Compensation for veterans with cancer caused by asbestos

On 16 December 2015 an announcement was made about changes to the War Pension Scheme legislation relating to veterans who have been diagnosed with diffuse mesothelioma, as a result of exposure to asbestos due to their service in the Armed Forces.

Minister for Defence Personnel and Veterans, Mark Lancaster MP, said:

“I have decided that a policy change is required to introduce enhanced arrangements for mesothelioma sufferers. These veterans protected the nation with honour, courage and commitment, and we have listened to their concerns to ensure they are treated with the fairness and respect they deserve.”

Initially the changes only applied to those who were diagnosed after that date, however on 29 February this year, the Minister further announced that the option of receiving a lump sum of £140,000 will be extended to include:

- Veterans already in receipt of a War Disablement Pension for diffuse mesothelioma, and;
- Veterans who have yet to have a claim accepted for War Disablement Pension for diffuse mesothelioma.

The changes mean that veterans diagnosed with the condition and whose condition was as a result of exposure to asbestos, that is due to their military service prior to 6 April 2005, will have the option of either receiving a lump sum of £140,000 or having regular payments from the War Pension Scheme, regardless of the date they were diagnosed.

For those who decide to opt for the lump sum option, this replaces the War Disablement Pension and any Supplementary Allowances, War Widow(er)'s Pension and associated allowances. Payments that have already been made to that point will be deducted from the lump sum, which also may be reduced to take into account other compensation already received for the same condition.

For those with mobility needs, arrangements can be made for the Ministry of Defence to make payments to Motability on their behalf, which are deducted from the lump sum. The changes to the scheme underline the government's commitment to the Armed Forces Covenant. The Covenant is a promise from the nation ensuring that those who serve and have served are treated fairly.

Mesothelioma is a cancer mainly caused by exposure to asbestos some 40 years or more before diagnosis and there is a short life expectancy afterwards. As such, it is important to ensure the MOD offers the right support to those affected by this disease.

The War Pensions Scheme, which is administered by Veterans UK, provides regular payments for dependents. However, comparisons have been made with the recently introduced Diffuse Mesothelioma Payment Scheme, which provides lump sums for eligible civilians.

The Royal British Legion asked the MOD to consider offering lump sums - the MOD has listened and has ensured veterans are not disadvantaged when compared to their civilian counterparts.

The MOD's Veterans Welfare Service is on hand to help claimants understand the provision and the choices in their own particular circumstances.

Individuals who would like help from the Veterans Welfare Service, or would like more information can contact the Veterans UK Helpline on 0808 1914 2 18.

Education - A lasting legacy

Families of service personnel killed on active duty can benefit from higher and further education scholarships.

The Armed Forces Bereavement Scholarship Scheme provides higher education and university scholarships for the children of Servicemen and women who have died on active duty since 1990 and whose death was attributable to their Service in the Armed Forces.

The scheme offers a scholarship of £1500 per year to enable a bereaved child to stay in higher education and gain the qualifications necessary to obtain a place at university. The scheme does not pay for vocational courses.

The scholarship will normally be paid for two years but may be extended to three years if required by the syllabus. There is no obligation to go on to university once further education has ended.

For university degrees (further education) a maximum of £9,000 for tuition fees and £4,950 for maintenance towards the cost of a first undergraduate degree can be paid. As tuition fees vary across the UK according to home address and place of study, the scholarship is adjusted to provide a similar level of support to all applicants across the UK. The scheme cannot be extended in order to repeat part of a syllabus or retake exams.

Charlotte's story

Charlotte's* father was killed while serving in Afghanistan and she sat her GCSE's shortly after, achieving excellent grades.

She struggled to come to terms with the loss of her father while studying for her A levels but with the financial support provided by the scheme was able to go on to university, and was awarded a First Class Honours degree.

"I would like to say that the Scholarship programme has given me so much more than a better quality of life and a new found confidence. It has given me the closure that I need to be certain that I have made my Dad proud, and that is the best gift I could ever have received."

There is no upper age limit for applications so if you are a bereaved child and returning to full time higher or further education after a gap you will be eligible to receive funding providing you haven't previously received a scholarship from the scheme for that level of study.

Payments are made three times per year by 31 October, 31 January and 30 April or as soon as confirmation has been received from the education establishment that the student has registered and is attending the specified course. Payments are not liable for Income Tax or means testing.

Stop Press! Taking Pride in Progress

Maybe Magazine, a social enterprise and publisher based in Bletchley Park, Milton Keynes, is offering 15 unemployed Armed Forces veterans the opportunity to gain valuable experience in the media industry. The project, Taking Pride in Progress is funded by The Royal British Legion and provides ex-Service personnel the opportunity to work on producing a World War Two commemorative magazine for Buckinghamshire.

Veterans can gain skills in all areas of putting together a magazine, including research, writing, graphic design, content planning and photography, as well as gaining professional career advice. The project will run until December 2016, with magazine training sessions taking place at The Royal British Legion Pop In Centre, Aylesbury and Bletchley Park throughout the year. Ex-Service personnel are encouraged to get involved at any point throughout the project. There is no minimum time commitment and veterans do not have to live in Buckinghamshire.

This is a fantastic opportunity to try something new, learn new skills and meet like-minded people. All participants will have the opportunity for their name to be credited in the magazine, which can act as a powerful tool for future employment. Maybe Magazine has delivered similar training to over 4,000 people, of which 66 per cent have gone back into employment following their training.

Project Manager, Gemma Holsgrove said: "We are thrilled to have received funding from The Royal British Legion as this will help us provide an opportunity for ex-Service personnel, and their families, to retrain in an industry that offers an array of possibilities for career development. With the professional expertise of Maybe Magazine, those involved will receive full training and career advice and support, as well as being part of a production team that will publish a commemorative World War Two magazine."

“those involved will receive full training and career advice and support”

In addition to the opportunities available for Service veterans, WorksforUs, a Milton Keynes based charity are offering families of ex-Service personnel the opportunity to take part in a variety of activities and workshops, all for FREE. Just as the transition from military to civilian life can be difficult for veterans, family members often find this a difficult time too.

What's on offer for family members:

- Monthly meet-ups in a supportive environment with other families
- Develop new friendships with like-minded people
- Build confidence and help organise enjoyable family activities
- Wide range of interesting and fun activities
- A chance to share stories of Service life

Family members do not have to live in Buckinghamshire or have a veteran spouse or partner involved in the magazine training to be involved – all ex-Service family members are welcome.

A Home from Home

“They have literally saved my life and given me hope and support for the future.”

HOMES FOR VETERANS

SUPPORTING HOMELESS VETERANS

2016 is already turning out to be a busy year for veterans charity, Homes for Veterans, as they see their homeless support services for some of the country's most vulnerable veterans increase rapidly.

This year has already seen the opening of Ty Dwer, a purpose built, state of the art home for 12 veterans in Wrexham, which sees their provision for veterans in North Wales rise from ten bed spaces to 23. The project has been developed in partnership with First Choice Housing Association and was funded using MOD Veterans' Accommodation Fund monies to help support veterans who are struggling with the transition to civilian life. Homes for Veterans is an initiative of Alabaré, a charity who have been caring for the South West and Wales' most vulnerable people for 25 years by providing shelter and practical and emotional support. Homes for Veterans was launched when the charity identified a need for bespoke homeless services for those in the veterans community who were struggling to adjust to life in the civilian world. Homes for Veterans now has 24 homes across the South West of England and Wales and can accommodate up to 127 residents at any one time.

The pace won't be slowing down either as they continue to work closely with other service charities and civilian providers to ensure that veterans receive the best possible support and care. In South Wales, a partnership with housing provider Gwalia will see Homes for Veterans provide support to veterans in the redeveloped Clydach War Memorial Hospital near Swansea. They'll also be working with Our Enterprise, Wilton Community Land Trust and Redrow Homes in Salisbury, Wiltshire, who are building a new 45 unit veteran campus or 'Veterans Village' at the former Land Command HQ site at Wilton Hill. Homes for Veterans will be providing specialist support for the residents of 12 of the homes in Wiltshire's first purpose built community for vulnerable veterans, helping them to get back on their feet.

Homes for Veterans supports veterans like Rhys*, who was referred to them by a Community Care Society who had some very real concerns for his health and wellbeing.

In 2015, Rhys moved into one of their homes in Carmarthenshire where, with the help of a team of experts, he was able to begin to rebuild his life. Rhys says, "When I came to Alabaré's Wales Homes for Veterans I was in a very bad place. I had no support from anyone and life seemed very bleak indeed.

When I met my support worker he was very calm, listened to what I had to say and showed me that there is always a solution.

Accepting the accommodation from Wales Homes for Veterans has changed my life and without them I do not know where I would be now. Their support has allowed me to take steps that, four months ago, I would never have thought possible. I am moving into my own place, getting a new passport and hoping to travel again, and I have the confidence to enter into a new relationship.

I cannot praise the work that Homes for Veterans and Alabaré do highly enough. They have literally saved my life and given me hope and support for the future."

Shoulder to Shoulder - Shipmates & OPPOS

ROYAL NAVAL ASSOCIATION

Shipmates & Oppos: The support programme for leavers of the Royal Navy and Royal Marines.

The programme helps service leavers make the transition to a new civilian life and career. It's the 'arm around your shoulder' for what's often a stressful time of adjustment and uncertainty. With so many charities and organisations offering help, the programme helps individuals find the right path to the assistance they seek. It's also the introduction to the various associations which can provide practical, financial and social support, and help leavers stay connected to the naval service family for years to come.

The programme, funded by Greenwich Hospital and administered by the Royal Naval Association, supports leavers during the important five years post-discharge.

Joining the programme is free and many have already benefited from the offer.

Who is it for?

The programme is for leavers of (or those about to leave) the Royal Navy, the Royal Marines, QARNNS, the respective Reserves, or the Royal Fleet Auxiliary. The programme is open to all former Ratings, Other Ranks and Officers, regardless of length of service (or whether they have been medically discharged).

What is provided?

The programme provides advice on a full range of subjects including:

- Financial Assistance
- Debt
- Housing
- Employment
- Discounts for the Service and ex-Service community
- Camaraderie through related associations
- Valedictory certificates
- Medals
- Pensions

Facing Eviction?

The programme received a request for assistance from a couple who were both ex-Royal Navy with four children under 9 years. They had been evicted from their privately rented house due to arrears in their rent. They were not entitled to council accommodation as they were deemed to have made themselves intentionally homeless. The programme put them in contact with SSAFA and Veterans Scotland.

Unemployed and struggling?

A female Royal Naval Reserve (RNR) Rating contacted the programme stating she was unemployed apart from her commitment to the RNR and was struggling to make ends meet. The programme successfully recommended confiding in her RNR Divisional Officer and to contact the Royal Naval Benevolent Trust.

Pioneering medical welfare service goes further..

Back: Mark Woodland, Welfare Officer DMWS, Lord Peter Smith, Leader Wigan Council and Chair of the Greater Manchester Health Partnership, Linda Fisher, Lead Officer for Armed Forces in Wigan and Greater Manchester.

Front: Jack Gordon, 92 years old, WW2 Royal Navy Veteran and Burma Star campaign veteran from Ashton in Makerfield Wigan, John Burns, Veteran and Chairman of the Ashton in Makerfield Wigan branch of the RBL and Ron Butterfield, Ex Royal Marine.

Wigan Infirmary. We have been overwhelmed by the positive response to the work of our Welfare Officers and the difference we can make by working together. Over 60 per cent of our Welfare Officers are from an Armed Forces background and all of our officers are specially trained in this field. This gives them a real sense of understanding and enables them to fully support patients from the Armed Forces community."

Lord Peter Smith, leader of Wigan Council and chair of GM health partnership said: "Over the past eight months, this service has provided a valuable link between military personnel and the support that they need and deserve.

"We are elated that Wigan Borough has led the way and the success of our partnership with DMWS and the pilot means that military families across Greater Manchester will now benefit from this resource.

"As a direct result of the work of DMWS, families are now receiving co-ordinated support such as emotional, practical, housing and financial advice, which has helped to enable earlier hospital discharge. The funding of nearly £1m over two years brings together services that help to improve the wellbeing of our aged veterans across the region."

Thanks to the successful pilot of an integrated medical welfare service for Armed Forces families in Wigan Borough, the emotional and practical support provided by the Defence Medical Welfare Service (DMWS) will now be rolled out across Greater Manchester hospitals.

In addition, the project will play an important part in Greater Manchester devolution arrangements and the work being carried out on the integration of health and social care, highlighting the services that can support our Armed Forces community.

The partnership formed between DMWS, Wigan Council, local health service providers and the voluntary sector has seen specialised welfare support for Armed Forces families be delivered across the borough in hospitals or in community based health centres.

The project will ensure that veterans aged 65 and over will get this support by identifying ex-serving personnel as they enter the hospital services, triggering a referral to DMWS Welfare Officers.

As the eight month pilot at Wigan Infirmary was so successful and through the development of this partnership, Lisa Leece (Head of Commissioning and Performance at DMWS) and Linda Fisher (Lead Officer for the Armed Forces in Wigan and Greater Manchester) successfully secured funding from the Aged Veterans Fund, to implement this approach across Greater Manchester.

DMWS is an independent charity which has delivered specialist welfare support to serving, veterans and families since the Second World War.

Anyone can refer to DMWS including GPs, hospital staff, services, organisations, families or via self-referral.

Lisa Leece said: "We are really pleased to be working with Wigan Council, and to have piloted the project at the

X-Forces are go...

Over five hundred new businesses have been launched by the UK's military community, assisted by a specialist planning and advisory service.

Since its launch in July 2013 X-Forces has nurtured and guided over five hundred new businesses and facilitated over £5 million in seed funding, as an official partner of the government's Start Up Loans Company.

X-Forces is a social enterprise that encourages entrepreneurial ambition in the UK military community, supporting start-up businesses and delivering innovative career opportunities.

The five hundredth business to launch produces an innovative range of children's cutlery, run by an ex-RAF Servicewoman.

Ex-Servicewoman, Rosie Phelps, and her sister, Catherine Dodd, have received support from X-Forces for their innovative range of children's cutlery. Dodd combines Rosie's business acumen with Cat's creativity and, after a two-year journey through research, design, manufacturing and crowd funding, the strikingly different products are now on sale. The products are the first of their kind, taking a new approach to the grip of a tiny hand, and give parents a solution to mealtime heartaches.

Dodd has been supported by X-Forces, guiding the sisters to access the crucial funds required to begin manufacturing the first batch of product. Rosie said: "From the start, X-Forces showed a strong belief in me as an ex-Service entrepreneur, and understood our drive and determination to succeed. The X-Forces advisors are very knowledgeable, their processes are very thorough and they take extra care in assessing whether your business is viable so they can lend responsibly. It is fantastic that this support is available to nurture the potential that comes out of the Armed Forces."

Cat and Rosie's innovative cutlery in action

The MOD has appointed X-Forces as the Business Enterprise Trainer for the Career Transition Partnership, delivering support and training to those expressing an interest in business ownership and self-employment as part of their resettlement journey.

Each of the 500 businesses now launched has undergone a rigorous process of business planning with their allocated business advisor, who remains alongside the candidate on their journey. Through unique corporate partnerships with industry leaders like EMC, RBS, Barclays and Cisco, the new business owners are further supported with mentorship and networking. Each week X-Forces receive one hundred new registrations.

CEO and Founder of X-Forces, Ren Kapur, said: "It is so rewarding for us to be able help more and more of the capable and hard-working members of our Armed Forces community to realise their dreams. These 500 first businesses are already contributing to the UK economy, providing employment and making opportunities, and we are very proud of the framework we've built to support them."
