortgage which pays back the capital and interest gradually over a period of years. While this method guarantees full repayment, it does not include any element of life insurance.

Interest-Only Mortgage

As the name suggests, this is a mortgage where interest only is payable and you repay the capital separately at the end of the mortgage term.

The capital can be repaid in various ways:

- through investing in an endowment policy
- a personal pension
- an expected inheritance
- through a series of ISAs
- or a mixture of any of these.

Endowment Policy

With this type of investment, as well as paying interest to the lender, you pay an

If you're concerned that your policy won't make enough to pay off your mortgage, you have a number of options:

- you can increase your payments - perhaps not such a good idea with a poorly performing policy.
- you can pay off some of your mortgage as a lump sum or through regular payments
- you can start up another investment, such as an ISA, or a combination of these things.
- you can convert the shortfall to a repayment mortgage.

Always consult your financial advisor

insurance company a monthly premium, which goes into an endowment policy. This should pay out a lump sum either at the end of your mortgage term, or at your death if sooner. The lump sum is designed to repay your capital and, if the insurance company has done its job well, you may get a tax-free bonus at the end to spend as you wish. But you must remember that the amount paid out is not guaranteed.

The policy can be transferred to a new property when you move, so you don't lose the growth you have built up. It is unlikely that you will be able to purchase a new policy, but an existing policy can be used.

Pension

Based on a personal pension plan, this is designed to provide you with a pension and pay off your mortgage: it could also give you a cash surplus and life assurance cover. During the life of the loan the borrower pays interest to the lender and also makes contributions to a personal pension plan. This option is popular amongst the self-employed but you cannot do it if you are part of a company pension scheme.

ISA

With this type of investment, interest on the loan is paid to the lender, and the capital is repaid when a series of individual savings accounts (ISAs) are cashed in. This works like an endowment but instead you invest in ISAs.

Through ISAs you can invest in the stock market and life insurance policies like endowments as well as cash. All the returns are paid tax-free and you can invest in a different fund every year. Remember that the value of stock market investments can go down as well as up.

Flexible Mortgage

This repayment method allows you to make regular or lump sum overpayments whenever you like, without incurring any early redemption penalty. Some deals also let you make underpayments or take payment holidays, although usually only once you've built up a reserve of overpayments. Interest is calculated daily or monthly rather than annually, so any overpayments will reduce the outstanding balance immediately.

Don't be baffled by the jargon. You'll cope much more easily if you find the time to understand the basics. Most important of all, don't be afraid to ask. If you're not sure what something means get your adviser to tell you - that's what he or she is there for.

Redemption Penalties

When you begin a mortgage you should ask if there are any redemption penalties. You may have to pay this should you want to pay all or part of the mortgage off early, or change it either to a different basis with the same lender or transfer to a new lender. Redemption penalties may apply throughout the term of a mortgage or for only a few years at the start.

Credit Reference Agencies

Any potential lender will make a credit check on you to ensure there are no County Court Judgements or other debts against you. If you want to reassure yourself prior to applying for a mortgage you could contact one of the 2 agencies below. All you need to do is write to them enclosing your full name(s) and confirmation of your addresses over the past 6 years. Naturally, if there are debts, talk this over with your financial adviser.

SURPLUS QUARTER SALES

Annington Homes

Annington Homes became one of the largest owners of residential property in the UK when it completed the purchase of the Married Quarter Estate (MQE) from the Ministry of Defence in November 1996. The core of the Annington Homes deal was the purchase, and lease back, of 55,000 properties to the then Defence Housing Executive for continued use as married quarters for service families. These are on a full repairing lease for which the MoD pays rent to Annington Homes. The deal includes a guaranteed release of around 700 units per annum for the next 25 years, but the MoD has absolute discretion on the location of the properties.

There is no indication of which properties will be included in future releases, but Annington agrees that it was, and remains, vital for the MOD to retain absolute control in order to comply with its own obligations and provide security of tenure to military personnel. Annington has always recognised the need for a good working relationships with the military as tenants and neighbours and has established close contacts with the Defence Infrastructure Organisation and the service communities.

The company attaches such importance to this last relationship that it has set up a trust fund to give grants to improve the facilities on MOD estates and bases. These are primarily targeted at recreation and community facilities, though if a good case is made, any proposal will be considered. From the outset Annington saw service families as potential purchasers of ex-married quarters and has introduced a package of incentives for the Service buyer including percentage discounts linked to length of service and cashbacks. At present, Service personnel account for 30% of the private sales at Annington.

The discounts which may be offered to Service, or ex-Service personnel are: Either:
A site discount of up to 5%

- + 1% discount for every 10 years served (maximum 3%) L + £250 towards fees, payable upon completion

Or:

- A £100 deposit and move in scheme is available on some sites.

If you are interested in buying a surplus quarter Annington Homes can be contacted on: 0800 358 1118 or www.annington.co.uk to register your interest in an area. Annington Homes will then contact people as properties are released in an area. (Scotland and Northern Ireland were not included in the deal - the Defence Infrastructure Organisation release any available properties through local Estate Agents.)

LETTING YOUR HOUSE OR FLAT

If you already own a property, you may find you need to consider letting it if you obtain employment in another area and do not wish or cannot sell in the short term. If you decide to let, you need to obtain the permission of your mortgage lender and be aware that some lenders may add an element to your mortgage if you rent your property out.

Choice Of Tenants

You should think carefully as to the type of tenant that you are prepared to accept. Are you happy about young children and pets? Are you prepared to let to single young people sharing or do you want a more mature couple? Having decided about the type of tenant you would be happy with, you then need to think whether you will rent the property to them yourself or through an agent.

Letting Agents

Unless you have the perfect tenant and live on the spot, it is inevitable that problems will arise which may be difficult to resolve quickly. An agent can select appropriate tenants, prepare tenancy agreements, organise inventories and generally manage the property using their professional experience.

It is recommended that if you decide to employ an agent you should select one who is a member of ARLA - the Association of Residential Letting Agents.

NOTE: If you have a property that you would like to rent out to the MoD you may wish to contact HCR group on 01256 812 700, who will send you out a pack to complete.

Rent

You will have to establish what a reasonable market rent for your property is. The local newspaper and estate agents can be useful in helping you decide this. The income you receive in rent is subject to deductions, including tax, rates, repairs/maintenance, insurance and, if you are using an agent, management fees. You may be able to offset these expenses against your tax liability.

The Contract

Make sure the Contract contains any restrictions you wish to impose and gives a clear definition of the areas of responsibility for Landlord and Tenant. Your Solicitor or Agent will be able to give you advice on what the Contract should contain.

Remember the Contract is the document that formalises, in writing, the terms you have agreed with your tenant as well as being a legal document that will assist you should you need to recover your property before or at the end of a tenancy.

Obtaining Possession

You should be aware that even when a tenancy period ends, it will be necessary to seek possession of the property through the Court if the tenant refuses to vacate. Correct legal procedure must be followed and a reputable, experienced agent can deal with the matter. It may be necessary in certain instances for a solicitor to be instructed, e.g. where possession is required due to contravention of the terms of tenancy.

The Tax Implications For You As Landlord

All income you receive from letting a property is liable for tax. You are advised to ascertain the tax situation for your own personal circumstances before letting your property.

NOTE: If you let a property, notify the tax office immediately, and keep all related paperwork. This will save time and expense at a later date.

Furnished Or Unfurnished?

Firstly, you must decide in what form your property should be rented out. To be let as furnished, the Inland Revenue states that your property "must contain at least the basic furniture required to enjoy normal everyday living and comforts.”

Naturally, if the property contains little or no furniture, it is deemed to be unfurnished. If the property contains some furnishings and there is doubt as to which category it falls into, then the Tax Inspector needs to be supplied with full details so they can make a decision.

Expenses Claimable Against Rents Received

The following can be deducted from gross rent providing they are paid by you, and not by the tenant:

- Rents, ground rents, water rates and council tax
- Insurance premiums on structure and contents
- Advertising, agent’s and legal fees relating to letting
- Lighting, heating and telephone bills (if paid by you)
- Repairs (but see below)
- Mortgage/loan interest (but see below)
- VAT on allowable expenditure

The above list is not exhaustive. If there are other items of expenditure relating to the letting out of the property, ask the Tax Inspector for their opinion on whether you can offset them against tax.

NOTE: Your married quarter rent would NOT be claimable. If the property is not available for letting for the whole of the tax year, the expenses need to be apportioned.

Claimable Repairs

The cost of maintenance/repair is allowable providing that it does not improve the property above the standard it was when first let. If the property ceases to be let, you can still claim expenses to make good damage etc. between the end of the tenancy and the end of the tax year (the expenditure must be incurred within this period).

Mortgage/Loan Interest

Since April 2000 MIRAS is no longer available to any mortgagee. If, however, a property is rented out, the owner can claim the interest on the mortgage as an expense of letting the property. The interest is then deducted from profits before tax is calculated.

NOTE: Endowment policies can NOT be offset against profits.

Overseas Postings

If you will be overseas and are using an agent, the rent you earn will have basic rate tax deducted before it is paid to you. To prevent this, contact the Inland Revenue to request a “Non-Resident Landlord Scheme Form”. This will ensure that the payments are made gross for you to declare at the end of the tax year.

Joint Ownership

Owing to the introduction of Independent Taxation for husbands and wives, the net profits from letting the property will be split 50:50 if you and your spouse are joint owners. If you have legal documentation to show that the joint ownership is other than 50:50, you can be assessed on this basis.

What Information Do I Need To Give The Tax Office

Providing your share of the gross receipts from the rental is less than £15,000 per annum, all you need to tell the Tax Office is your share of the gross receipts, your share of the allowable expenditure and the difference between the two. In most cases, this is all that is required, but DO keep invoices and receipts etc. as the Tax Inspector may wish to query your figures. Also, remember your spouse will be assessed separately for tax on their share of the net profits.

Resident and Non-resident Landlords

If you wish to still live in the property and rent out a room or if you are serving overseas, then different rules apply.

Capital Gains Tax

A property that you let is considered to be an investment, and when you sell it you will be liable to Capital Gains Tax of 28% of the gain in equity (i.e.: the difference between the sale price and the original purchase price less all expenditure: setting up costs, solicitors fees and sales costs). Capital Gains is only paid on equity gains over £8,500 per person, so if you and your partner are joint owners, that becomes £17,000. In addition there may be some Tax Relief available depending upon how long you have owned the property and how much of the property was let.

As a member of the Armed Forces, you can nominate your property as your "Only or Main Residence" while you are occupying Service Families Accommodation. If you own more than one property, you can only nominate one of them. At the point of sale your "Only or Main Residence" is exempt from Capital Gains Tax even if you are not living in it.

The Buy To Let Initiative

Looking To Invest In Rental Property?

ARLA, in conjunction with four leading mortgage lenders, launched the Buy To Let Initiative in Autumn 1996. The scheme is designed to stimulate the growth of the private rental sector by "encouraging private investors to take the opportunities given by low, highly competitive interest rates and the reasonable certainty of sustained capital growth over the coming years."

There is a wide choice of mortgages on offer through the scheme - some being geared to the purchase of single properties, others to the creation of rental portfolios of up to five properties. The flexibility of the scheme allows for a variety of repayment methods (endowment, capital & interest etc.) and also for lending to people "under full status."

The maximum amount of the loan (as expressed as a % age of the valuation figure) always depends on the lender and your own circumstances.

ARLA recommends that Buy To Let be looked at as a medium to long term investment and advises people who are interested in this scheme to:

- Look closely at the finances and ensure the rental income will cover borrowing and management cost (allowing for periods when the property is vacant between lettings) and
- Gauge the market demand for property in the area that you are looking to buy in. In essence, look at house price performance and the availability of people who want to rent.

RURAL HOME OWNERSHIP GRANTS

What are RHOGs and who provides them?

Rural Home Ownership Grants, or RHOGs as they are often called, are mainly intended to help people living in rural areas of Scotland to become first time homeowners - usually by building a house, but also by buying a suitable property. The RHOG is meant to fill the gap between the maximum level of mortgage the applicant can raise and the cost of a modest starter home.

RHOG eligibility criteria and application procedure

- Successful applicants must satisfy the following key requirements:
- be first time buyers (although some exceptions are possible)
- if a pensioner, sick or disabled with a family or local connection and have lived in the area for at least a year
- prove that they could not afford to become a homeowner without a RHOG
- prove that they could get a mortgage big enough to cover what they still have to pay for the house they want after the level of RHOG has been decided
- obtain the necessary planning and building consents
- otherwise comply with all the requirements on house size and specification (which some applicants may find restrictive)

Grant eligible costs include:

- the purchase of the house site or property
- building materials and construction costs
- legal fees
- architects and other consultancy fees
- building and planning consents
- putting services into the site (electricity, water etc)
- interest on a bridging loan from the bank or building society

Other key grant conditions include:

- restricted house and room sizes, depending on number of members in the RHOG applicant's household (although houses can be designed and constructed to permit additional rooms to be built in the roof spaces)
- a 10 year 'clawback' period on the grant, if the house is sold by the successful applicant within that period of time.
- applicants who are eligible for other grant schemes such as Crofter Housing Grants and Loans, must prove that they have been refused these grants before they can be considered for a RHOG.

How much grant is a RHOG applicant likely to get?

RHOGs vary according to how much the successful applicant can afford, but a grant of somewhere between £10,000 and £20,000 is typical.

SELF BUILD HOUSING

The term 'self build' is used when someone purchases a building plot in order to build a house to live in themselves. This covers a wide range of activities from managing, designing and building the whole house oneself to simply ordering an off-the-shelf package. Apart from finding a plot, major house renovation, conversion and large extensions raise many of the same issues as self build.

Whichever route you choose, planning the process carefully is critical. This Self Build Guide outlines the major steps in this process from the initial idea to the completed house and highlights many of the options available.

Before you embark on your project you need to be clear about your reasons for self build (financial, design requirements, environmental etc) and be aware that these considerations may conflict with each other. Furthermore the process is likely to cause stress and have unforeseen difficulties. Therefore ensure that you (and your family!) are prepared for this.

Self Build: Finding Building Plots

A building plot is a piece of land with planning permission to build a house on it (See WARNING). For most people this is the hardest and most frustrating part of the self build process. Building plots are not easy to find and at present demand is greater than supply. To maximise your chances of success you will need to be as flexible as possible about location and use as many of the following methods as possible.

Estate And Land Agents

It is definitely worth speaking to your local estate agents. Although most will only sell the occasional plot, they are still your mostly likely source. Many agents will have good contacts with property developers and landowners. They may also be aware of properties with large gardens with building plot potential. Remember to keep in contact with estate agents on a regular basis as they will rarely contact you except when they are trying to dispose of a 'difficult' property.

Large Land And Estate Owners

Many parts of the country have large estates which may contain a variety of buildings in addition to the main residence. There may be opportunities for change of use for some of these properties or there may be planning possibilities where ruins exist.

Building Plot Databases

There are a number of commercial databases which have details of building plots normally organised by county. Usually you have to pay a fee to see the plots available. These services are worth trying but don't get your hopes up too high. The best plots go very quickly and most of these databases will contain a fair number of hard to sell/undesirable plots. Many of the best plots never get onto these services. If you do subscribe to a building plot service, make sure that the plots on offer have planning permission (PP) – see WARNING.

Builders

Occasionally local builders may be prepared to sell off part of a development area, for example if they need to raise some cash quickly.

Local Authorities

Sometimes local authorities will sell off land with development potential. This may include land with commercial buildings which can either be converted or knocked down and replaced. Remember though, even if there is a house on the land, you will still need pp to convert from commercial to residential use. Some local authorities, particularly New Towns, have also been known to sell off individual plots of land to self builders instead of developers, e.g. Milton Keynes.

Development Plots

While most self builders look for single plots with pp for a single house, most developers purchase land with PP for a number of houses. If you can find a group of likeminded people, you may be able to club together to buy development land and then sub-divide it between you. If you decide to take this route, it would be strongly advisable to use a solicitor draw up a legal agreement between each member of the group prior to purchasing the land.

Own Research

It is always worth doing your own research to try and identify potential building plots, particularly in urban areas. This is best done by using a combination of aerial photographs, large scale maps and walking around an area. In general terms you are looking for potential infills, for example large back gardens or waste ground. If you locate any potential sites you will then need to try and locate the owner via the neighbours, Land Registry or local council.

Poor Quality House

In areas of high house prices, it may be financially worthwhile to purchase a poor quality house and demolish it to create a building plot. For example, some areas have poorly constructed bungalows on fairly large plots surrounded by larger houses. You may decide to risk purchasing the property before getting pp in order to keep the price down. However it is always worth speaking to the local planning officer to see what the local planning office's attitude is to this type of development.

Self Build: Evaluating Building Plots

Once you have found your prospective building plot you must evaluate it in order to judge whether it is suitable for you or not. Some of these issues should be highlighted by your solicitor but others won't be - it's down to you. The following is just a selection of the issues you should consider. Remember that a building plot with permission to build a house does not guarantee that you will be able to build a house or that you won't face some very expensive constraints.

WARNING LANDBANKING SERVICES

- There are a large number of businesses currently offering small plots of land for sale without planning permission. There are variations in the marketing but the general implication is that due to the shortage of building land, these plots have a reasonable chance of obtaining planning permission. Be warned that if you buy one of these plots you are simply buying an overpriced parcel of agricultural land, costing you up to 10 times the current market value with little likelihood of ever obtaining planning permission. Furthermore some of these landbanking firms have been shut down by the FSA with the result that investors have lost their money and not received any land.

Status Of Planning Permission

Ensure that the plot you are buying has planning permission and confirm what type of PP it has (outline or detailed) and how long is remaining. Unless the PP is for exactly what you want, enquire with the local planning office as to their attitude to any changes you intend to propose.

Status Of Area

If in open or rural area what is likely to happen to land in vicinity of the plot? What is the status of the surrounding land in the local development plan. Otherwise you may find that you have a new industrial estate as your neighbour.

Design Implications

Your building plot should come with Outline Planning Permission (OPP) for a house - however there will be design constraints. Type of area, local housing style, conservation area. If, for example, you want to build a German steel framed house you will need a plot in a suitable area.

Utilities And Services

Ascertain what the utilities (electricity, gas, water, phone) situation is for the plot. Is the plot attached to these already or are they nearby. Enquire as to how much it will cost to connect your new house to the utilities and whether there will be any difficulties in doing so.

Environmental Issues

Ensure that the building plot is not on a flood plain and be wary of any nearby streams. Otherwise you may find your property difficult or impossible to insure, and potentially uninhabitable. Be particularly careful with brownfield sites, and check its historic use in case there is any chemical contamination from, for example, a previous industrial use.

Hidden Legal Dangers

Make sure you appoint a good solicitor, preferably one with experience of conveyancing land. Difficulties you may encounter are restrictive land covenants (legal restrictions on the land use) and ransom strips (where someone retains ownership of a vital piece of land which may, for example, prevent you from accessing your property).

Slopes, Heights And Angles

Check the height and angle of any slopes on your plot and ensure that you understand the implications of the positioning of your house from the point of view of natural light in the house and shadows in the garden.

Self Build Mortgages

Mortgages for self build are specialist products and many lenders do not offer them. However the self build mortgage market has expanded considerably in recent years and as long as your project is correctly planned and presented, you should have little difficulty in obtaining a mortgage.

The major difference between a self build mortgage and a conventional house mortgage is that with the self build version you will receive your mortgage funds in several stages as your house build progresses, compared with a single lump sum. Within this overall structure there are a number of variations.

How Do Self Build Mortgages Work?

A self build mortgage may cover the purchase of the building plot (depending on the lender). For the build itself, the mortgage will be paid to you in 4-6 stages which coincide with completion stages of the build (e.g. completion of the foundations). There are two main types of stage payment, the difference between them being in the timing of the stage payments.

- Arrears-Based Mortgage
With arrears based payments, you will receive the stage payment after the stage is completed. This is safer for the lender but may cause you cash flow difficulties unless you have sufficient funds of your own.
- Advance Stage Payment Scheme
With the Advance Stage scheme you receive your stage payment before you commence a stage. Due to the added risk to the lender, this type of mortgage is usually more expensive.

Most lenders offer the arrears based scheme although an increasing number now offer the advance payment scheme. If you have sufficient personal funds and/or a very understanding builder, you will generally find it cheaper to go for the arrears method as it should be cheaper.

How Much Can I Borrow

The amount you can borrow for your self build will vary from lender to lender. Some will only allow you to borrow for the build itself; others will offer a mortgage for both the building plot and the build. You can borrow as much as 95% of the cost of the land and build with some lenders, although many will not lend more than 75%. Remember that if you borrow a high percentage of the cost, it is likely that you will have to pay a higher interest rate.

Mortgage Requirements And Restrictions

Each lender will have some restrictions on the mortgage. These may include the following:

- Sufficient Income for two mortgages.
- If you intend to keep your existing mortgage, your lender will want to ensure that you have sufficient income to pay two mortgages.
- Some lenders will insist that all the building work is done by professional builders/contractors.
- Some lenders will restrict the types of the materials you can use in your build so that your house is easy to re-sell.
- Lenders will usually insist that the self build is detached and is for owner occupation.
- Lenders will insist that the land has a minimum amount of planning consent remaining, for example two years.
- Lenders will insist that appropriate insurance is in place during the building work itself and that an appropriate warranty is obtained at the end of the build.

Mortgage Providers

There are approximately 30 providers of self build mortgages in the UK. Some of these providers only deal with the self build market, but the majority are high street lenders. A few of the providers only deal with a niche of the self build market, such as lenders focused on green self build.

Types Of Mortgage

Remember even with self build mortgages you are not necessarily limited to the conventional variable rate mortgage. It should be possible to locate fixed rate, tracker and self certification mortgages.

Other Funding Options

Not everyone wants, or needs a mortgage. You may be able to fund your build in other, cheaper ways. For example, if you already own a house with substantial equity, it may be cheaper to re-mortgage your house with a larger loan and use this to fund your self build. A re-mortgage on an existing property should always work out cheaper than a self build mortgage. You may also wish to consider selling your existing property and moving into rented accommodation or a caravan on site.

Self Build : Construction Options

One of the advantages of self-build is that it gives you a lot of flexibility over the method of construction. Some of the construction options are only open to the self builder as no UK developers use them. The method you finally choose will be determined by a number of factors including:

- Design Preference
- Budget
- Location of Plot
- Level of Your Input to Build
- Resale Issues

The main construction options open to you in the UK are as follows:

- Timber Frame
- Brick and Block
- Steel Frame
- Alternative Building Methods
These include Beco, Styrostone, Structured Insulated Panels (SIPs) and timber clad.
- Eco Building Some cross-over with other methods but also specific eco methods e.g. straw. May find it difficult to get mortgage and resell.

Self Build : House Design

When self building there are number of constraints on your design. These are:

- Off-the-Shelf vs Unique
- Plot and Location
- Budget
- Choice of Architect or Designer
- Your Imagination

There are several professionals who may help you to design your home. Don't dismiss non architects out of hand. Who you choose should partly depends on the type and complexity of design you have in mind as many architects will have experience and interest in particular types of design.

As with any building professional, try and find an architect on the basis of personal recommendation. If this is not possible ensure that you have a detailed preliminary meeting with them first (to see if you are at least on the same wavelength) and make sure that you see a portfolio of their work. If possible speak to some of their previous clients.

Architects

An architect is an individual who is professionally qualified to design buildings. Unless you are buying an off the shelf package, such as a kit house, it is usual to employ an architect in order to design your house. It is also usual (but not obligatory) for your architect to take overall responsibility for the project including managing the build itself.

Architectural Draughtsmen and Technicians

These are trained in building construction and techniques. For simple projects, extensions and renovations, an experienced Architectural Draftsman or Technician may be more appropriate than an architect.

Building Surveyor

Building surveyors are also professionally qualified. Some also have additional design qualifications such as architectural technician and this combination produces some excellent house designers.

Structural Engineer

You will probably also need to consult a structural engineer, particularly if with open plan or complex designs. They will calculate the correct loadings, and can tell you what is and what is not possible.

Self Build : Planning Permission And Legal Consents

When you plan to build, extend or alter the use of a property you will generally need to consider two separate legal issues - Planning Permission and Building Regulations (or Building Control).

All self builds and the majority of building projects which involve conversions or extensions will require planning permission. Planning Permission consists of national regulations (i.e. England and Wales have one set of regulations, Scotland another) but are administered by local authorities or in the national parks by the Park Authorities. However, unlike building regulations, the application of planning permission differs significantly from area to area due to differing local development plans, local interpretation of the regulations and the significant degree of subjectivity involved in the process. For example, permission may depend on an appropriate design, which is of course an area very much open to debate!

Therefore, while National planning guidance will give you an indication of whether you need planning permission or not and which minor works you can carry out without permission, it is essential that you contact your local planning authority as early in the process as possible to obtain local guidance and advice.

There are two levels of planning permission, and you will encounter building plots with either of these.

- Outline Planning Permission (OPP)
This is simply permission for the principle of development on a site, for example a 4 bed house. This means that the details of the size, dimensions, materials and access can be decided at a later date. If a plot is granted OPP, you will still need to make a supplementary application for full planning permission at a later date and no building work can be undertaken on OPP alone. OPP status is usually valid for three years at which point reapplication will need to be made.

- Detailed Planning Permission/Full Planning Permission
Detailed (or full) planning permission (FPP) outlines exactly what is going to be built including dimensions, room layouts and building materials. As soon as FPP is granted building work may commence. Sometimes conditions of approval will be attached and these must be complied with during the project. Detailed planning permission is valid for three years.

The Planning Process

The precise process will depend on your Local Authority (LA), but the general process is as follows:

- LA receives planning application and checks to see if correct. If any mistakes are identified, the application is usually returned.
- Once the application is verified it will be entered on a statutory register. At this point an 8 week period begins in which the application should be considered.
- Allocation of application to either a planning officer or for committee consideration. Usually simple planning applications never go to a planning committee but are decided at officer level.
- There then follows a period of public consultation about the application. The extent of this will depend on the impact of the development and the type of area but it will always include local neighbours. This process normally last 3 weeks.
- Once the LA has received all the necessary responses, the Planning Officer will assess the proposal against the LA planning policies. The Planning Officer will then make a decision regarding the application or a recommendation for the planning committee.
- If there is a problem with your application, the Planning Officer may contact you to try and resolve it. It is more likely though that it will be refused. You will then need to re-submit an amended proposal or appeal against the decision.

Finally, if you plan changes to an existing property you may need to consider other regulations and consents, including the following:

- Conservation Areas (protection of property and fences, walls etc)
- Tree Protection Orders (protection from removal and alteration)
- Rights of Way (protection for rights of way from development)
- Listed Building Consent (consent to demolish, extend or alter)
- Protection of Wildlife (eg protection of bats living in roof)

Self Build : Building Control Regulations And Standards

When you plan to build, extend or alter a property you will generally need to consider two separate issues - Building Control (or Regulations) and Planning Permission.

The vast majority of building projects are required to comply with Building Control (known as Standards in Scotland). They exist to ensure the health and safety of people using buildings and to provide for energy conservation and access to and from buildings.

Building Regulations are national regulations (i.e. England and Wales have one set of regulations, Scotland another) but are administered by local authorities. To comply with them, you, your builder or architect simply contacts your local authority Building Control Officer who will send you a form to complete which will include details and diagrams of the intended work. After you return this to your local authority you will be either receive Approval or a request for further information/clarification.

Once the Building Control Officer is satisfied with your plans you will receive Building Control Approval (or a Warrant). This process usually takes approx. 6-8 weeks. Once the building work is completed, it is likely that the Building Control Officer will want to inspect the work to ensure that it complies with the approval granted.

Self Build: Insurance

While you are actually constructing your house, you will probably need insurance in order to protect yourself and to meet the requirements of your mortgage lender. In particular, you are looking for insurance to protect yourself against the following claims:

- Contractor and third party claims
To protect yourself against claims for injury or death of people working on your site or any other third party.
- Employer's liability insurance
To protect yourself against any claims in your role as a building employer.
- Site and Materials
To protect yourself against loss, theft or damage of building materials and your partially completed house.
- Equipment
To protect yourself against loss, theft or damage to equipment on site.

Your precise insurance requirements will depend on the level of your involvement in the self build. For example, if the whole build is being done by a single builder, it is unlikely that you will need to insure yourself as an employer. If however, you are managing the entire build and directly employing individual contractors it is likely that you are acting as an employer. As every situation is different, it is essential that you carefully specify your requirements to your insurer/broker.

Most self builders take out an 'All Risks' policy with a specialist broker.

Self Build: Structural Warranties And Guarantees

Building Societies and Banks generally require that newly built houses have a structural warranty and guarantee. It is general practice for builders of new homes to offer a 10 year structural guarantee, as this is usually a requirement for any mortgage. These guarantees are essentially a ten-year insurance policy which covers the home owner against physical damage to the property caused by a defect which results from the builder failing to construct it to the required standards.

Organisations who provide such guarantees include the National House Building Council (NHBC) and Zurich Mutual. A new scheme has also been launched by LABC (Local Authority Building Control). NHBC Solo for Self Build NHBC's Solo for Self Build is a 10-year warranty and insurance policy, designed exclusively for individuals who want to build their own home (or contract a builder to carry out all or part of the work), and live in it themselves.

LABC Self Build Warranty

Designed specifically for individuals building their own homes - both new build and conversions - to provide peace of mind. Quality is rewarded through competitive premiums and service based on extensive experience of self build projects.

Zurich Building Guarantee

Zurich Building Guarantee provides both Building Control services and new home warranty products for newly built homes and major refurbishments for sale or for rent. Zurich offer a range of house warranties including one specifically for self builders, known as the Zurich '10' policy.

Self Build: Reclaiming Vat

One of the advantages of self build and some conversion projects (as opposed to house extensions) is that you reclaim most (but not all) of the VAT you have incurred in building your house. This is because new houses are zero rated for VAT purposes. However to ensure that you can make this claim you must be well organised and prompt. It is essential that you read and understand the relevant rules and regulations before you start your project otherwise you may find yourself ineligible to claim. Also keep an eye out for any changes to the rules during your project.

Who is responsible for the reclaim scheme? All VAT reclaims are handled by HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC). The HMRC web site is a bit of a nightmare to navigate however, log onto www.hmrc.gov.uk and use the search for 'VAT Notice 719', which explains in detail (27 pages) how HMRC operate the self build VAT scheme.

Other Self Builders

If you can find other self builders in your area, this can be a very useful source of advice, support and encouragement. It may also provide practical solutions to problems such as building plot location as you may be able to club together to buy a large building or development plot and then sub-divide it. Whether you can find local self builders is a bit hit or miss. One way is through online discussion forums. If you are interested in green construction methods you may be able to find a local group.

Self Build : Miscellaneous Points To Consider

In addition to the points already covered in this selfbuild guide, there are a few other issues you must consider before embarking on your selfbuild.

Where to Live during Selfbuild?

You must determine very early in the process where you intend to live during your self build, e.g. within your existing house, in rented accommodation, on perhaps on site in a caravan. This is because where you live will have a knock-on effect on several other aspects of your self build planning and the build itself. This is particularly important if you need a mortgage and/or will be managing the building site.

- Live within Existing Home
Will you be able to satisfy your lender that you have sufficient income for two mortgages? Is your existing home close enough to your building site?
- Rented Accommodation
Have you budgeted sufficient rental money for the (almost) inevitable delays in completing your self build? Is there rented accommodation available near your plot?
- Live on Site
Do you require planning permission for an on-site caravan?

Sourcing Materials

Depending on the style of self build you undertake, you may need to select anything from all of your building materials to none if buying a package. If you are buying materials, you should try and negotiate discounts with builders merchants and be prepared to haggle.

Heating Systems

The choice of options for your new house may appear overwhelming. One issue you should consider early on in your planning is your choice of heating system such as conventional or underfloor heating. If this is important to you, you must decide early on in the planning process (as this may impact upon the design of your property), the construction method, materials used, planning permission and building regulations.

MOVING OVERSEAS

The JSHAO's work is UK based, but increasingly individuals are seeking housing opportunities overseas. While not experts we have learnt a few things over the years. Sourcing information has also become much easier on the internet. So here are a few guidelines and some websites that we have found useful.

Useful Information

- Any property purchase should involve the careful choice of both Solicitor and Financial Adviser. This is even more crucial when purchasing overseas.
- You will need a Solicitor who specialises in purchasing overseas or a local Solicitor in the country of choice.
- Unless you are truly fluent in the language, you may also need a translator.
- A UK based Mortgage Lender is unlikely to lend money on an overseas property - this is because they are unable to repossess the property if you default on the loan
- There are some UK based Financial Institutions that have overseas partners or subsidiaries.
- Make sure you do your research thoroughly. If you make a wrong move it can be incredibly expensive, both in financial and emotional terms.
- Decide early if you need a 'bolt-hole' in the UK and budget in an appropriate property (although you can let this out so it will probably pay for itself).
- Don't forget to check out appropriate visas, work permits etc. Most countries have excellent websites where you can start this process.

NOTE: Most of our information has come from websites. Many of these are trying to sell you something but the information is still valid.

APPENDIX 2

A Guide to Major Regional Housing Associations

The associations listed are the larger widespread housing associations in each area.

When using this information, please bear in mind the following points:

- Only Head Office contact numbers are listed. You will need to ask for the relevant local office numbers when you ring
- The list is by no means exhaustive
- Some of the associations listed may not be able to help either because they only take council nominations or because they close their waiting lists from time to time
- Where associations are referred to as being part of the MOD Nomination Scheme please check in the appropriate Chapter as certain areas only are covered by the scheme
- Housing associations set up to manage local authority stock have largely been excluded from this section
