Subject: Transitional Arrangements for Repeal of S 52 of CDPA
Date: 13 December 2015 10:52:36

It is complete and utter madness for this repeal to have gone ahead in the first place, whatever the transitional period. Having to get a licence for a photograph when including a copyrighted object is the very opposite of what is to be expected from a Government which says it is committed to reducing regulatory red tape.

Having said this, I understand this is law, incidentally from the same party that gave us the Community Charge. The best action would be an immediate repeal, but in terms of what this consultation is actually about, I am in favour of the maximum period of transitional arrangements.

It would be appreciated if I could be sent a copy of the regulatory impact assessment regarding this section.
