1. Active Review of UASC DL Process

2. Introduction

This instruction sets out the policy, processes and procedures to be followed when considering applications for further leave from children previously granted discretionary leave under the policy on Unaccompanied Asylum Seeking Children (UASC). The process followed to decide these types of case is known as an Active Review.

This instruction also only applies to individuals granted discretionary leave under the UASC discretionary leave policy. For further information see the Processing an Asylum Application from a Child AI.

This instruction does not apply to individuals (children or adults) applying for further leave to enter or remain having previously been granted discretionary leave in accordance with the Asylum Instruction (AI) on Discretionary Leave, or any other type of leave. For further information on these types of cases, see the AI on Humanitarian Protection, and Discretionary Leave.

This guidance applies to asylum case owners both in the regions and in the Case Resolution Directorate.

This instruction provides guidance on:

- When an active review is required;
- The purpose of an active review;
- How an active review should be conducted; and
- The possible outcomes of an active review.

For the purpose of simplicity, the generic terms he, him and his will be used for all case owners and applicants regardless of their gender.

Throughout this instruction, the “original decision” is the decision made which originally refused asylum and which gave rise to the leave currently being enjoyed by the subject. The “instant decision” is the decision currently being considered.

Case owners should read this instruction in conjunction with the AIs on, Humanitarian Protection, Discretionary Leave, Refugee Leave, Certification under section 94 of the NIA Act 2002 and Processing an Asylum Application from a Child.

2.1 Application of this instruction in respect of children and those with children

Section 55 of the Borders, Citizenship and Immigration Act 2009 requires the UK Border Agency to carry out its existing functions in a way that takes into account the need to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in the UK. It does not impose any new functions, or override existing functions.

Officers must not apply the actions set out in this instruction either to children or to those with children without having due regard to Section 55. The UK Border Agency instruction ‘Arrangements to Safeguard and Promote Children’s Welfare in the United Kingdom Border Agency’ sets out the key principles to take into account in all Agency activities.

Our statutory duty to children includes the need to demonstrate:

- Fair treatment which meets the same standard a British child would receive;
- The child’s best interests being made a primary, although not the only consideration;
- No discrimination of any kind;

- Asylum applications are dealt with in a timely fashion;
- Identification of those that might be at risk from harm.

This instruction includes consideration of the use of enforcement action. Consideration must be made of the Code Of Practices statement that there must always be a presumption in favour of not detaining a family and each family's case must be considered on its individual merits.

3. Applications for Further Leave

It is best practice for the case owner to establish a contact management strategy with the individual and their social worker and/or guardian. This should enable any application for further leave to remain to be made or for arrangements to be made to allow the individual to voluntarily leave the UK prior to the expiry of the existing leave. Case owners will be responsible for conducting an active review on these applications for further leave to remain.

The individual's original decision letter in which he was granted UASC discretionary leave will state the date when that leave expires. This information should also have been recorded on CID. The implications of what will happen and next steps required when the leave expires should have been explained to the individual when the decision letter was served.

- If the individual was granted leave which was less than one year he should be served with a copy of Form HPDL at the same time as the service of the asylum and human rights refusal decision.
- If the individual was granted more than one year's leave, in the six months before that leave expires (i.e. after their 17th birthday) the case owner should seek to arrange a contact management meeting with him and his social worker and/or guardian to discuss available options. Form HPDL should be served at this meeting.
- Prior to this meeting the case owner should liaise with the individual's social worker and/or guardian to agree the best way to explain the available options including Assisted Voluntary Return and applying for further leave.

Regions should arrange locally how they are best placed to be notified that an individual is approaching his 17th birthday.

- If the UASC discretionary leave is due to expire but the individual will still be under 17 and a half on the expiry date the case owner must conduct an active review to assess whether the individual still qualifies for leave under UASC discretionary leave policy or any more favourable grant of leave. For further information see the Asylum instruction on Processing an Asylum Application from a Child.

An application for further leave cannot be made by the individual more than one month before his existing leave is due to expire. If an application is made early, the case owner should not consider the application and should inform the individual that he must reapply when he has only one month or less remaining on his leave in the UK. The case owner should not serve the active review decision on the individual before the expiry of his leave, unless the decision is to grant further leave.

Form HPDL needs to be completed by the individual, or the legal representative or responsible adult on his behalf. Please note that Form HPDL should only be used to apply for further leave to remain in the UK following refusal of asylum and a grant of less than 4 years exceptional leave, humanitarian protection or discretionary leave.

4. Handling Applications for Further Leave

The decision to grant further leave can be made at Case Owner level.

For further information on granting and refusing leave, see the AIs on Refugee Leave, Humanitarian Protection, Discretionary Leave and Processing an Asylum Application from a Child.

5. Interviewing Applicants who have Applied for Further Leave

Applications for further leave will normally be considered on the basis of the information contained within the recent application. However, case owners may see applications for further leave where there is insufficient information on file to make a decision on whether or not to grant further leave. In these circumstances, case owners should first write to the applicant and ask them to submit any further information that may be relevant to their application for further leave within 10 working days (plus 2 working days for postage). If the applicant fails to provide any information, or the information provided is still insufficient to make a decision, the case owner may then invite the applicant to attend an interview to discuss their application for further leave, if the case owner considers that an interview may produce further information that will assist in making a decision. See also next section – Applicants not previously interviewed.

Case owners must remember that individuals who are still under 18 years of age at the time of interview must only be interviewed by a case owner who has undergone the appropriate training for interviewing children and young persons. This interview must take place in the presence of a responsible adult. If the individual is aged 18 years or over by the time of the interview, the applicant may be interviewed as an adult if limits on regional resources will result in a long delay before a case owner trained to interview children or young persons is available.

5.1 Applicants not previously interviewed

Applicants should be invited to attend an interview in connection with their application for further leave if they were not previously offered this opportunity in connection with their claim for asylum.

Back to contents

5.2 Inviting an applicant to attend an interview

If a case owner decides to invite an applicant to attend an interview, he must do so by preparing a letter giving the applicant the opportunity to either accept or decline an interview. The following letter should be used:

- ACD.2195 (Request for Further Information/Offer Interview [Active Review]).

The case owner should make it clear that the applicant has ten working days to respond to this invitation.

See also section 13. Recording an Application for Further Leave on CID.

Back to contents

5.3 Conducting the interview

For some applicants, the active review interview will be the first time they have been interviewed. Such applicants may wish to talk about their initial claim. They should not be prevented from doing so as they may reveal important information that has not previously been considered. For example, they may wish to communicate a change in their country of origin that may warrant a grant of asylum.

However, case owners should also inform the applicant that the purpose of this interview is to discuss their application for further leave in the UK. As a result, it is important not to allow the applicant to go into too much depth about their initial application for asylum, unless there are clear changes in circumstance relating to the asylum element of the claim. It is important that the case owner interviewing the applicant has a good knowledge and understanding of the case, has thoroughly read all the evidence on file before interviewing the applicant and has a good understanding of the current country situation in the individual's country of origin.

If the applicant has previously been interviewed, it is not necessary to go into depth about his initial asylum claim as asylum has been refused, unless there are clear changes in circumstance relating to the asylum element of the claim. If the applicant has anything new to add, he should be given the opportunity to do so.

Case owners should use Interviewing Record ACD.2217 (if the individual is still under 18) or ACD.2218 (if the individual is now over 18) when interviewing those who have applied for further leave.

The interview should be subject to the safeguards set out in paragraphs 339NA-ND of the Immigration Rules regarding general conduct of an asylum interview.

5.4 Applicant declines the opportunity to be interviewed

It should be noted that applicants who are invited to attend active review interviews are expected to attend. If they fail to attend, consideration may be given to applying paragraph 339M of the Immigration Rules to the claim, meaning that it will be refused on the basis of administrative non-compliance.

Case owners should not apply paragraph 333C of the Immigration Rules when an applicant fails to attend an active review interview. This paragraph concerns withdrawal of asylum applications, and should not be applied as applications for further leave will always contain a claim under Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which cannot be treated as implicitly withdrawn under paragraph 333C.

Where an applicant fails to provide information that has been requested, including failing to attend an interview, case owners should make a decision on the application for further leave on the basis of the evidence available to them.

6. Considering an Application for Further Leave

Applicants who were originally granted discretionary leave under the UASC policy and have now applied for further leave may be eligible for asylum, humanitarian protection or discretionary leave. The fact that they were not eligible for asylum, humanitarian protection or discretionary leave (other than under the UASC DL policy) at the time of the original decision does not preclude them from qualifying now.

When considering whether to grant further leave to remain or settlement, case owners should assess whether the applicant qualifies for asylum, humanitarian protection, discretionary leave or discretionary leave under the UASC policy at the date of the active review. For further information on the criteria to be met, see the Asylum Instructions on Considering the Asylum Claim and Assessing Credibility, Considering the Human Rights Claim, Refugee Leave, Humanitarian Protection, Discretionary Leave, Processing an Asylum Application from a Child. When considering whether to grant asylum or humanitarian protection, case owners should also see the Asylum Instruction on Exclusion - Articles 1F and 33(2) of the 1951 Refugee Convention in case the applicant is excluded from those types of protection.

Case owners should have regard for the contemporary situation in the country of nationality (or of former habitual residence if appropriate) as this may have changed since the time of the original decision to grant UASC discretionary leave.

Case owners should not apply paragraph 353 of the Immigration Rules to any part of the application for an extension of leave.

When considering an application for further leave from a person who is still a child, case owners should refer directly to the AI on Processing an Asylum Application from a Child.

7. Qualifying for Further Leave

If an applicant is eligible for an extension of leave, case owners should follow the relevant guidance in the Asylum Instruction on Implementing Substantive Decisions.

If it is the case that there has been a change in the applicant's circumstances, meaning that they are now eligible for either asylum or humanitarian protection, such a person would be eligible to apply for indefinite leave to remain (ILR) once they have completed a combined total of six years' leave provided they are not subject to the exclusion clauses. They would be subject to the same active review process that will apply to refugees or applicants granted humanitarian protection after 30 August 2005 at the end of their five year period of limited leave.

For any person who is supported by a Local Authority, ASL.1950 must be completed and sent to the Local Authority by way of final notification of the outcome of the application.

8. Failing to Qualify for Further leave

An applicant who does not qualify for an extension of leave to enter or remain should be refused further leave and advised of the reasons why he no longer qualifies for discretionary leave (in other words, because he no longer meets the criteria of the UASC discretionary leave policy).

Subject to the outcome of any in-country appeal, he will be expected to leave the UK. Should he fail to do so, he will be liable to enforcement action.

For any person who is supported by a Local Authority, ASL.1950 must be completed and sent to the Local Authority by way of final notification of the outcome of the application. This must clearly state the person has become appeal rights exhausted.

An applicant whose appeal rights are exhausted may be eligible for Assisted Voluntary Return. For further information, see the Asylum Instruction on Assisted Voluntary Returns.

For guidance on implementing the decision to return where the person is still a child, case owners should refer directly to the AI Processing an Asylum Application from a Child.

Some applicants will be excluded from asylum and humanitarian protection as a result of their previous actions. However, if removal from the UK is not possible, such applicants are granted discretionary leave for a period of six months and are not eligible for indefinite leave to enter or remain until they have been granted leave for a continuous period of ten years.

For further guidance on implementing a refusal to grant further leave, please see section 9.Refusing Further Leave.

Back to contents

9. Refusing Further Leave

Once a case owner has decided to refuse to extend an individual's leave, he should:

Prepare a comprehensive consideration minute. The minute should include the following:

- Applicant's details (Home Office reference number, name, nationality and date of birth);
- Summary of the basis of the application for further leave including any asylum issues or human rights articles raised;
- Consideration; and
- Decision

Case owners should use the appropriate minute sheet to prepare both the decision-making and decision-service paperwork. The minute sheets currently available for in-time applications are:

- ACD.2188 (In-Time Extension of Stay or Settlement Application – Refuse Outright).
- ACN.2188 (In-Time Extension of Stay or Settlement Application – Refuse Outright – Suspensive ROA).

The minute sheets currently available for out of time applications are:

- ACD.2380 (Out of Time Extension of Stay or Settlement Application – Refuse Outright – Suspensive [UK] Right of Appeal).
- ACN.2380 (Out of Time Extension of Stay or Settlement Application – Refuse Outright – Suspensive [UK] Appeal).

Case owners should update CID if refusing further leave. For further information see section 13. Recording an Application for Further Leave on CID.

Case owners must also establish what appeal right the applicant has. For further information, see section 12. Implementation of Refusal and Rights of Appeal.

Back to contents

10. Section 94 certification of the asylum and human rights elements of a further leave application

Section 94 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 provides a certification process under which there is no in country right of appeal in certain circumstances, because that claim is considered to be clearly unfounded. Applications for further leave will be treated as both asylum and human rights applications, so if the application for further leave is certified under section 94, this will result in an out of country right of appeal only.

A case owner who has not been NSA-trained but is in ownership of a case that they believe could or should be certified under 94(2) or 94(3) after considering the further leave application against the criteria for an unfounded claim should personally refer the case to a NSA-accredited Senior Caseworker or case owner to review the case. If the case is deemed suitable for certification then the file should be reallocated to a NSA-trained case owner to consider the further leave application.

Case owners should refer to the AI on Certification under section 94 of the NIA Act 2002.

11. Failing to Apply for an Extension of Leave

If an individual's leave expires and they do not make an application for further leave to enter or remain they will become an overstayer as they have not sought to vary/extend their leave. The individual will be liable to removal under Section 10(1)(a) of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. Case owners should look to re-document such overstayers at the earliest opportunity. Case owners should bear in mind that the applicant cannot be removed if they are under 18 years of age unless adequate reception arrangements have been identified which make removal possible before 18. However if the applicant is approaching 18 this should not prevent case owners from completing any preliminary work necessary to ensure that removal can go ahead as soon as possible after the applicant turns 18.

Case owners should give full consideration to paragraph 395C of the Immigration Rules prior to serving a removal decision.

12. Implementation of Refusal and Rights of Appeal

If a case owner has decided to refuse an application for further leave to enter or remain in the UK, he must distinguish between the right of appeal to which an applicant is entitled according to his immigration status and the circumstances of his case. The right of appeal will vary depending on the following factors; length of previous leave granted; whether the application for further leave was made in time, out of time or not at all; whether the further leave application can be certified. Case owners should use the following tables to decide which right of appeal would be applicable to their case.

Section 47 of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006 came into force on 1st April 2008. This enables the Secretary of State to decide to remove an individual whilst their leave continues under 3C(2)(b) or 3D(2)(a) of the Immigration Act 1971, if and when the leave ends. This means that the decision to vary leave (82(2)(d) 2002 Act) and the decision to remove (82(2)(g) 2002 Act) can be made at the same time. If both decisions are made at the same time, the appellant will have to lodge his appeal against the decision to vary leave and the decision to remove at the same time. There is therefore only one appeal which covers the refusal to vary leave and the decision to remove the applicant.

UKBA pay support costs to Local Authorities who look after UASC and former UASC who are in Leaving Care. Once an individual becomes appeal rights exhausted, Local Authorities must be informed immediately using ASL.1950 – Notification of final outcome to Local Authority to ensure that UKBA end the support costs at the agreed time.

Case owners should also use the appropriate annexed table below for guidance on the right of appeal, and associated documents to be issued.

Annex 1 - Application for Further Leave was made before leave had expired - In time

Annex 2 - Application for Further Leave was made after leave had expired – Out of Time

Annex 3 - No application for Further Leave lodged

- If the subject is successful at appeal and UK Border Agency does not exercise an onward RoA, he should be granted leave according to HO policy and the finding in the appeal.
- If the subject is unsuccessful at appeal, he will be liable to removal under section 10 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999.
- If the subject remains in the United Kingdom after his appeal rights are exhausted in respect of the section 82(2) (2002 Act) decision/s, he will be an overstayer under the terms of section 10 of the 1999 Act, as he has no granted leave or section 3C leave remaining.
- As removal action follows, the section 10 removal directions will need to be authorised by a warranted immigration officer.
