Improving Your Quality In Housing
A guide to common issues identified through Peer Review
Foreword to the Fourth Edition

Improving Your Quality In Housing

The focus of the delivery of legal aid is firmly on the provision of consistently good quality services for clients. The peer review process has provided a unique opportunity with access to a wealth of information directly related to the quality of legal advice and information given to clients and work carried out on behalf of clients. It allows us to identify areas of good practice and areas in need of improvement.

We are pleased to introduce this new edition of ‘Improving Your Quality – Housing’, which is intended to give the profession access to peer review findings and help support those wishing to achieve the highest levels of quality of legal advice and work. This edition has been produced after the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act of 2012 came into effect, which limited the scope of work to be carried out under legal aid funding. The Guide has been updated and where issues are considered to remain relevant and important to legally aided work they are included and changes in law and procedure have been taken into account.

The guide makes available common quality issues identified by Housing Peer Reviewers. Derived from the entire body of peer review reports, analysis has concentrated on those issues frequently contributing towards lower ratings at Peer Review. Each issue is divided into 3 parts:

• A brief description of why the issue has been identified as important.
• The process by which an organisation can identify if the quality concern affects their work and advice.
• Outline suggestions on activities/methods which could assist improvement.

These suggestions for making improvements are not suggesting a standard approach. Nor are they an exhaustive list; they are only some of the ways that improvements can be made. Your entity or organisation may have other ways of resolving the issues raised in the guide, it is not our intention to invalidate those approaches.

Some of the suggestions have also led to a more general debate concerning standard setting, and the best approaches to dealing with specific quality of advice issues. We continue to welcome the opening up of the world of legal competence to such scrutiny and debate.

16. Has the client been advised of the implications of a possession order, both at the outset and when the order has been made?

17. Where eviction is imminent or a real possibility, has the client been advised of the possible consequences of homelessness?

In homelessness cases:

18. Has the client been advised of the statutory criteria to be satisfied in order to access housing as homeless from a local authority, in particular, applying those issues most likely to be in dispute?

19. Has the client been advised at each stage of their homelessness application, from initial application through to a possible County Court appeal?

20. Has an appropriate expert report, opinion or evidence been sought to properly advance the client’s case?

21. Has the client who fails to meet the Part VII criteria as homeless been advised of alternative remedies with regard to community care and children’s legislation?

22. In re-housing cases, has the adviser consulted a current copy of the allocation scheme of the relevant local authority?

In disrepair cases:

23. Does the adviser have good knowledge of the pre-action protocol in disrepair cases, demonstrating when to apply it, and how and when it may not apply?

24. Has the client been advised on whether the defects alleged constitute disrepair, on limitation, and on the range of possible remedies?

25. Has the adviser appropriately responded to the urgency, severity and/or health-impact of the disrepair alleged, including obtaining relevant expert evidence?

26. Where appropriate, has certificated funding been sought to pursue injunctive relief?

In unlawful eviction cases:

27. Has the adviser analysed the facts to ascertain whether the eviction was lawful, and advised the client accordingly?

28. Has the adviser appropriately responded to the urgency of the matter?

29. Has the adviser considered and given an appropriate period of notice to the landlord or justified why not?

30. Has the adviser taken appropriate steps to obtain injunctive relief, both in respect of re-entry and to protect and preserve the client’s belongings?

31. Has the client been advised and assisted, using certificated funding where needed, to pursue all appropriate remedies, including an award of damages?
1. Have full and clear instructions been taken and recorded?

Why does this matter?
The absence of a record of clear and comprehensive instructions means that:

- The client may not have been asked the appropriate questions.
- The information required from the client in order to fully and accurately advise may not have been obtained.
- Without such instructions having been recorded, advisers and supervisors cannot be certain that advice on all relevant aspects of the case has been given.
- Without evidence of the instructions given, advisers leave themselves open to complaints and possible negligence claims.

How can I check this on my files?

- Check that personal details, property/tenancy details, rent and income details, details of household members, any health issues, and a history of the matter have been taken.
- Do attendance notes fully record the information given by the client and cover the related aspects of the case one may expect (e.g. on a possession matter, has evidence of the rent due, benefit paid and any instructions on disrepair been taken)?
- Are the attendance notes, whether handwritten or typed, legible and logical?
- Have the instructions been confirmed in writing?
- Where subsequent attendances are required on the client, or others, is there a record of the details discussed, representing the time spent?

What will help?

- Checklists may assist in prompting advisers on the issues to be covered with the client.
- Adequate supervision should be provided early on in the case, as this may identify where there may be gaps in information received.
- Ensure that advisers have adequate expertise in the field of work, as checklists alone are not enough.
- Advisers who are empathetic are better able to deal with clients who may be upset, reticent or find it difficult to express themselves.
2. Has the client received clear and comprehensive advice on all aspects of their case?

Why does this matter?
The absence of any record of clear and comprehensive advice means that:

- The client may not have been properly advised.
- The client does not have a record of the advice they have received, or steps they need to take.
- Without evidence of the advice given, advisers leave themselves open to complaints and possible negligence claims.

How can I check this on my files?

- Do attendance notes show that the client received clear and comprehensive advice?
- Was the advice confirmed in writing?
- Was the advice provided generic, without relating it to the client’s circumstances?
- Has the adviser considered the client’s instructions and drawn appropriate conclusions?
- Is there an over-reliance on standard letters of advice?
- Has advice been updated as further evidence has emerged?

What will help?

- Provide adequate supervision to pick up this issue early on in a case.
- Ensure that advisers have adequate expertise in the field of work.
- Provide advisers with training and regular updates.
- If the adviser is unable to provide definitive advice to the client at the outset (i.e. for lack of information), the adviser should confirm that fact to the client in writing, and then provide detailed advice as soon as possible thereafter.
- Cross-check correspondence with attendance notes to ensure that the advice has been confirmed to the client in writing.
- Ensure clients receive follow-up letters, confirming instructions and advice after each significant development in the case.
- Ensure that the adviser can access higher tier advice (either internally or externally), where the matter may be complex or out of their area of experience.
3. Has the client been advised of the merits of their case?

Why does this matter?

- The client needs to be advised about the strengths and weaknesses of their case.
- If not advised, the client will be unable to make informed decisions and may be confused as to the likely outcome of their case.
- All steps possible should be taken to allay the client’s anxiety where it is likely there will be a positive outcome, but equally, the client should be advised realistically where there may be a negative outcome, especially in the absence of the client taking any steps advised.
- The merits of the case may alter as the case progresses and/or over time e.g. the longer it has been since the last allegations of anti-social behaviour.
- Such advice helps to manage the client’s expectations and may prevent complaints arising.

How can I check this on my files?

- Do files show early advice on merits in the initial attendance note and client care letter?
- Is the merits advice clear – i.e. not vague or ambiguous such as “you have a reasonable prospect of success”, but outlining relevant factors that either assist or harm the case?
- Is the advice on merits updated to reflect changes in the case?
- Is advice updated as different stages in the case are reached and further evidence obtained?

What will help?

- Put headings in template letters to prompt advisers to record advice on merits.
- Reconsider merits as the case progresses and advise clients accordingly.
- Ensure that advice on merits is assessed in file review and supervision.
4. Are advice letters tailored to each client’s case?

Why does this matter?
The use of standard advice letters, that contain generalised advice and fail to address the particular client’s case, means that there is a concern that:

• The client has not been properly advised.
• The advice provided may be difficult for the client to understand and/or irrelevant to the case.
• Clients are confused about which part of the advice relates to their case.
• Consideration has not been given to the individual facts of the client’s case.
• The client’s case is not receiving sufficient care and attention.
• The adviser may not have understood the case properly.
• The standard advice letters may be out-of-date if not checked and updated regularly.

How can I check this on my files?
• Do advice letters relate to the facts and circumstances of the client’s case?
• Is there evidence that clients are confused about the advice letters they have received (i.e. clients regularly seeking clarification of advice that has not been clearly explained in writing)?
• Do standard letters contain information that is out of date?
• Have irrelevant paragraphs been removed from any standard letters?

What will help?
• Provide adequate supervision and file review to pick up this issue early on in a case.
• Ensure that advice letters include a record of the client’s instructions, the advice given and the action that the adviser and client are to take.
• Review and update regularly any standard letters used.
5. Has the client’s housing status been correctly identified?

Why does this matter?
Identifying the client’s housing status is fundamental to identifying most of the rights the client has as an occupier. Failure to identify a client’s housing status means that:

- It is likely the advice given to the client is wrong or incomplete, prejudicing the client’s position.
- The adviser may not correctly identify the legal issues in the case.
- The adviser may not identify when a referral is needed and/or the urgency for such referral.
- The adviser may not identify when an application for Legal Aid is needed.
- In the worst case, a client could be evicted if housing status has not been identified and acted upon.
- The client’s expectations may be wrongly raised if the housing status is in fact worse than advised (i.e. an Assured Shorthold rather than an Assured Tenant).

How can I check this on my files?
- Has the client’s housing status been considered and identified?
- Has the status been correctly identified?
- Is there evidence on file (i.e. copy Tenancy Agreement)?
- Has the client’s housing status been confirmed to the client in writing?
- Has the client received advice that is specific to their housing status and relevant rights?
- Has the client been advised to pursue the wrong option or has an option been missed?

What will help?
- Ensure advisers have adequate expertise in the field of work.
- Ensure advisers have had training on the rights associated with each type of tenancy status.
- Provide adequate supervision to pick this issue up early on in a case.
- Consider using checklists for taking instructions, which will guide advisers to correctly identify the client’s housing status.
6. Does the adviser appreciate and make correct use of the limits and scope of Legal Help/Help at Court and certificated funding in housing cases?

Why does this matter?

Failure to appreciate the limits and scope of funding in housing cases means that:

- The adviser may not be aware that further work or representation could be done within the same, or a different funding type, resulting in an inadequate and incomplete service to the client.

- The adviser’s failure to do work, or make a referral, may prejudice the client and deny them the opportunity to enforce their rights. For example, the Help at Court scheme permits representation at court in housing cases on issues of mitigation (e.g. applications to suspend warrants, submissions that a possession order should be postponed). Not appreciating that fact can result in clients being incorrectly advised that funding is not available to represent them in court and clients having to represent themselves.

- The adviser’s lack of awareness of the Funding Code as it relates to housing cases can result in Legal Aid applications not being made, or being delayed, and cases not being properly progressed.

- If the adviser is doing work outside the scope of the funding/contract, this could be in breach of LAA rules or the organisation’s contract, for which the organisation will not be remunerated.

How can I check this on my files?

- Has the adviser explored the availability of Legal Aid in relation to the client’s case?

- Are clients routinely advised that the Legal Help scheme does not cover representation at court in any housing cases?

- Are clients routinely (wrongly) advised that there is a fixed cost limit on Legal Help matters?

- Are there differential practises between advisers in representing clients at court?

- Are there differential practices between advisers in making referrals and/or applications for full Legal Aid?

- Have delegated functions been utilised in urgent cases, where the situation justifies and covering all aspects of the work reasonably required up until a substantive certificate may be granted?
What will help?

• Provide adequate supervision to pick up this issue early on in a case.

• Provide training for advisers on the Funding Code, and ensure they know when delegated functions should be used.

• Ensure advisers are aware of and have access to relevant materials (for example, the Funding Code).

• Ensure that checklists are used to prompt advisers to consider funding issues.
7. Where appropriate, have relevant third parties and/or experts been instructed?

Why does this matter?

• Expert evidence often clarifies whether an issue is arguable or not.

• An expert may be able to confirm a client’s instructions and add weight to his/her case – e.g. proof of a medical condition.

• The adviser is only an “expert” in dealing with the legal aspect of the case, and is not a witness, expert or otherwise.

• Advisers are professionally obliged to seek to achieve the best outcome reasonably possible for the client: expert evidence can assist in achieving that.

• Without such evidence, advisers leave themselves open to complaints and possible negligence claims.

How can I check this on my files?

• Are experts routinely used or not used?

• Has an expert been used?

• Is there evidence that the adviser has considered the need for expert evidence/opinion?

• In a case revolving around a medical issue, has a medical expert been instructed to report?

• In a case involving disrepair, has a suitable expert been instructed?

• Has Counsel’s opinion been sought – e.g. in a complex and/or appeal case?

• Has the adviser wrongly cited an inability to use funding to incur expert’s fees, as a disbursement, as the reason for not instructing an expert?

What will help?

• Provide adequate supervision to pick up this issue early in a case, upon instructions.

• Have template letters of instruction to experts – e.g. for disrepair or “priority need” homelessness cases – pointing to the issues and criteria they need to address.

• It may be appropriate to make a file note of why an expert was not considered appropriate for use, or which field of expertise is required.

• Ensure advisers correctly understand the limits of funding and applicable expert rates, rather than applying a “blanket policy” against use of experts.
8. Has the client been updated as the case has progressed, up to and including the case outcome?

Why does this matter?

• Only advising a client at the outset of their case is insufficient.

• A case can often change in merit and complexity as further facts emerge

• The client should reasonably understand the issues in his/her case and be guided on making informed decisions on the case, particularly where settlements may be offered.

• It is the client’s case.

• It will help prevent complaints if a client understands how a case has arrived at its eventual outcome.

How can I check this on my files?

• Has there been regular communication with the client throughout the case?

• Do attendance notes show that further instructions have been sought from the client where new information has been received, or has the adviser simply assumed them?

• Is there evidence that the client has received updated advice?

• Do clients regularly report confusion, indicating that the case issues may not have been fully communicated or explained?

• Have the client’s views and instructions been sought before any agreement, proposal or settlement has been agreed by the adviser?

• Has the client been sent a case outcome letter?

• Do cases regularly show the client ceasing to give instructions?

What will help?

• Ascertain the best means of communicating with the client at the outset of the case.

• Where a client may be difficult to reach, arrange a third-party contact point or regular intervals for the client to “check-in” with the adviser.

• Build a rapport with the client and avoid using jargon and overly legalistic terminology.

• Ensure advisers have client contact before and report back after any court hearing.

• Use headings in any precedent letters used to prompt advisers to update the case, the options and next steps.
9. Has the case been dealt with so as to reasonably protect the client’s interests?

Why does this matter?

• It may not always be possible to achieve the outcome the client desires, but reasonable efforts should be made towards this end.

• The client is relying on the adviser’s legal knowledge to deal with the case with the client’s interests in mind.

• The adviser is obliged to act to protect the client’s interests and insofar as possible avoid any prejudice to the client.

• In doing so, the adviser can be more confident that the best outcome might reasonably be achieved.

• Where a case does not end favourably, this will not be due to adviser fault.

• This will avoid complaints and negligence claims.

How can I check this on my files?

• Have the client’s interests, instructions and wishes been reasonably considered at each stage of the case?

• Has the client been advised and guided at each stage, so s/he can understand the process involved and express a view?

• Have enquiries and/or representations been made to the opponent or other third parties, to ascertain facts, put the client’s case and challenge the opponent’s case?

• Has third-party evidence been obtained in support of the client’s case?

• Have deadlines been complied with?

• How did the case end – did it end favourably for the client?
What will help?

• Ensure clients have been advised at the outset and updated as the case progresses.

• Encourage advisers to make reasonable enquiries to seek evidence in support of the client’s case.

• Seek to put the case at its highest at the outset in communications with the opponent.

• Challenge and question assertions made against the client, unless/until supported by evidence.

• Explain to the client where and why a point must be conceded.

• Seek to further the client’s interests.

• Ensure advice on the outcome of the case is given to the client, its impact and any further steps the client must take, with or without third-party assistance.
10. Where the adviser has been asked to provide advice on areas of housing law in which they have little or no knowledge, have they taken appropriate action to ensure that the client receives correct advice?

Why does this matter?

An adviser’s lack of knowledge of particular areas of housing law, and failure to refer the case or seek appropriate support, means that:

- The adviser may have failed to appreciate the limits of their knowledge and seek more specialist advice.
- The client is not provided with comprehensive and accurate advice or made fully aware of their rights.
- The client may not appreciate the consequences of an adverse finding in their case (e.g. if an outright possession order is made against them, the local authority may not have a duty to assist them in accordance with Part VII Housing Act 1996).
- The advisers may not be meeting the LAA supervisor standard and supervision procedures may be insufficient.
- The client’s case may be conducted in a manner which may cause prejudice and may constitute negligence.

How can I check this on my files?

- Is the advice in attendance notes accurate and coherent, or vague or even absent?
- Have advisers failed to identify their own limitation and seek assistance if appropriate?
- Are advisers making sufficient referrals on areas outside their expertise or which may be legally complex?
- Has the adviser referred to higher tier internal/external advice where available and appropriate?
- Is there evidence of client dissatisfaction (telephone calls, letters of complaint)?
What will help?

- Ensure that advisers are aware of where they can seek assistance, either internally or externally – e.g. via specialist housing Counsel.
- Provide advisers with appropriate training on a variety of housing law areas.
- Ensure supervisors correctly identify training and support needs.
- Encourage advisers to seek assistance where an area of housing law may be unfamiliar, complex, unusual or just less frequently encountered.
11. In discretionary cases, has the client been advised of the possession procedure (including, where appropriate, the rent and mortgage possession pre-action protocols) and the steps required by the landlord to obtain possession?

Why does this matter?

• The client is not provided with comprehensive advice or made fully aware of their rights or the limits on such rights.

• The adviser’s lack of procedural knowledge may prejudice the subsequent conduct of the case.

• The adviser will not identify defects in the landlord’s case or paperwork, and will not identify any technical defences or defences based on “reasonableness”.

• The adviser will be in a position of weakness when negotiating with a landlord and/or fail to seek sanctions, or to advance the client’s case, where there has been a lack of compliance.

• The client may misunderstand the length of time before they face eviction (e.g. they may think they need to move out upon expiry of a Notice or immediately upon the making of a Possession Order, rather than on or by the execution date of a Warrant).

• The adviser will not identify cases where the tenant may be able to get Legal Aid.

• The adviser will not identify the need for or timing of a referral.

How can I check this on my files?

• Is advice on the appropriate possession procedure and what the landlord needs to prove at Court, confirmed in attendance notes and letters to the client?

• Have the Notice, any Court papers and any supporting documents been requested and scrutinised?

• Has the adviser checked for protocol compliance, raised this with the opponent and advised the client, where compliance has not taken place?

• Have procedural deadlines been complied with or missed?

• Has the client been advised as to how possession might be prevented and has any Defence been considered and/or pursued at Court?

• Has the adviser considered and advised the client of the likely timescales up to possession being obtained?
What will help?

• Have copies of the relevant protocols and the Civil Procedure Rules to hand.

• Ensure advisers are aware of which possession grounds relate to which types of tenancy, and which grounds are discretionary and which are mandatory.

• In discretionary cases, there should be evidence that advisers have considered both the ground and reasonableness.

• Advisers should familiarise themselves with any local practices at County Courts and of local authorities that may affect procedure and timescale.

• Cover these issues in supervision and file review.

• Provide training on these issues and update knowledge.
12. Where the claim is based on mandatory grounds, has compliance with the 2015 pre-action protocol, the Notice and/or deposit requirements been checked and advised on (where appropriate), in addition to the Court procedure?

Why does this matter?

- In a mandatory case, there may be few other potential grounds for defending or delaying possession.
- If the pre-action protocol has not been complied with, the claim may be stayed until it has.
- Non-compliance with the deposit and/or Notice requirements, may amount to a complete defence to the claim.
- As assured shorthold and fixed term tenancies become more widespread, protocol compliance and technical defences will become a necessary component of the advice a client requires.
- A competent adviser will need to identify flaws or at least identify when an issue should be referred to Counsel.

How can I check this on my file?

- Have instructions been recorded on protocol, deposit payment/protection, HMO and Notice issues?
- Have instructions been sought on whether the claim is a retaliatory eviction?
- Has an advice letter to the client outlined any technical, compliance and/or procedural issues that may be disputed?
- Do letters to the opponent and/or Court refer to any relevant sections of the protocol, Housing Act 2004 and/or Deregulation Act 2015 provisions believed to have been breached?
- Do representations to the Court outline any protocol or procedural irregularities?
- Is there evidence of any submission to the Court to stay, dismiss or postpone possession (up to 42 days), where appropriate?
What will help?

• Have the protocol and relevant source materials to hand.

• Ensure advisers are familiar with the above materials and make reference to them.

• Ensure advisers have received training on the 2015 protocol, forms of Notice and notice-periods, deposit protection and prescribed information, HMO requirements, identifying tenancy types, basis upon which a Notice and/or proceedings might be invalid, stayed, adjourned or dismissed, postponements due to exceptional hardship.

• Ensure advice letters and letters to others outline any technical or procedural irregularities.

• Supervise less experienced advisers on mandatory possession cases, addressing these issues, before any deadline for response to a claim and/or hearing date.
13. Have any public law defences and/or arguments been considered and advanced, where appropriate?

Why does this matter?

• Such arguments may be the client’s only line of defence.

• A landlord may use possession and/or mandatory grounds as expedient, without considering whether other means might achieve the desired objective.

• A client may have support needs that have not been assessed or are not being met, that if met may resolve the need for possession.

• In bringing proceedings, a disabled client may be being subjected to unfair treatment and/or disproportionate detriment.

• A client’s alleged behaviour may arise from a disability and/or lack of capacity.

• These arguments are not likely to be familiar to clients, so clients will rely on the adviser to be aware of and raise them.

How can I check this on my files?

• Has the status of the landlord been considered – i.e. are they a public body?

• Has the landlord advanced underlying and/or legitimate reasons for possession – have these been probed?

• Has the adviser demonstrated an awareness of potential public law issues and arguments?

• Has the adviser considered the landlord’s stated policy and procedure, and any guidance documents issued to registered social landlords?

• Has the landlord been asked to account for any departure from its policies or guidelines?

• Has Counsel’s assistance been sought in advising on any issues noted and/or drafting any Defence?

What will help?

• Ensure advisers have access to up-to-date case law in this developing area.

• Have access to source materials – e.g. HRA, Equality Act 2010, local authority guidance.

• Have precedent letters that can be tailored as necessary, to send to landlords on these issues.

• Where an issue may need more in-depth analysis, refer it to experienced Counsel to advise on, until advisers feel more confident dealing with themselves.
14. Where the claim is based on rent arrears, has the client been asked about the existence of any disrepair at the property and advised on any potential counterclaim in the proceedings?

Why does this matter?

Failure to do so means that:

- The client has not been provided with comprehensive advice or made fully aware of their rights.
- The client is unaware that, in rent possession claims, the existence of an actionable claim for disrepair can afford the client a complete defence to the claim for possession and trigger a set-off of damages against rent arrears.
- The client’s ability to resist the claim for possession is prejudiced to such an extent that a failure to ascertain whether there are any disrepair issues may constitute negligence.
- In some cases, a counterclaim for disrepair may be the only option for defending the claim and failure to identify this could lead to the loss of the client’s home.
- The adviser’s lack of knowledge may prejudice the subsequent conduct of the case.
- The adviser may not pick up on cases where Legal Aid could be obtained and/or a referral made, rather than acceding to any form of Possession Order.
- The client may be left with a Possession Order and paying off arrears that ought rightly to have been reduced or cleared by way of set-off.

How can I check this on my files?

- Is there evidence that the client has been questioned about the existence of disrepair?
- Has the client been advised of the right to raise disrepair as a defence and counterclaim?
- Where the client has raised the issue of disrepair, did the adviser appreciate its significance and was it utilised to benefit the client?
- Has the client obtained any expert’s opinion on disrepair (including any inspection reports by the landlord’s employees), to pursue the potential counterclaim?
- Was any counterclaim pursued in the proceedings?
What will help?

- Ensure advisers are trained and aware of the relevance of disrepair in possession claims, especially those based on rent arrears.
- Ensure that advisers use instruction checklists (or other tools), which prompt them to ask about counterclaims for disrepair.
- Ensure that precedent letters refer to the possibility of a counterclaim for disrepair.
- Ensure that this issue is checked in supervision and file review.
- Ensure that the organisation has adequate, up-to-date materials, sources, and reference books etc that provide information on this issue.
- Have precedent drafts of Defence & Counterclaim documents.
15. Where a housing benefit issue is critical to a client’s case, has it been reasonably explored and resolved, or otherwise promptly referred to an alternative advice agency?

Why does this matter?

• Problems with housing benefit can cause debt, distress, loss of a home and a decision that the client has become homeless intentionally.

• A client who is receiving too little benefit is likely to struggle to maintain their rent payments.

• A client who is receiving too much benefit is likely to incur an overpayment debt.

• In rent arrears possession actions by social landlords the pre-action protocol requires them to assist with housing benefits and can inhibit the start of proceedings where housing benefit is awaited.

• Careful examination of the housing benefit history and entitlement can prevent Possession Orders and is a reasonable line of enquiry for a competent housing adviser to pursue.

• An adviser, in a rent arrears case, is more likely to succeed if he/she can explain to the Court what the housing benefit problem is, the potential for challenge and the prospects of rectifying the issue to reduce the arrears.

• Strict time limits in the housing benefit system can mean that delay will cause loss of entitlement and financial hardship to the client.

How can I check this on my files?

• Are relevant decision letters, requests and receipts for information and other documents in the file?

• Do the documents in the file show that the adviser has considered communications from the housing benefit department critically, to query gaps and shortfalls in benefit and overpayments, with a view to reducing the same?

• Have enquiries of the housing benefit department been made, setting out where problems are believed to lie?

• Does the adviser demonstrate an awareness of the operation of the Local Housing Allowance, “bedroom tax”, the benefit cap, backdating and Discretionary Housing Payments, and how these might be disapplied to the client’s circumstances?

• If the housing benefit issue has been referred for resolution to another person has the fee earner acquainted him/herself sufficiently with the detail to make necessary arguments with landlords and courts, and checked the progress with the referee?
What will help?

- Train all fee earners on the HB provisions relating to backdating, overpayments, LHA, the benefit cap, bedroom tax, DHP, taking in lodgers and/or the option of down-sizing.
- Familiarise fee earners with the detail of housing benefit decision letters.
- Have relevant literature including guidance on the regulations easy to hand.
- Include relevant general advice on housing benefits in standard letters.
- Where the organisation is unable to deal with the HB issue, ensure a prompt referral and follow-up enquiries are made.
16. Has the client been advised of the implications of a Possession Order, both at the outset and when the Order has been made?

Why does this matter?

• The client may not be aware of the types of and differences between Orders that are available, and therefore may not be able to consider with the adviser which may be the most appropriate and whether compliance is realistic.

• The client may not be aware of any obligations under the terms of a Possession Order and the implications if those obligations are not fulfilled, including any costs implications.

• The client may not have been made aware that if they breach the terms of any Suspended Order, they can be evicted without further hearing.

• The client may not have been advised of future action they may be able to take, including, for example, an application to discharge, vary or appeal the Order, or suspend a later Warrant.

• The client may not have been advised of their re-housing options, if possession cannot be avoided.

• The adviser’s lack of knowledge may have prejudiced the conduct of the case, as well as the client’s position and future housing.

How can I check this on my files?

• Has advice on the range and types of Order open to the Court been outlined at the outset?

• Is advice on Possession Orders confirmed in attendance notes and letters to the client?

• Has the adviser considered the consequences that a Possession Order may have on the client?

• Has advice been given as to which Order may be appropriate and has consideration been given to the client’s ability to sustain and comply with any terms?

• Has advice post-Possession Order been given, including what to do if a Bailiff’s Warrant is threatened or received, and the effect of any Order for costs?
What will help?

- Attendance notes showing that consideration has been given to the client’s ability to comply with any Order made – e.g. as to payment or behaviour.
- Ensure that advisers have access to a precedent letter that covers these issues, which can be tailored to fit the circumstances.
- Ensure advisers properly understand the differences and effects of each type of Possession Order, and duration, where appropriate.
- Ensure that the file closing procedure picks up whether or not this advice has been given.
- Cover this issue in supervision.
17. Where eviction is imminent or a real possibility, has the client been advised of the possible consequences of homelessness?

Why does this matter?

The absence of advice on the possible consequences of homelessness means that:

- The client may not understand the significance of the steps they may be able to take to prevent homelessness arising, in view of its consequences.
- The client is unaware of the limits on any subsequent local authority assistance available and the difficulties they may encounter with any homelessness application.
- The client is ignorant of what may happen and what to do if they face street-homelessness.
- In light of such relevant information their instructions may be different.
- The client may complain against the adviser should they be evicted.

How can I check this on my files?

- Does the letter of advice at the conclusion of any possession claim contain a “next steps” section if the client has been unsuccessful?
- Is there a clear attendance note referring to potential homelessness and any difficulties the client may encounter on making a homelessness application?
- Is there evidence of advice on alternative housing options?

What will help?

- Ensure the possible consequences of homelessness are advised to the client as early as possible, before the conclusion of proceedings and then reiterated at the conclusion.
- Ensure that the organisation has a precedent letter covering the possible consequences of homelessness.
- Cover the issue of homelessness in supervision of possession matters.
- Ensure that file closing procedures pick up on this and, if not, that further advice to re-contact the organisation is given, if appropriate.
18. Has the client been advised of the statutory criteria to be satisfied in order to access housing as homeless from a local authority, in particular those issues most likely to be in dispute?

Why does this matter?

- The client may not be aware of the issues surrounding eligibility and how they may become or remain eligible.
- The client may fail to understand what constitutes homelessness and at what point they can seek assistance.
- A client may be intentionally homeless without understanding why or how to break the chain of causation.
- The issue of priority need and evidence supporting may not have been explained and obtained.
- The implications and/or need for a local connection may not have been understood.
- The client may presume their entitlement to housing and/or accommodation of their choice.
- A client may not use all endeavours to prevent homelessness – e.g. clear arrears, curb behaviour.
- Incorrect advice may be given, having considerable adverse consequences for the client.

How can I check this on my files?

- Is there a clear attendance note that deals with each of the criteria?
- Have the criteria been applied to the client’s circumstances, highlighting any that are most likely to be in dispute?
- Was the advice on the statutory criteria confirmed in writing?
- Has the client been advised on issues relating to offers of accommodation – its duration, security of tenure, size, suitability and location?
What will help?

- Regular training to keep knowledge up-to-date and relevant
- Easy access to reference materials. For example:
  - The most recent homelessness Code of Guidance for Local Authorities
  - Homelessness law text books and online materials
  - The Housing Law Reports Quarterly Review.
- Headings in template letters, prompting advisers to cover each issue.
19. Has the client been advised at each stage of their homelessness application, from initial application through to a possible County Court appeal?

Why does this matter?

• The client should be aware that they must reasonably co-operate to provide further information to the local authority.

• The client may not understand the lengthy nature of the process.

• A client may otherwise make rash decisions – e.g. refusing Bed & Breakfast or other offer of accommodation – which may prejudice their case.

• The client may complain about the type or length of time spent in temporary accommodation.

• The client may otherwise fail to seek legal advice within the 21-day time limit for a request for review of a negative decision and/or for an appeal to the County Court.

• The client may not realise that an appeal to the County Court must be based on a point of law, not simply a dislike or disagreement with the decision reached.

• The client may become street-homeless by missing a statutory deadline.

• All of these concerns may lead to a complaint of negligence against the adviser.

How can I check this on my files?

• Is there a clear attendance note on each stage of the homelessness process?

• Is there clear written advice at each stage the case goes through – i.e. upon application/decision/review request/review decision/County Court appeal?

• Does the letter of advice contain a procedural time-frame or estimate at each stage?

• Has any duty or discretion to provide accommodation been explained to the client?

• Has the effect of any refusal of accommodation been explained?

• At each stage, has an outline of what to expect next been given to the client?
What will help?

• Ensure advisers have a precedent client letter once a Part VII application to a local authority has been made.

• Ensure advisers have brief precedent letters to local authorities requesting the homelessness file, a review of the decision (full grounds can follow later) and interim accommodation.

• Establish the practice of local authorities in the area – e.g. their policy on extending temporary accommodation pending review decisions.

• Access to source materials.

• Maintain good relationship with Counsel to provide emergency advice where appropriate.

• Key dates should be noted in the adviser’s diary and centrally within the organisation – e.g. shared computer diary.
20. Has the appropriate expert report, opinion or evidence been sought to properly advance the client’s case?

Why does this matter?

- Clients need to be aware that expert evidence may be required to support their case, not just their viewpoint put forward.
- On some eligibility issues, immigration knowledge or Counsel’s advice may be required, as this can be a complex area.
- Evidence on the condition of a former property may support that it was no longer reasonable to occupy.
- Expert evidence will often clarify whether an issue is arguable – e.g. did the client lack capacity to form any intent to their homelessness, are they in priority need?
- Disbursements are wasted on expert evidence that merely recites the nature of the homeless person’s illness, without addressing it to the criteria.
- There may be witnesses willing to give statements in support – e.g. any acts of violence leading to homelessness.
- Without such evidence a case may be weak and less likely to succeed.
- The adviser risks negligence if the appropriate evidence has not been sought.

How can I check this on my files?

- Do attendance notes/instructions indicate a need for expert evidence?
- Has an expert been instructed?
- Does medical evidence address a causal connection between the physical/mental/emotional impairment of the client and its exacerbation by being street-homeless?
- Is the definition of priority need and/or the test for capacity clearly and correctly set out in any letter of instruction to an expert?
- Has the availability of non-expert evidence been explored and obtained, relevant to the issues at stake?
- Has the evidence obtained been used to further the client’s case?
What will help?

- Empathetic understanding of the client’s problems may assist in getting better quality instructions from the client, which will guide the adviser on what further evidence is required.

- Clear attendance notes are particularly important because the client may not receive or understand letters of advice – e.g. if the client is of no fixed abode, or has limited English.

- Advisers should have a clear understanding of when an expert should be instructed and who and how to instruct.

- Expert and other non-expert evidence should seek to address the point which is the subject of dispute: letters sent and questions asked should therefore give guidance and be specific.

- Organisations should not operate a “blanket ban” on incurring the costs of expert disbursements, but should familiarise themselves with the applicable LAA rates payable.
21. Has the client who fails to meet the Part VII criteria as homeless been advised of alternative remedies with regard to community care and children’s legislation?

Why does this matter?

• It is important to take a holistic view of homelessness.

• Alternative remedies are sometimes available to clients who would otherwise face street-homelessness.

• Failure to consider alternative solutions indicates a lack of knowledge or experience in homelessness cases.

• It may lead to a denial of remedies to which the client is entitled and place a vulnerable client or family at risk of street-homelessness.

• Private accommodation with (non-housing department) assistance from other local authority departments may be the client’s only option to prevent street-homelessness.

How can I check this on my files?

• Do attendance notes and letters of advice show clear advice on alternative remedies?

• Has a relevant referral for assessment been made?

• Has the matter been followed-up and any unreasonable refusal to assess or provide services (which may include housing) been challenged?

• Where a remedy via the local authority cannot be pursued, has the client been advised of other general housing options?

What will help?

• Specialist training in this area of “community care” law.

• Easy access to reference materials.

• Correspondence should be cross-checked with attendance notes to make sure no alternative solutions have been missed.

• This issue should be covered in supervision.

• Close liaison with Social Services, both vulnerable adults & children’s departments, at the relevant local authority – have precedent referral and/or JR protocol letters to hand.
• Liaison (where possible) with family and community care departments within the advice agency.

• If the adviser lacks the necessary expertise in this area, either this should be confirmed in writing and a referral made, or the advice and guidance of experienced Counsel sought.

• Having a list of referral agencies and experts.
22. In re-housing cases, has the adviser consulted a current copy of the allocation scheme of the relevant local authority?

Why does this matter?

- The allocation scheme may deviate from the statutory obligations as set out in Housing Act 1996 and any decision which is not in accordance with either the published allocation scheme or the legislation is illegal.

- As a public body with statutory functions (i.e. the allocation of housing) a local authority (or social housing provider) must carry out such enquiries as will enable them to properly discharge those functions.

- In some cases, there may be scope for discretion: an adviser should scrutinise whether this has been considered by the housing provider and exercised fairly, logically and transparently.

- Failure to consult a current copy of the scheme may mean:
  - The client is wrongly advised in respect of their application for an allocation.
  - The client may not have been advised of their right to challenge an allocation decision by way of internal and/or judicial review.
  - The client may not be made aware of the procedure and any time constraints on any request for review of an allocation decision.
  - The client may not be advised of the possibility of later applying for a mutual exchange, where applicable, as an alternative to initial refusal.
  - The housing provider may be obliged to consider offering alternative accommodation, and examination of the scheme may provide grounds to explore this issue.
  - Advisers leaves themselves open to complaints and possible negligence claims.

How can I check this on my files?

- Allocation Schemes should be provided free of charge and available online – these should either be on the file or clearly referred to on the file.

- Written advice to the client should contain advice on relevant sections of the allocation scheme, tailored to the client’s situation.

- Attendance notes should show the client received clear and comprehensive advice.
What will help?

- Keeping a record of the allocation schemes of relevant local authorities and updating them regularly to improve knowledge and quality of advice.
- Checking with other advisers who may know of individual practices and features of particular allocation schemes.
- Explaining the issues in writing to the client, so they understand them and can make informed decisions about their allocation options.
- Being aware of the possibility of a judicial review challenge for non-compliance with allocations law and schemes.
- Keeping a record of review deadlines.
23. Does the adviser have good knowledge of the pre-action protocol in disrepair cases, demonstrating when to apply it, and how and when it may not apply?

Why does this matter?

- This can suggest a lack of knowledge or experience of disrepair litigation, which may prejudice conduct of the case and the client’s claim.
- Incorrect advice may be provided to the client about the merits and conduct of their case, and claims may not be brought where they should.
- A failure to comply with the protocol may lead to a landlord refusing to respond and/or the client being penalised in costs by the Court in any later proceedings.
- The refusal of applications for Legal Aid, in cases that qualify, may result.
- An adviser’s lack of knowledge may cause unnecessary delay in urgent cases, where timescales should be adapted.
- This may cause delay in dealing with proceedings involving a counterclaim, if the adviser is not aware that the protocol does not apply.

How can I check this on my files?

- Has the adviser considered and provided advice on the pre-action protocol?
- Has the adviser complied with the pre-action protocol?
- If the adviser has not complied with the pre-action protocol, have they provided good reasons for this and shown awareness of any exclusions to compliance?
- Have standard protocol letters, as set out in the CPR, been used?
- Have applications for Legal Aid been refused due to failure to follow the pre-action protocol or to make clear why it did not apply?

What will help?

- Provide advisers with training on the pre-action protocol and any exemptions to its use.
- Ensure that advisers have access to the pre-action protocol and standard letters that they can tailor to the client’s case.
- Cover this issue in supervision.
- Ensure advisers demonstrate awareness of the criteria for Legal Aid in disrepair matters and file notes reflect these.
24. Has the client been advised on whether the defects alleged constitute disrepair, on limitation and on the range of possible remedies?

Why does this matter?

• Simply reciting the s11 criteria is insufficient – the criteria should be applied to the facts.

• A client needs to understand that not all defects are actionable.

• The client should be given an idea of the urgency of the case and the effect or need for any delay.

• Client’s expectations need to be managed on what outcomes can reasonably be achieved and over what timescale.

• It might only be possible to assist the client with any urgent/injunctive action – if so, the client needs to be aware that they can pursue a damages claim in person: ensuring the client is aware of limitation will be essential.

• Full and proper advice will help prevent damaging negligence claims, particularly where claims may be of higher value.

How can I check this on my files?

• Have the s11 criteria been applied to the facts and nature of the defects complained of?

• Has the tenancy been considered, where its repairing obligations may be wider than s11?

• Have instructions been taken chronologically, from the first alleged incident, when it was reported and its duration?

• Have instructions been taken on any injury or health-related issues arising from the defects alleged, which may affect the remedy sought?

• Has the client been advised on what defects may be actionable, the works that appear to be necessary, any need for expert evidence in any Court proceedings and the potential for an injunction and/or damages?

• Where there is any doubt on the nature, cause or liability for a defect, has an expert been instructed?
What will help?

• Have a precedent advice letter, using headings under which the adviser must give advice.

• If a case is advised to be urgent, ensure advisers act accordingly.

• Give clients realistic advice about the actions and options available, as early as possible.

• Seek to instruct an expert to inspect the property, to report and preserve evidence, especially where this may be necessary in order to confirm or inform any advice required by the client.
25. Has the adviser appropriately responded to the urgency, severity and health-impact of the disrepair alleged, including obtaining relevant expert evidence?

Why does this matter?

- The client may be living in potentially dangerous, health-hazardous and/or unsanitary conditions.
- The client’s losses may be greater if urgent steps are not taken – e.g. to restore a safe electricity supply.
- Even in cases where the matter may not go on to a Legal Aid certificate, the matter may be urgent due to limitation: the adviser should respond accordingly.
- The adviser should recognise that a matter may be urgent where steps to preserve evidence must be taken.
- These issues broadly correspond to those the adviser needs to address to obtain Legal Aid funding.

How can I check this on my files?

- Consider the period from the date of instructions to the date of the next action to progress the matter.
- Has a protocol letter been sent, if necessary, abridging the time for response.
- Has an expert been urgently instructed to inspect the property, not just reliance placed on the local authority Environmental Health Department?
- Has medical evidence or evidence of injury been sought and obtained, as to any health effects/hazards?
- Where serious/dangerous defects have been alleged, has the adviser taken any steps towards obtaining injunctive relief/specific performance?
What will help?

- Take full and clear instructions from the client at the first interview, including as to any health issues affecting the client and/or household members who may be adversely affected by the defects.

- Have available a list of suitable experts/surveyors that advisers can call on at short notice to carry out inspections.

- Have a template “urgent” protocol letter to send opponents and experts.

- Write off promptly for medical evidence and/or records, drawing the expert’s attention to the defects alleged and invite opinion.

- Know when delegated functions should be used and to what extent.
26. Where appropriate, has certificated funding been sought to pursue injunctive relief?

Why does this matter?

- A delay in obtaining Legal Aid can leave the client and family members compelled to live in substandard, dangerous and miserable housing conditions.

- It is important advisers understand the inter-play between any initial enquiries, perhaps to clarify the urgency or severity of the matter, using Legal Help, and cases where Legal Aid should be used.

- Clients can become disillusioned that there is nothing that can be or is being done and are more likely to complain or cease giving instructions.

- Some properties, particularly those in the private sector, may be being routinely let in poor condition: pursuing an Order from the Court may be the only way to ensure the property is brought to required standards, and the client obtaining Legal Aid may be the only way they can achieve this.

How can I check this on my files?

- Have advisers applied the Funding Code to grant/apply for certificated funding?

- Have injunction proceedings been raised and followed through, from service of the letter of claim?

- Have clients been deterred from seeking Legal Aid and/or diverted elsewhere inappropriately – e.g. told to pursue eligible claims through the Environmental Health Department at the local authority?

- What has the outcome been of any application made for certificated funding?

- What has the outcome been of any application for an injunction and/or specific performance?
What will help?

• Ensure advisers are aware of the Funding Code and apply it.

• Advisers should exercise delegated functions in cases that merit, ensuring how the criteria have been met is stated.

• Advisers should not be deterred from obtaining Legal Aid through lack of understanding of what it covers.

• Ensure clients are not advised that Legal Aid is no longer available for disrepair cases, without full explanation, as this is inaccurate.

• Seek firm evidence to support any application for Legal Aid and/or injunctive relief.

• Know the applicable Legal Aid rates for experts to prevent funding difficulties.
27. Has the adviser analysed the facts to ascertain whether the eviction was lawful, and advised the client accordingly?

Why does this matter?

• Clients do not always understand the possession process and/or appreciate the significance of steps the landlord may have taken and documents they may have received.

• Clients who share accommodation with their landlord may not know that the full possession process does not apply to them.

• Clients may not have received or may have lost documents regarding the eviction.

• A landlord may have had to secure the property and/or change the locks in the tenant’s absence, due to an emergency – e.g. fire or flood.

• It is essential to establish the facts surrounding an eviction, whether one has actually occurred, in order to fully and accurately advise the client of any potential remedies.

How can I check this on my files?

• Has the adviser taken full instructions on the type of tenancy and the events leading up to the alleged eviction?

• Has the adviser made enquiries of the landlord and obtained documentation to ascertain whether possession has been obtained lawfully?

• Has the adviser considered any residential landlord exemption?

• Has advice been given on what the correct process for possession, in the client’s circumstances, would be?

• Have documents been scrutinised and their validity considered?

What will help?

• Taking full and clear instructions on the eviction and any events or threats leading up to it.

• Advisers should understood the possession process applicable to tenants, and lodgers/licensees.

• Where there may be doubt or an absence of documents, advisers should make prompt enquiries of the landlord, agents or other relevant third parties.

• Ensuring, where clients may be of no fixed abode resulting from their eviction, advice at the first interview is fully recorded, is as definitive as possible, and/or arrangements are made to meet again, or for the client to collect a letter of advice or have it sent to a care of address.
28. Has the adviser appropriately responded to the urgency of the matter?

Why does this matter?

- Unlawful eviction matters are almost always urgent.
- The client and/or their family may have nowhere to go that night and may already be “sofa-surfing”.
- The longer the client is out of their home, the more it is likely to become a permanent exclusion.
- A client should generally seek to mitigate their loss; it is the adviser’s responsibility to guide and assist in so doing.

How can I check this on my files?

- How long was it between instructions and next action taken?
- Has injunctive relief been (promptly) sought?
- Have any interim arrangements been made for where the client will stay until the matter can be put before the Court, if appropriate?
- Have any initial enquiries – e.g. of the landlord – been made whilst the client is in the adviser’s office for the first interview?
- Where appropriate, have delegated functions been used?

What will help?

- Have good internal procedures to support advisers that take on such cases at short notice.
- Have Counsel available, at the end of the phone or by email, to advise, draft documents and/or attend at Court, where the adviser may not be able to do so.
- Have draft precedent letters, statements of case and/or injunction orders to hand.
- Know the arrangements at the local County Court for issuing urgent applications and appearing before the 'District Judge of the Day'.
29. Has the adviser considered and given an appropriate period of notice to the landlord or justified why not?

Why does this matter?

- The landlord, in particular the private landlord, may not realise that his/her actions are unlawful.
- A formal letter from an adviser, setting out the position, may quickly resolve the matter.
- A recalcitrant landlord may, on notice, urgently seek to re-let the property as a means of making the exclusion permanent.
- The client may have already notified the landlord, had a response and have evidence of this.
- The appropriate notice will vary from case to case, according to the client's circumstances and the consequences of the eviction on him/her.

How can I check this on my files?

- Have instructions been taken on any contact/response from the landlord since the eviction?
- Has the adviser weighed up and recorded reasons for giving or not giving the landlord advance notice of the claim?
- Is there a well-drafted letter before claim on file – setting out the events, the legal position, the client’s position, any actions already taken, the remedies sought and consequences if not?
- Has the adviser appreciated the urgency – e.g. for the client, the children of the family – of regaining entry to their home?

What will help?

- Take and record very clear and detailed instructions, at the first interview, of any contact there has been with the landlord since the eviction and the response: this may establish notice.
- In some cases, a phone call by the adviser to the landlord may be sufficient to establish the landlord’s attitude to the eviction, re-entry and/or client access to belongings.
- Weigh the need for notice against “tipping off” the landlord.
- Ensure attendance notes record the steps taken and why – e.g. if no or very short notice is given.
- Once a view has been formed, advisers should act decisively.
30. Has the adviser taken appropriate steps to obtain injunctive relief, both in respect of re-entry and to protect and preserve the client’s belongings?

Why does this matter?

- Injunctive relief, swiftly obtained, may be the only way to prevent an unlawful eviction becoming permanent and the landlord benefiting from the unlawful act.

- In cases where the eviction is unlawful, prompt action to obtain re-entry, prevent re-letting and re-unite the client with their belongings, might only be secured by injunction.

- Applying for interim relief may at least preserve the status quo, whilst further enquiries are made.

- Even where the eviction may have been lawful and the property re-let, it may still be necessary to obtain an injunction for the return of the client’s belongings.

- Swift and decisive action may prevent the client suffering the full effects of homelessness.

- Clients may not have received or may have lost documents regarding the eviction.

- Clients will have belongings that cannot be valued in monetary terms or easily replaced.

How can I check this on my files?

- Where initial contact with the landlord/agents has not remedied the problem, have steps to prepare an injunction application been promptly taken?

- Has an injunction application been issued and an expedited or same-day hearing been requested?

- Has the adviser agreed or sought an Order that preserves the client’s actual or potential right of re-entry pending any final determination by the Court?

- Has an agreement or Order for access or the return of belongings been sought?

What will help?

- Ensure advisers consider all aspect of the client’s case and what practical steps need to be taken on the client’s behalf.

- Make a list of urgent remedies required – e.g. providing the client with a set of keys – and those that can be resolved later, as the case progresses – e.g. damages.

- Draft a statement on behalf of the client as soon after the first interview as possible, in readiness for any injunction application.

- Be familiar with the Funding Code so that delegated functions can be appropriately used.
31. Has the client been advised and assisted, using certificated funding where needed, to pursue all appropriate remedies, including an award of damages?

Why does this matter?

• The initial steps to obtain re-entry or access to belongings for a client, do not necessarily mark the end of the case.

• Unlawful eviction claims can attract considerable damages.

• Clients often experience considerable expense, as well as inconvenience.

• Certificated funding is available to pursue all aspects of an unlawful eviction claim, including damages.

• Advisers may face negligence claims and/or complaints, which are substantial in value.

How can I check this on my files?

• Does the adviser demonstrate an awareness of both the issues an injunction may remedy and those that may require an award of damages to remedy?

• Has the adviser applied for funding or exercised delegated functions, to cover all steps in any proceedings, whether under cover of the emergency or the substantive certificate?

• Have proceedings been issued, where the matter cannot be settled without so doing?

• Have proceedings, including claims under all appropriate heads of damages and costs, been properly drafted?

• Have clients been advised of the right to pursue a damages claim and that Legal Aid is available to do so?

• Has representation up to and including trial been provided under Legal Aid, where such funding is available and the matter cannot otherwise be settled?

• Has the adviser agreed or sought an Order that preserves the client’s actual or potential right of re-entry pending any final determination by the Court?

• Has an agreement or Order for access or the return of belongings been sought?
What will help?

- Advise the client, at an early stage, to make a list and keep receipts of any expenses – e.g. for room-and-board, food/take-away expenses, additional travel, (temporary) replacement belongings.

- Advise the client to make a list, room-by-room, of any items lost, damaged or destroyed, giving approximate ages and values for each.

- Ensure advisers are properly trained to recognise all aspects of an unlawful eviction claim, and guided on the appropriate content and amount of any negotiated settlement.

- Seek advice from experienced Counsel on heads of claim and quantum, where necessary.

- Know the Funding Code and provide information in any Legal Aid application that demonstrates the criteria is met.

- Exercise delegated functions to deal with the urgent aspects of the case, but include in the substantive application, cover for the steps required thereafter.
