The Queen's Awards for Enterprise are the UK's most prestigious business awards, given only to companies or individuals who are outstanding in their field.

Previously known as the Queen's Awards to Industry, the first Awards were given in 1966.

This year there is a total of 141 business winners: 105 for International Trade, 24 for Innovation and 12 for Sustainable Development.

International Trade: Winners have demonstrated that their business has achieved substantial growth in overseas earnings and in commercial success (for their business size and sector) through either outstanding achievement over 3 years or continuous achievement over 6 years.

Innovation: Winners have demonstrated that their business has substantially improved in areas of performance and commercial success by either outstanding innovation, continued over at least 2 years, or continuous innovation and development over at least 5 years.

Innovation achievements are assessed for: invention, design or production; performance of services and products; marketing and distribution; or after-sales support of goods or services.

Sustainable Development: Winners in this category demonstrate commercially successful products, services and approaches to management which have major benefits for the environment, society and the wider economy, either by outstanding advance over at least 2 years or continuous achievement over 5 years.

Sustainable Development achievements are assessed for: invention, design, production, performance, marketing, distribution, after-sales support of goods or services; or management of resources or people and relationships with other organisations (or their representatives).

Businesses can enter more than one Award category as long as they meet the criteria.

The Queen's Award for Enterprise Promotion recognises people who have played an outstanding role in promoting the growth of business enterprise and/or entrepreneurial skills and attitudes in others, for example by giving up their time to help potential entrepreneurs in education or in starting a business. There are 6 recipients this year, one of them for Lifetime Achievement.

The Queen's Awards Office accepts no responsibility for the accuracy of the details contained herein. The summaries have been approved by the respective winners and are provided merely as a guide to assist the media.

'Employees' refers to the number of staff in the UK. Some organisations also have employees overseas.

Cambridge
CB2 1AB

Website: www.cambridge-intelligence.com
Employees: 7
Immediate Parent: N/A
CEO and Founder: Dr Joe Parry
Contact for press enquiries: Andrew Disney
Tel: 01223 362000
Email: andrew@cambridge-intelligence.com

The small company, Cambridge Intelligence Ltd wins an Innovation Award for developing KeyLines, a unique data visualisation tool-kit. The new software product enables clients rapidly to identify patterns and analyse connections within large quantities of data. Supported by the company's team of experts, it can be tailored to meet many applications. Clients are empowered to extract significant, useful information from, often vast, internal data resources. Running on a web-browser, the software can be deployed readily within almost all existing information technology infrastructures of companies. Incorporating advanced technology, the innovative product is making data visualisation possible in organisations, including start-up companies, where, previously, it was not available. The flexible, and commercially successful, product has been deployed on tasks as varied as detecting fraud, monitoring critical infrastructure and finding thought-leaders on Twitter.

Ekioh Ltd

17b Sturton Street
Cambridgeshire
CB1 2SN

Website: www.ekioh.com
Employees: 8
Immediate Parent: N/A
CEO: Mr Piers Wombwell
Contact for press enquiries: Stephen Reeder
Tel: 07799 765095
Email: info@ekioh.com

The small company Ekioh Ltd wins an Innovation Award for designing, developing and commercialising a graphics engine for television top-boxes. The product facilitates the delivery, for example, of programme guide data, programme management and video-on-demand catalogues. Incorporating scalable vector graphics technology, it is the fastest, most compact and flexible device of its kind and, importantly, it successfully overcomes constraints imposed by the power, and cost, limitations of top-boxes, enabling them to deliver easy-to use facilities incorporating imaginative graphic displays. It is contributing significantly to meeting growing worldwide market demand for visually-compelling television management products; the majority of televisions not having integrated multi-functional user-interfaces, relying instead on top-boxes. The current growth of export sales of the engine seems set to continue for the foreseeable future.

Heraeus Noblelight Ltd

Tel: +49 6181 35 5706
Email: Joerg.wetterau@heraeus.com

An Innovation Award is made to Heraeus Noblelight Ltd for developing and applying an automated process for arc lamp manufacture. The novel process comprises single-piece flow production cells using proprietary auto-assembly equipment. Combining modern electrical, mechanical and software components to replicate manual tasks, the process is the first to automate the special manual skills previously involved in making satisfactory glass-to-metal seals and meeting the tight tolerances required. The process has led, not only to greater production yields and flexibility, but to higher consistency, standardisation and lifetimes of lamps. The development has enabled the company to compete successfully with overseas imports, increase market share and secure its position as technology leader in the sector.

Thermoteknix Systems Ltd

Teknix House
2 Pembroke Avenue
Waterbeach
Cambridge
CB25 9QR

Website: www.thermoteknix.co.uk

Contact for press enquiries: Jez Ford
Tel: 01223 204 000
Email: j.ford@thermoteknix.com

Thermoteknix Systems Ltd wins an Innovation Award for developing a miniature, thermal-imaging camera that clips onto night-vision goggles. The fusion of thermal-imaging with image-intensification produces an innovative detection device that can operate in darkness and extremely low light conditions. The device is used by military, surveillance and others performing defence and security activities. Incorporating specialist lens design, novel algorithms and patented calibration techniques, the product has no mechanical moving parts, requires no regular sensor calibrations and provides continuous 40 degrees fields of view. It is robust, reliable and completely silent. Relative to alternatives, it requires less power, is lighter and less expensive and, crucially, extends the detection capability of patrol personnel operating in combat situations. The valuable product is having a good commercial impact on the company.

Founded in 2007 and located in Harlow Essex, European SprayDry Technologies LLP design, manufacture and provide ongoing support of industrial-scale spray-drying equipment. It wins the Queen's Award for International Trade for outstanding growth in its export earnings of 2375% in the last three years. The company is clear in its route to strategic growth and note that over 70% of orders are via referrals or word of mouth. Its marketing strategy is therefore not reliant on extensive generic marketing campaigns and whilst the company has advertised in trade magazines and attended trade exhibitions, it has not needed to for over five years. The remaining 30% of business is generated through its website, which is continually updated and gives potential clients a clear understanding of the business. European SprayDry actively uses UKTI for support and has previously attended trade missions and comments that they have found the UKTI invaluable in terms of specific market information.

HiBreeds International Ltd

Website: www.premierexports.co.uk
Employees: 10
Immediate Parent: N/A
Director: Mr Bala Venkata Raju Bhogadi
Contact for press enquiries: Mr Abhishek Biyani
Tel: 01923 250086
Email: Abhishek@premierexports.co.uk

Premier Exports London Ltd, began trading in 2010 and specialises in the export of fast moving consumer goods, including its own brand of 'Divine and Rifle'. The company researches its markets, carefully selecting those with long term potential, using local agents and distributors in the first instance to develop brand presence and market knowledge. Trade shows and missions are important to the growth of the overseas markets and key markets are the Middle East and Africa. However, Premier also exports to around 24 countries that include China and the USA. It wins the Queen's Award for International Trade for outstanding overseas sales growth over the last three years.

Pumptronics Ltd

Folgate Road
North Walsham
Norfolk
NR28 0AJ

Website: www.pumptronics.co.uk
Employees: 14
Immediate Parent: Premier Pump and Tank Company Ltd
Director: Mr Andrew Olive
Contact for press enquiries: Andrew Olive
Tel: 01692 500640
Email: andrew@pumptronics.co.uk

Founded in 1997 and located in North Walsham, Norfolk, Pumptronics Ltd supply fuel dispensing equipment for use on retail service stations and commercial fuel bunkering depots. The company is owned by Premier Pump and Tank Company Ltd. Although trading for some 18 years, the company has only recently entered the export market, which, it acknowledges, needed a completely different strategy from its domestic activities. Domestic sales are created by distributors, but overseas sales are achieved by agents, many of whom look for exclusivity, an approach that the company resists. It is clear that there has been great effort put into learning about the idiosyncrasies of exporting, and the company has applied a methodological approach. It wins the Queen's Award for International Trade for outstanding growth in its export earnings of 272% in the last three years.

Quixant Plc

Aisle Barn
100 High Street

A Sustainable Development Award is made to Anglian Water Services Ltd for embedding sustainability throughout its operations. It has adopted a commendable range of initiatives to improve the performance of itself and improve the sustainability of customers, supply chain organisations and others within the water industry. It achieved the lowest leak-rate in the industry, was top-rated in Ofwat's independent qualitative customer satisfaction surveys in 2013 and 2014 and was the first water company to achieve the Carbon Trust Water Standard. Through its Energy Initiative, it reduced annual energy bills by fifteen million pounds. It offers pro-active water management services, involving smart-meter monitoring, leading to significantly reduced customer water consumption. In partnership with other environmentally-conscious organisations, it improved its publicly-accessible land; three of its parks maintaining Green Flag status in 2014. It participates in numerous education and outreach programmes furthering environmentally-friendly objectives.

Chris Pichon earns a Lifetime Achievement Award for Enterprise Promotion following 18 years leading Wenta, the Hertfordshire based Enterprise Agency. As CEO, Mr Pichon transformed Wenta into one of the country's leading Enterprise Agencies, today employing over 55 staff with an annual turnover of £3m. In 2014, Wenta's staff assisted more than 1200 new businesses to start across Hertfordshire and Bedfordshire, and provided business skills training to over 4500 people. These programmes were part funded through Wenta's managed workspace centres of over 100,000 sq ft, as well as from RGF, ERDF and DWP programmes. Over 500 established small businesses are supported through these business centres. Mr Pichon has recently transferred to become Chairman of Wenta, as well as Chairman of The National Enterprise Network.

The small company, Ezi-Dock Systems Ltd, wins an Innovation Award for designing and manufacturing a novel product for transferring toxic ingredients. Comprising a single-use package, it facilitates the transfer of potentially hazardous materials, safely and efficiently, without risk to operators from atmospheric or other contamination. Incorporating a unique concept enabling incineration with standard waste, the equipment eliminates the expense of cleaning with solvents and maintenance by specialist waste contractors associated with alternatives. It is replacing the utilisation of transfer stations traditionally used in the pharmaceutical industry. The new equipment reduces health risks to employers and aids employers to improve production facilities and comply with rigorous standards. As a result, the company is becoming a world leader in the technology and increasing its turnover, particularly in export markets.

The small company, Retrogenix Ltd, wins an Award for developing a method of identifying specific proteins in human cells which drugs and other molecules interact with. It underpins a new service enabling pharmaceutical companies to receive faster, more accurate results at lower cost than previously. Capable of simultaneously screening 3,500 human proteins, the new technology facilitates a six-fold increase in the identification rate of relevant protein interactions; thus it is helping to understand, for example, how viruses attack human cells and whether particular drugs are likely to be toxic. The new service is saving an estimated 9.5 million pounds annually on drug development; its cost-effectiveness prompting re-assessments of existing drugs to discover new properties and commencement of work on promising new candidate drugs.

The small company, Tamper Technologies Ltd, wins an Innovation Award for designing and manufacturing tamper-evident tape. Supplied to manufacturers of security bags and similar devices, it prevents unauthorised personnel from opening them and covering their tracks. Protecting against theft, terrorism and counterfeiting, the tape is applied during manufacture, not being sealed permanently until contents have been enclosed and a proprietary liner deliberately removed. Exploiting advances in ink and adhesives technologies, it responds to tampering when in service. Once sealed, the tape bonds to the device material and, if attempts are made to remove it, words are impregnated, semi-permanently, on the material; such words being difficult to remove. The enhanced products are used by a variety of customers, including international airlines, European banks and Homeland Security in America.

Wavestore Ltd wins an Innovation Award for developing video management software which enables the surveillance of any number of sites. The software allows operators to manage video recording networks which comprise many cameras, sensors, access control devices and storage media. It unifies a broad range of functions, including controlling camera movements and performing analytics functions, such as people counting and facial recognition. The proprietary “de-warping” function for 360 degree cameras allows specific regions of interest to be inspected, whilst simultaneously monitoring and recording the entire field of vision - a task previously requiring an array of separate cameras. It allows third party systems to be integrated into the software, and allows customers to continue to use existing equipment without constraints. The software indexes items with virtually instantaneous identification of specific images from very large storage. The product enables customers to create innovative solutions to solve their security needs, delivering enhanced efficiency at a reduced cost. The company also wins the Queen’s Award for International Trade.

A Sustainable Development Award is made to Howad Ltd T/A incognito® for applying ethical standards to developing a range of insect repellents, which were the first DEET-free products of their kind. The products, which are 100 per cent natural and biodegradable, are extracted by a chemical-free process not requiring pesticides or fertilisers. Ingredients are grown in nitrate-free soils and extracted from plants by steam distillation. Being biodegradable, they do not pollute groundwater; the development saving, annually, many thousands of litres of pesticide from entering the environment. The company further improved its environmental footprint by reducing packaging by up to 50 per cent, incorporating recycled plastic in its bottles, achieving an overall recycling rate of 95 per cent and, through its Plant a Tree Today foundation, becoming carbon positive.

An Innovation Award is made to Aqua Cooling Solutions Ltd for developing a leak prevention system. It is designed for water-cooled equipment cabinets deployed in computer installations, such as data-centres. The patented system provides safe removal of waste heat generated in densely populated equipment racks. A key component ensures that water circulates at negative pressure; thus, potential water damage to electrical equipment is prevented. The product can be scaled to suit a range of room sizes and densities and works with various ambient water temperatures. Proprietary dew point controls prevent condensation. The new device facilitates heat recovery rates exceeding capabilities of other air-conditioning systems. It offers a safe, energy-efficient solution to problems of accommodating increasing concentrations of computer power. It is enabling the company to penetrate a new market sector.

An Innovation Award is made to Doyle and Tratt Products Ltd for devising the world's first universal energy-saving dimmer-switch for LED lighting. The majority of the lamp systems on the market today incorporate LED technology; the drive circuitry varying considerably between types. There were many challenges in designing a dimmer-switch applicable to any make of lamp, ensuring that it can both control the low electrical loads of LED lights and do so without flickering. Each dimmer-switch offers three operating modes from which users make selections according to particular lighting type. Thus, the brightness of dimmable LED lighting of all types can be adjusted smoothly. These compact products can be retro-fitted in place of traditional dimmer-switches, or a modular version is available to fit existing faceplates. Supplied to many major lighting companies worldwide, the innovation is leading to significant uptake of energy saving lighting by consumers, hitherto deterred by the incompatibility of other dimmers with LED lights.

An Innovation Award is made to Elekta Ltd for developing a high-resolution, multi-leaf collimator, called Agility. Used within linear accelerators, it is the world's fastest and most accurate high-resolution beam-shaping system. It facilitates targeting of radiotherapy treatments, destroying tumours with minimal healthy tissue damage. Incorporating Rubicon optical technology, it controls collimator leaves at speeds and accuracies surpassing those of previous generation equipment. Thus, radiation beams can be shaped precisely and speedily to fit unique tumour contours and conform precisely to treatment areas. The novel equipment supports a broad spectrum of modern therapies and has led to reducing treatment times by up to 60 per cent.; thus improving treatment and prognoses for cancer patients. It is enabling the company to thrive in a highly competitive world market.

Established in 2001, Zinc Ahead Ltd is the world's leading provider of software solutions which enable life science companies to comply with the requirements of regulatory bodies governing the promotion of pharmaceutical and other healthcare products. The company is a 2013 Queen's Award for International Trade winner and it wins the Queen's Award for International Trade this year for outstanding growth in its export earnings of 109% in the last three years. The company has reacted to changes in the life science industry as it has become more global, while individual customers' operations have become more centrally focused. Zinc Ahead has responded by establishing local regional offices (Basel, San Francisco and Tokyo) to support existing business. In addition, an 'inside sales' team has been created to generate new business both in new territories and with existing customers. This strategy has resulted in the company growing and penetrating into new markets.

An innovation Award is made to Renishaw Plc for the development and manufacture of RESOLUTE, a family of non-contact, optical position feedback devices. RESOLUTE enables a step change in the performance of motion control systems used in manufacturing and other environments. Suitable for the most demanding applications, it can determine position to within one nanometre with motion speeds of up to 100 metres per second. Incorporating proprietary technology, its design reduces the probability of failure while accommodating wide installation tolerances and eliminating the traditional trade-off between fine resolution and high motion speeds. RESOLUTE is able to operate over extensive temperature ranges and in ultra-high vacuum environments. It is employed in a diverse variety of applications including safety-critical position feedback for medical robots, the control of precision metalworking machines, the manufacture of flat panel displays and the production of semiconductors.

An Innovation Award is made to Spirax-Sarco Engineering Plc for the design and manufacture of a novel flow-meter, the TVA flow-meter. The device measures steam mass flows in many environments worldwide, including healthcare organisations, breweries, university campuses and petrochemical industries. Incorporating a proprietary strain gauge and mathematical algorithms, it can measure the high flow rates encountered such as in hospital sterilisers and low rates associated with small leaks, without invoking velocities outside safety limits. For example, droplets of condensate that cause metal erosion and lead to expensive repairs are detected early. It informs customers of quality, CO2 content and costs of steam usage; thus energy efficiency is improved and costs and carbon dioxide emissions are reduced. The innovation is benefiting the company from higher sales and global market penetration.

Westwind Air Bearings wins an Innovation Award for designing and developing high-speed drilling spindles utilised in printed circuit-board manufacture. Incorporating patented technology and proprietary air bearings, the new spindle has a large working-speed range from 20,000 revolutions per minute, for drilling large holes, to 200,000 revolutions per minute for drilling small holes, of approximately 0.075 millimetres diameter. To enable the high speeds without dynamic instability, heavy damping was achieved through water-cooled bearing sleeves and specially-designed assemblies; the extraction of generated heat being one of the many challenges that were overcome in the development. The spindle improves printed circuit-board machining, giving higher accuracy of hole placements and improved thermal performance. Higher spindle reliability, longer spindle lifetimes and easier bearing sleeve replacement reduce machine running costs and improve customer profits.

A third Sustainable Development Award is made to Clinton Devon Estates for implementing its Smart Growth programme, which, between 2010 and 2014, delivered benefits worth over £50 million to the Estate and local communities. Through commitment to efficient farming and empowering employees, it reduced carbon and waste generation, lowered potable water consumption, enhanced biodiversity and generated over £2 million for charitable causes. It installed slurry-storage facilities enabling efficient manure spreading; reducing fertiliser requirements and water pollution and improving land fertility. Other measures included optimising wood harvesting, re-using low-grade wood for biomass heating and processing culled venison for market sales. In five years, 100,000 kilowatt hours of renewable electricity were produced, 8,000 tonnes of biomass and 40 million litres of natural water supplied; saving over 4,500 tonnes of carbon emissions.

Richard Holt has had a significant and growing impact in the South West in linking enterprise promotion and design, with an emphasis on the creative industries. As the Manager of Art, Design and Enterprise at Somerset College of Arts and Technology, he identified an enterprise support gap. In response he opened the Creative Innovation Centre (CIC) in June 2012. Located in Taunton, the CIC is a non-profit community interest company offering a unique blend of creative community access and business enterprise training, and now supports over 130 artists, 45 designers and 95 musicians, and exhibits over 400 paintings and sculptures. In just over two years this creative space has been used by 6,000 community members and enabled over 1,000 start-ups, SMEs and other businesses to take part in a range of enterprise-based training and workshop activities.

GeoPost UK Ltd wins an Innovation Award for developing the 'Predict' service, which provides internet shoppers with dependable, one-hour windows in which door-step deliveries are made. The trail-blazing service, which incorporates route optimisation software, is interactive and live; parcel addressees being able to re-arrange delivery addresses, times and dates to suit their convenience through text or e-mail messages. Having high success rates at hitting agreed target times, the innovative service has improved customer satisfaction significantly. Consequently, the company has become the preferred choice carrier for retailers whose success depends on satisfied customers making repeat purchases. In addition, drivers have become more productive, despite increased road congestion, and, thus, enjoy increased wages. Through implementing the service, the company has become the number one UK domestic parcels deliverer.

An Innovation Award is made to Grey Technology Ltd (Gtech) for developing a new type of cordless powered vacuum cleaner. Dispensing with the cord, bag and cyclone technology of more traditional designs, Gtech AirRam uses only 100W of energy yet matches the cleaning performance of leading mains vacuums on carpets and hard floors. The novel design combined with the latest Li-ion battery technology gives a run time of 40 minutes making it capable of cleaning even the busiest of homes on a single charge. AirRam doesn't collect dust and debris into a bag or cylinder; instead its unique technology compresses the dirt into bales that are tipped into the bin. Lightweight at only 3.5kg it is easy to manoeuvre compared to other upright vacuums. AirRam's high performance, convenient, cordless cleaning offers consumers a real alternative to mains powered vacuum cleaners, making it commercially very successful.

An Innovation Award is made to Prometheus Medical Ltd for the design and development of the Russell Chest Seal, a disposable device that enables patients to breath after receiving severe chest injuries. Serious chest injuries often involve a hole being made in the chest wall which can cause lung collapse and affect the patient's ability to breathe. The patented seal incorporates valves and a proprietary gel, which conforms closely to chest shapes around wounds and sticks effectively to skin, even if covered in blood. The valves, which can operate at low pressures, eliminate gases and liquids from the pleural cavity more effectively than alternative products. Being tolerant of a wide range of storage conditions, the life-saving device has been adopted by UK ambulance trusts and deployed by emergency and military services at home and abroad.

An Innovation Award is made to Proserve Ltd for designing an automated system for remotely filling 'grout' bags with cement grout. Forming foundations between underwater structures and the sea-bed, the bags prevent grout from being washed away. They stabilise, for example, supports for pipes laid on the sea-bed and revetment protective structures. Robust bags, a novel method of attaching them to structures before placement and a mechanism for their complete filling from the surface were developed; the shape and linkage of the bag folds being important features. The system reduces the thoroughness of sea-bed preparation required prior to construction, thus reducing costs whilst increasing foundation stability and lifetimes. It has been deployed on many of the world's largest construction projects, some of which could not have been completed without it.

Thermserve Ltd wins an Innovation Award for developing a range of advanced temperature control facilities. They are deployed in ovens, which pre-heat dies used in aluminium extrusion processing. Uniquely, they incorporate infra-red die surface-sensing technology and proprietary predictive algorithms to assess die temperatures in real-time. The development involved mathematical modelling, empirical modelling and the use of MathCad software. The system improves oven efficiency and, through its high accuracy, reduces scrap extrusion levels. Traditionally, a press extruded up to five billets before a homogeneous temperature was achieved; the 'warm-up' billets being scrap. Precise control of die temperatures improves die-life and product consistency during extrusion. The system saves customers more than an estimated two thousand pounds per press per month and reduces heating costs by up to 20 per cent.

A Sustainable Development Award is made to Jaguar Land Rover Ltd for reducing the environmental impact of its products and operations. The company is focused on growing a long-term sustainable business with a passion for environmental innovation. There is a holistic approach to vehicle development, reducing impact on the environment throughout the product lifecycle, from raw material extraction to eventual disposal. In-house Life Cycle Assessment expertise has delivered significant reductions in vehicle CO2 emissions, as well as operational energy, waste and water usage. The approach drives product design (eg improving aerodynamics, use of sustainable materials), the pioneering use of lightweight aluminium and the development of advanced powertrains. The company's EU fleet average CO2 tailpipe emissions are on track to be reduced by 25% by end 2015 vs 2007. Multi-billion pound investments have reduced the environmental impacts of its products and operations, while at the same time creating thousands of new jobs and inspiring the next generation of engineers.

A Sustainable Development Award is made to The Midcounties Co-operative Society for implementing a Social Responsibility programme, placing sustainability at the heart of its operations. The Society created significant environmental improvements whilst delivering tangible social and economic benefits. Energy-saving measures improved the 'bottom line' by nearly £1 million annually, waste recycling contributed savings of £280 thousand per annum and back-hauling of packaging and food saved £200 thousand per annum. Nearly three-quarters of the energy supplied from the Society's Co-operative Energy business is from renewable sources and customers were the first to control the energy mix and source of electricity purchased from its Energy Hub. The Society's Community Fund enhances its 'local' communities and its colleague engagement programme has enabled the Society to be consistently selected as one of the 'Best Big Companies to Work For'. The programme has enabled growth in turnover, profits and employment during the UK recession.

Unison Ltd was established in 1973 and is the UK-based pioneer of all-electric tube bending machines. They are the only UK company in this field and provide intelligent tube bending machines, tailored to client requirements. Its machines are manufactured to meet customer needs, which take into account material types and bend complexity. Unison is a design and innovation led company, and has invested in R&D facilities, technology and the skills of its workforce. The company has adopted this dynamic approach in response from competition from global competitors and to customers ever changing requirements. The company has also invested in its sales infrastructure to open new markets, as well as to maintain and service its existing customers. It wins the Queen's Award for International Trade for outstanding overseas sales growth over the last three years.

A second Sustainable Development Award is made to Camira Group Ltd, which designs and manufactures environmentally-sustainable fabrics. The EU Eco-labelled products, including wool, wool and bast-fibre blends, recycled polyester and polypropylene, are manufactured with high levels of environmental transparency, both within the group and across its supply chain. Recent achievements in sustainable management and sector leadership include research and use of materials produced from nettle crops, hemp and flax, which are grown without applying pesticides or herbicides, support biodiversity and do not involve synthetic components, thus reducing demand for oil. They also include increasing transparency of product sourcing. For example, cotton was obtained directly from Pakistani mills to ensure proper social practices of suppliers. The company's top-selling wool is sustainably-produced and traceable to identifiable farms.

A Sustainable Development Award is made to Company Shop Ltd, which delivers environmental and social benefits through diverting food supply-chain surpluses for discount sales to members of the community on low-income or income support through Company Shop and Community Shop. Being the largest re-distributor of surplus food, the company sold, at considerable discount, 30,000 tonnes of surplus stock in 2013. Through its Community Shop, established in the same year, it combines low-price food with free advice and training to members, who satisfy criteria of receiving Government income support and residing in a socio-economic deprivation area; training and advice outcomes including higher education entries, new businesses established and debt management plans implemented. The company is exemplary in tackling the perennial challenge of food wastage; beneficiaries being disadvantaged sections of society and corporate clients, which have long sought satisfactory surplus food disposal mechanisms.
