Foreword

This is Booklet 4 in a series of five which explain, in simple terms, how the compulsory purchase system works. The booklets in the series are:

Booklet 1	Compulsory Purchase Procedure
Booklet 2	Compensation to Business Owners and Occupiers
Booklet 3	Compensation to Agricultural Owners and Occupiers
Booklet 4	This Booklet
Booklet 5	Mitigation Works

Before reading this booklet you should first read Booklet 1 – Compulsory Purchase Procedure which sets out the process of how authorised bodies obtain compulsory purchase powers and implement them, and what your rights are. Booklet 5 deals with the limited circumstances in which acquiring authorities may undertake works to help to reduce the adverse effects of their development on your property.

This booklet deals solely with the issue of compensation to owners and occupiers of residential properties once a compulsory purchase order comes into force. The right to compensation may arise as a result of the compulsory acquisition of part or all of your land or a right over that land (“land” includes the buildings on it). You may also have a right to compensation if your land is adversely affected by the construction and use of development works in close proximity but where no land is actually acquired from you. Both situations are covered in this booklet.

Legislation in England and Wales gives many authorised bodies (referred to in this booklet as “acquiring authorities”) the power to acquire land compulsorily where the landowner or occupier is not willing to sell by agreement. The rights to compensation and methods and procedures for assessing the correct amount are derived from what is commonly referred to as the “Compensation Code”. This is made up of Acts of Parliament, case law and established practice. The principal Acts are the Land Compensation Acts of 1961 and 1973 and the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965.

In some cases, an acquiring authority may be able to satisfy their requirements by the creation of a new right over the land rather than needing to seek full ownership. For example, an authority may seek rights to carry out works to your property for the provision of services to an adjoining property rather than actually acquiring your property. The Compensation Code for the acquisition of new rights over land is the same as for the actual acquisition of land.

The law relating to compulsory purchase is complex. Of necessity, the information set out in this series of booklets is a simplification and cannot cover every circumstance that may arise. This booklet is not intended to be a complete guide to the law and carries no legal force.

Nor should this guidance be regarded as a substitute for professional advice. If your property is, or seems likely to be, affected in any of the ways described in this booklet, you should seek advice from a professionally qualified person such as a surveyor or solicitor, who can advise you on your rights and act on your behalf if appropriate. The reasonable professional fees incurred in preparing and negotiating your compensation claim may be met by the acquiring authority.

The Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors operates a Compulsory Purchase Helpline which can be contacted on 0870 3331600. This helpline puts callers in touch with experienced chartered surveyors in your local area who will provide up to 30 minutes of free advice.

1. Introduction

- 1.1 The guidance contained in this booklet is divided into two principal sections as follows:
- Compensation where land is taken.
 - Compensation where no land is taken.
- 1.2 There are six flow diagrams within the booklet. A list of the diagrams is detailed in the contents section. These diagrams guide you to the sections of the booklet which are relevant to your particular circumstances and provide summary assistance as to the compensation provisions which may be appropriate in each case.

How to use this booklet

- 1.3 In order to gain a better understanding of the entire subject you should read the whole booklet at least once. Then, starting in the box at the top of Diagram 1 and answering the simple questions in this diagram, you are directed to other relevant diagrams and text.

Terms used in compulsory purchase

- 1.4 This series of booklets is aimed at lay people and wherever possible the use of jargon and technical language has been avoided. However, there are a number of important terms which have a specific meaning in compulsory purchase matters. These are explained in Appendix 1 to this booklet.

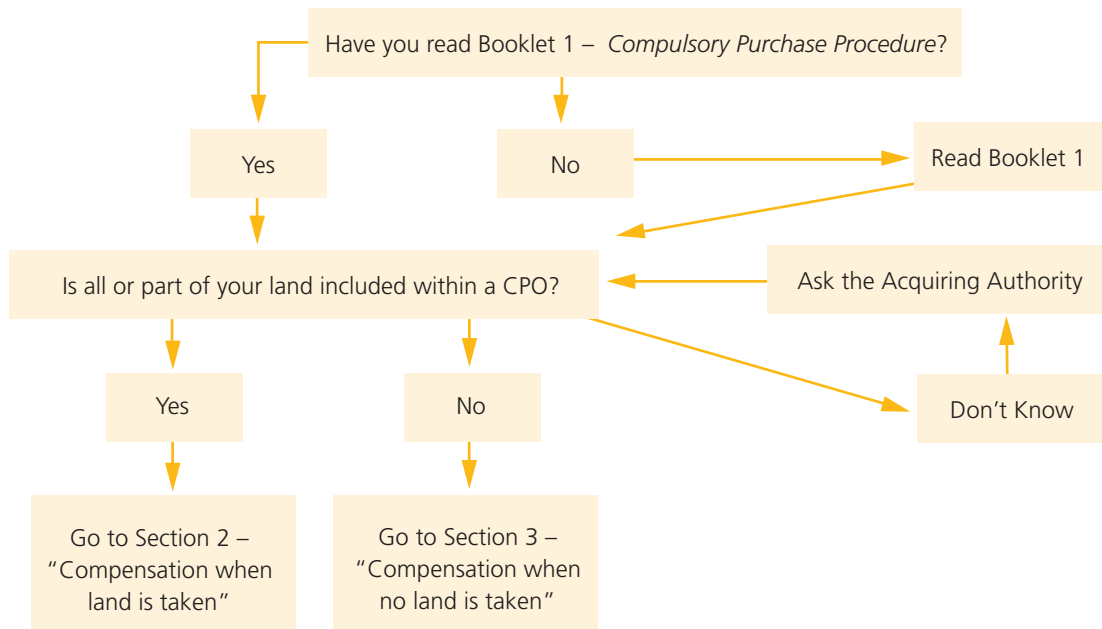

Useful contacts

- 1.5 There are a number of bodies and organisations who may be able to offer their advice if you are affected by compulsory purchase. A list of useful contact names, addresses and telephone numbers is set out in Appendix 2 to this booklet.

HOW AM I AFFECTED?

2. Compensation when land is taken

General principle

- 2.1 Compensation following a compulsory acquisition of land is based on the principle of equivalence. This means that you should be no worse off in financial terms after the acquisition than you were before. Likewise you should not be any better off.
- 2.2 Because the effects of the compulsory purchase order on the value of a property are ignored when assessing compensation, it is necessary to value the land on the basis of its open market value without any increase or decrease attributable to the scheme of development which underlies the compulsory purchase order.

Valuation date

- 2.3 The valuation date for the assessment of compensation is the earliest of:
- The date the acquiring authority enters and takes possession of the land where the notice to treat procedure is used, or the date the title of the land vests in the acquiring authority when the general vesting declaration procedure is followed.
 - The date values are agreed.
 - The date of the Lands Tribunals decision.

Heads of claim

- 2.4 Depending upon the particular circumstances in each case compensation can be claimed under the following categories, which are referred to as "Heads of Claim":

- The value of the land taken
- Severance and injurious affection
This means the depreciation in the value of land you retain where part only of your land holding is acquired.
- Disturbance
Apart from the rights of an investment owner to recover incidental costs in particular circumstances (see paragraph 2.63), this Head of Claim is only available to occupiers of the property. It represents the costs and losses incurred as a result of being disturbed from the occupation of the property.
- Fees
The reasonable surveyors fees incurred in preparing and negotiating a compensation settlement together with solicitors fees for any conveyancing are normally paid by the acquiring authority.

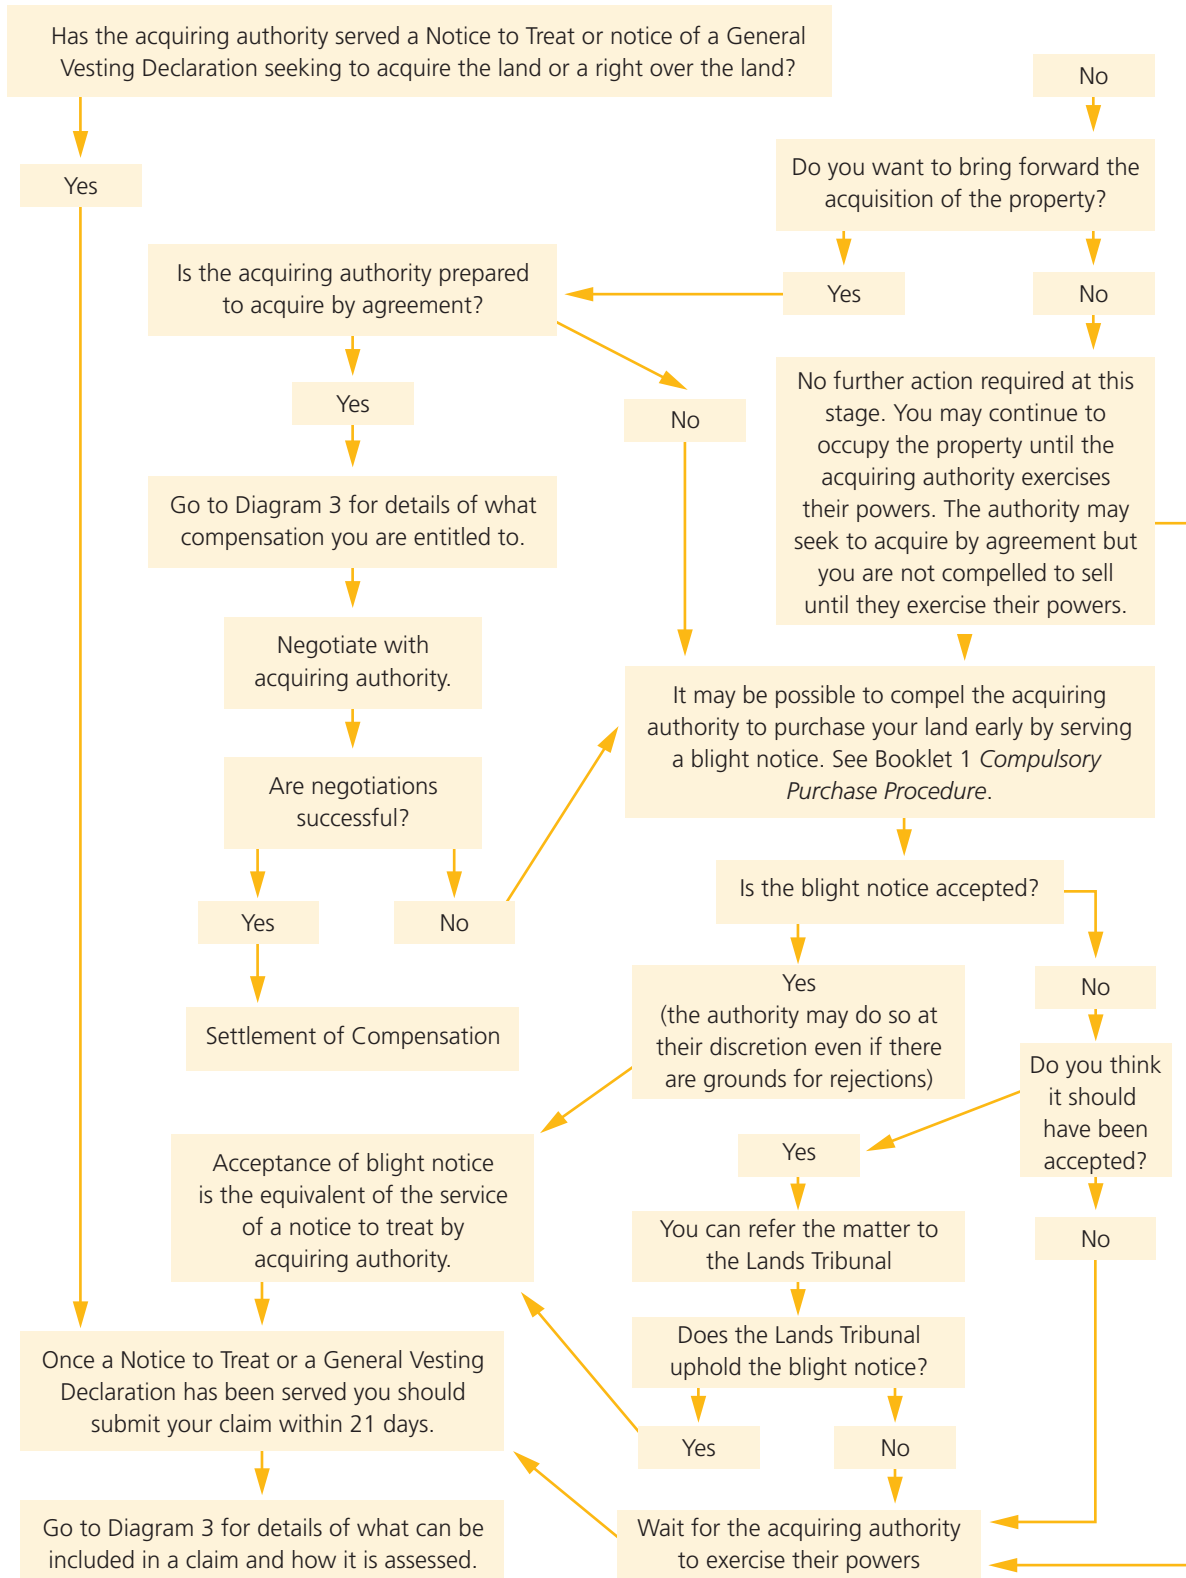

- 2.5 A more detailed explanation of the basis of compensation under each of these heads of claim is set out below.

- 2.6 Diagram 2 sets out which items of claim you may be entitled to in particular circumstances and provides directions to the relevant parts of the booklet.

CAN I MAKE A CLAIM?

Compensation for land taken

- 2.7 When dealing with land for which there is a general market or demand compensation is based on the market value of the land. In exceptional circumstances when dealing with unusual or specialised land for which there is no general market, compensation may be assessed by considering the cost of providing an "equivalent reinstatement" of the property.
- 2.8 It is extremely unlikely that circumstances giving rise to a claim for equivalent reinstatement will occur in the case of residential properties. Accordingly, this basis of compensation is not covered in this booklet. If you feel that your property which is being acquired is one for which there is no general market or demand you should seek professional advice.
- 2.9 Compensation following the acquisition of land for which there is a general market or demand is considered below.

Disregard compulsion

- 2.10 No addition to or reduction from the value of the land is made to reflect the fact that it is being compulsorily acquired. The acquisition of the land is assumed to be an open market transaction between willing parties.

Market value

- 2.11 The value of the land is based upon what the land might be expected to realise if sold in the open market by a willing seller.
- 2.12 In assessing the open market value of your land you are assumed to be a willing seller. However, it is assumed that you would only be willing to sell at the best price which you could reasonably achieve in the open market.
- 2.13 This open market value may be based on the existing use of the property. However, it may reflect development value, "marriage value" and "ransom value" provided it can be demonstrated that these would have existed in the absence of the scheme which gives rise to the compulsory acquisition. An example of ransom value would be where your land could unlock the development potential of an adjoining site by providing the only possible access to it.

Planning assumptions

- 2.14 When considering the potential development value of your property you may assume that permission would be granted for particular uses of the land. Broadly the planning permissions which may be assumed are as follows:
- Any existing permission on the property.
 - Any permitted development which has not yet been implemented.

- Any development which would be in accordance with an allocation in a development plan.
 - The development which the acquiring authority proposes for the land. (However, the valuation cannot take into account a specialist use which could only be undertaken by a body with statutory powers. This is known as “Special Suitability”).
- 2.15 It is important to note that whilst you can assume you would have obtained planning permission for the use of the acquiring authority's scheme, you cannot assume that the scheme itself would take place. So, for example, if your property is being acquired as part of a major commercial development you can assume that your property would have been granted a commercial planning permission. However, you have to consider this in isolation. You cannot assume that all of the other parts of the acquiring authority's scheme, such as the new roads, open space, landscaping, etc will occur.

- 2.16 Where there is a disagreement as to the planning permission to be assumed, you may seek a “Certificate of Appropriate Alternative Development” from the local planning authority which will confirm whether a particular use or list of uses would have been granted planning consent if there was no compulsory purchase order. The procedure for dealing with this is similar to that applied when submitting a planning application but there are a number of differences. Ask your professional adviser about these.

Unlawful use

- 2.17 Any increase in the value of property which is attributable to a use of the property which is unlawful or detrimental to the health of the occupants of the premises or to public health, may not be taken into account.
- 2.18 A use which is unlawful is one which could be subject to planning enforcement proceedings. Therefore, if a property is used for a purpose which requires, but does not have, planning permission, no account can be taken of any increase in value attributable to that use if it could be terminated through enforcement proceedings. If, however, that use could not be subject to enforcement proceedings (for example, the use had been undertaken for such a length of time that a Certificate of Lawful Use would be granted) any increase in value attributable to that use may be taken into account.

Compensation where additional development permitted after acquisition

- 2.19 In certain circumstances there is limited opportunity to make a claim for additional compensation after your land has been acquired.

- 2.20 Where planning permission is granted for additional development on the land within a period of ten years from the valuation date, you are entitled to the difference between the amount you actually received and the amount you would have received if the permission had been in force when notice to treat was served (in the case of a compulsory acquisition) or at the date of the contract (in the case of a sale by agreement).
- 2.21 Additional development is defined as meaning any development of the land other than:
- for the purposes of the functions for which the authority acquired the land; and
 - development for which planning permission was in force or was assumed for the purposes of assessing compensation (see paragraph 2.14 dealing with planning assumptions). The provisions also apply to planning permission granted in respect of any larger area of land which includes within it the land compulsorily acquired.

Mortgages

- 2.22 It is common for dwellings to be subject to a mortgage. Both mortgagees and mortgagors have an interest in land for which there is an entitlement to compensation.

Compensation to mortgagee (lender)

- 2.23 When compensation is settled the outstanding loan from the mortgagee (usually a bank or a building society) is paid off and the mortgage is redeemed.
- 2.24 There may be circumstances where the outstanding loan on the mortgage exceeds the value of the property. This may arise, for example, where arrears have built up or where there is “negative equity” as a result of falling values.
- 2.25 In these circumstances the value of the property being acquired is agreed between the acquiring authority, the lender and the borrower. If the value of the property is less than the outstanding debt on the mortgage there will be no compensation payable to the borrower.
- 2.26 The mortgagee will receive payment of the principal sum outstanding including any arrears and interest due. The lender will retain the right to recover the outstanding sum and any interest due thereon from the borrower.

Compensation to mortgagor (borrower)

- 2.27 The mortgagor will receive compensation for the value of the property being acquired less the sum outstanding on the mortgage which is paid to the mortgagee.

- 2.28 Where the outstanding loan on the mortgage exceeds the value of the property there is no compensation to the mortgagor in respect of the property interest. The acquiring authority will pay the value of the property to the lender. The borrower will still be liable to the lender for the amount of any outstanding sum plus interest due thereon. The borrower may still have an entitlement to other heads of compensation such as a home-loss payment.
- 2.29 There is also an entitlement to compensation if losses occur as a result of having to take out a new mortgage. This falls within the compensation for disturbance and is considered below in the section on disturbance.

Acquisition of part only

- 2.30 In addition to the value of the actual land acquired there may be other issues to consider if the acquiring authority only acquires a part of your land. This is summarised in Diagram 3.

Severance and injurious affection

- 2.31 If you have a part only of your land acquired there may be an additional entitlement to compensation in respect of the adverse effect on the land you retain.
- 2.32 The compensation is for the depreciation in value of the retained land and is referred to as “severance” and/or “injurious affection”.
- 2.33 The two elements of this head of claim should be considered in isolation.

Severance

- 2.34 Severance occurs when the land acquired contributes to the value of the land which is retained, so that when severed from it, the retained land loses value. For example, if a railway is built across the garden of a house it may make the house less desirable, and consequently less valuable, because the garden added to the value of the house.

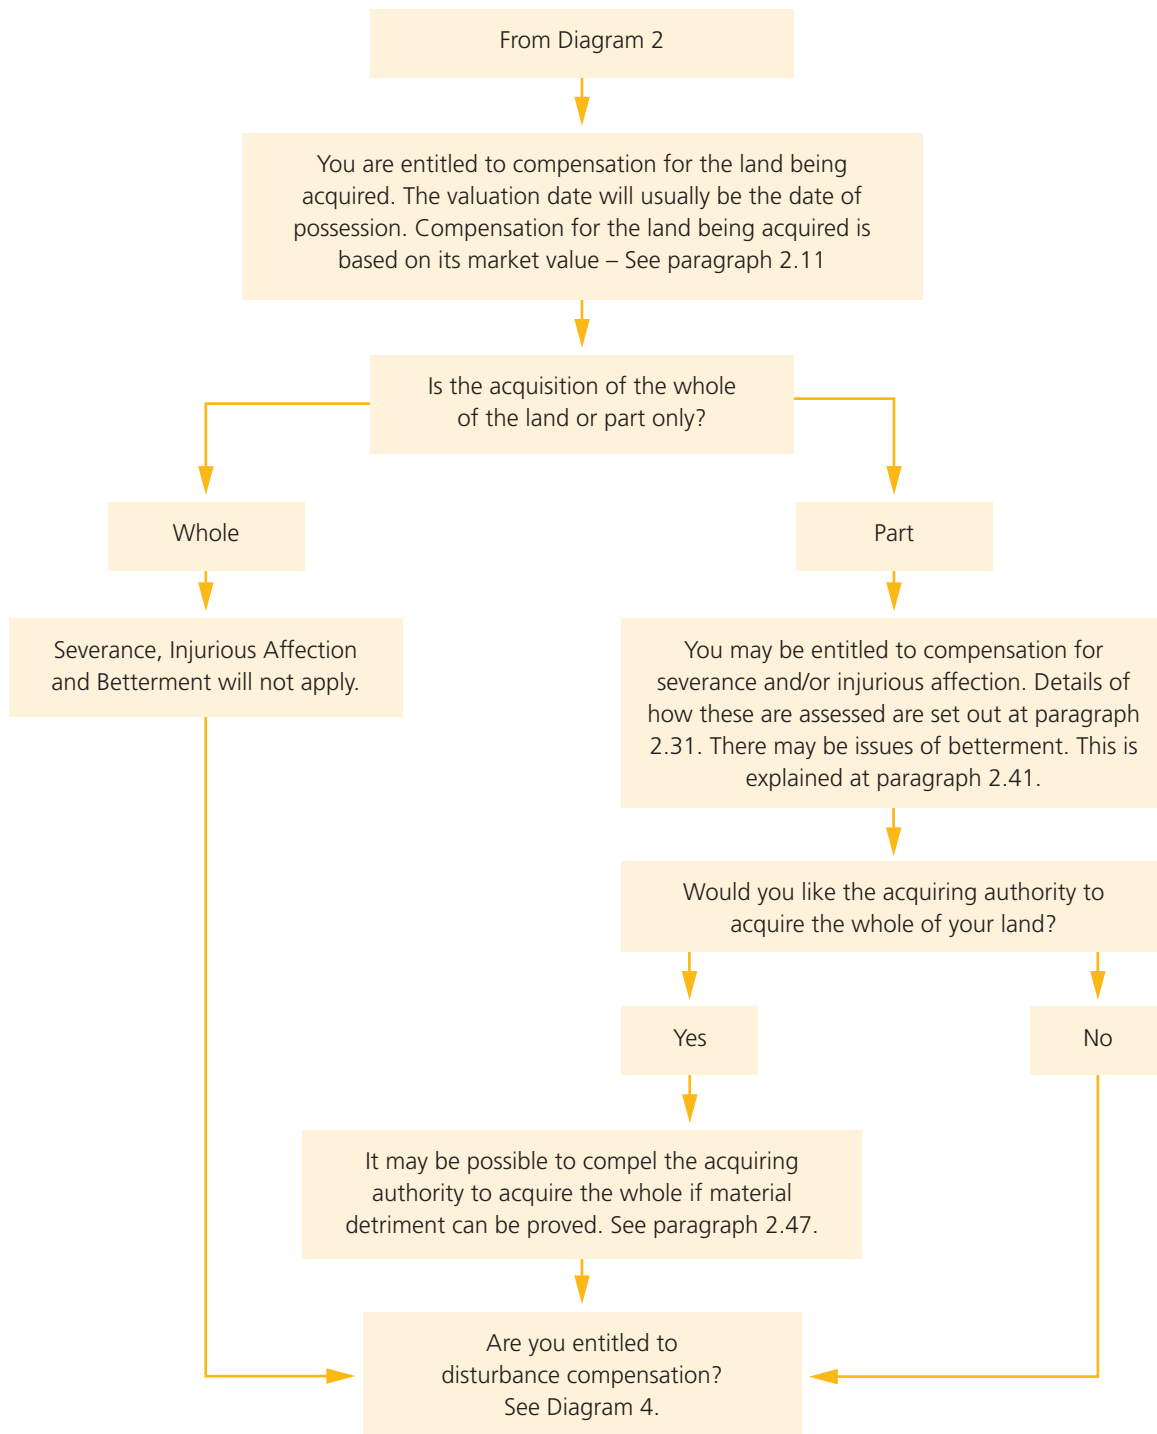

Injurious affection

- 2.35 Injurious affection is the depreciation in value of the retained land as a result of the proposed construction on, and use of, the land acquired by the acquiring authority for the scheme. In the case of the above example, if the garden which was acquired became a railway the loss of amenity due to noise, fumes, vibration, loss of view, etc resulting from the use of the railway may reduce the value of the property further.
- 2.36 It is the impact of the whole of the proposed scheme that is to be considered, not just the effect on the area acquired from you. Compensation is claimable both for the construction of works and their subsequent use.

2.37 Therefore it can be seen that both severance and injurious affection can reduce the value of the retained land. Severance occurs when the land becomes separated whereas injurious affection occurs as a result of the construction and use of the acquiring authority's scheme.

Diagram 3

CLAIM FOR LAND WHEN WHOLE OR PART IS TAKEN

"Before and after" approach

- 2.38 If you only have a part of your property acquired, the claim for land taken, severance and injurious affection can all be dealt with together by adopting a 'before and after approach'. This is in line with the principle of equivalence which states that you should be in the same position after the acquisition as you were before, in monetary terms.
- 2.39 The way this works is to agree the value of the whole of the property in the no scheme world (i.e. disregarding the development that gave rise to the compulsory purchase order) prior to acquisition and to compare this with the value of what you are left with in the scheme world (i.e. taking that development into account) after the acquisition. The difference between the two (if any) should be payable as compensation.
- 2.40 The before and after approach can also be used to take account of betterment which is considered below.

Betterment

- 2.41 In assessing compensation, the acquiring authority will have regard to any increase in value of land you retain that is adjacent to or adjoining the land acquired. This is generally referred to as "betterment".
- 2.42 Betterment is the opposite of injurious affection. There may be instances where the scheme of the acquiring authority may increase the value of your retained land.
- 2.43 An example of this would be if you owned a house, of which a small part of the garden was acquired for the construction of a new road and that new road enhances access to the house thereby increasing its value. In such circumstances, the acquiring authority will seek to offset this increase in value against the compensation that is payable in respect of the land acquired.
- 2.44 The acquiring authority should, of course, be able to explain their grounds for considering that their proposal has generated an increase in the value of your retained land.
- 2.45 Where betterment occurs it may sometimes be appropriate to adopt the before and after approach referred to above. This will take into account the issues of land taken, severance, injurious affection and betterment.
- 2.46 In an extreme case you would receive no compensation because the enhancement in value of the retained land is equal to or greater than the compensation for the land acquired. The least compensation you can receive is nil. In no circumstances can the acquiring authority expect you to pay them.

Material detriment

- 2.47 There is another course of action which you may be able to take if the authority is only proposing to acquire part of your property. It may be possible to advance a claim for “material detriment”, seeking to make the authority acquire the whole of the property interest rather than just a part.
- 2.48 Where part only of your property (such as some or all of your garden) is to be acquired you may require the authority to acquire the whole where the part retained will be less useful or less valuable in some significant degree. In the case of a dispute the issue will be determined by reference to the Lands Tribunal. This can be a complicated matter which you should discuss with your professional adviser.

Disturbance compensation

- 2.49 In addition to being compensated for the value of the land taken and severance and injurious affection you are also entitled to the losses occasioned by being “disturbed” from land or premises. The right to compensation for disturbance only applies if the compensation for the land taken is based on existing use value. This is considered further at paragraph 2.61
- 2.50 The general principles of disturbance are summarised in Diagram 4.
- 2.51 For the most part the right to disturbance compensation is restricted to occupiers. There is, however, a limited right for investment owners to recover their costs of reinvestment in a replacement property investment in certain circumstances see paragraph 2.63.
- 2.52 If you have to sell or move out of your property you are entitled to the costs and expenses reasonably incurred in vacating that property. The claim can include the costs of acquiring a replacement property (but not the cost of the property) and the costs of moving in to the property.
- 2.53 Subject to the comments on “Re-housing” at paragraph 2.71, there is no obligation on an acquiring authority to provide alternative premises. However, most will help you to identify possibilities available on the market. Accordingly, you should contact the acquiring authority and local estate agents at an early stage to register property search requirements.
- 2.54 Examples of items which can be claimed are set out below:
- removal expenses;
 - legal fees arising from the acquisition of a replacement property;
 - stamp duty arising from the acquisition of a replacement property;
 - surveyors fees arising from the acquisition of a replacement property;

Diagram 4

CLAIM FOR DISTURBANCE

- survey fee and costs in connection with the transfer of an existing mortgage or raising a new one;
- special adaptations of the replacement premises;
- altering soft furnishings and moveable fittings and fixtures to fit your new home;
- disconnection and reconnection of services telephone, electricity, etc;
- forwarding of post (for a reasonable period);
- incidental costs of acquiring replacement property;
- if a tenant is displaced from rented accommodation as a result of a compulsory purchase the acquiring authority may agree to pay the reasonable expenses incurred (other than the price of the property) of buying a reasonably comparable dwelling, provided it is bought within a year of the displacement.

- 2.55 This is not an exhaustive list. Every loss should be considered on its merits and should be recoverable if a natural, direct and reasonable consequence of being disturbed. The onus is on the claimant to justify his or her claim. Therefore it is up to you to prove that you should be compensated rather than expect the acquiring authority to come up with anything. Accordingly, it is of the utmost importance that you keep a detailed record of losses sustained and costs incurred in connection with the acquisition of your property. You should keep all relevant documentary evidence such as receipts, invoices and fee quotes. You should also keep a record of the amount of time you have spent on matters relating to the compulsory purchase of your property.

Mortgages

- 2.56 Losses may occur as a result of having to transfer a mortgage. Provided the losses flow as a direct and reasonable consequence of the acquisition you will be entitled to compensation.
- 2.57 There may be circumstances where you have a mortgage which is fixed at a favourable rate and you have to take a new mortgage at a higher rate which will be more expensive. Where this occurs compensation is paid based on the difference between the net amount it would cost to repay the outstanding sum on the mortgage at the old rate and how much it would cost at the new rate.
- 2.58 If you have to buy a more expensive dwelling than the one which was compulsorily acquired you may have to take out a larger mortgage which your income cannot support. If the acquiring authority is a local council they may be willing to grant a special mortgage under which the repayment of the capital sum is deferred until a later date to be agreed.

Other costs

- 2.59 The acquiring authority will pay other unavoidable costs arising from moving home. For example, if you owned the property which is acquired you will be entitled to claim for the legal costs of conveyance you incur when acquiring a new property. These costs will be paid up to the amount that would be payable if the purchase price of your new property was not more than the market value of your old one. Above this level the acquiring authority may refuse on the grounds that you are benefiting from the fact that you are ending up with a better property than you started with. This is because you are said to have received "value for money". The authority may exercise some discretion here.

- 2.60 Likewise an acquiring authority has discretion if a displaced tenant whose interest is for a year or yearly decides to buy a house or flat rather than take out a new lease. If this occurs the authority may agree to pay the reasonable expenses incurred in purchasing a reasonably comparable dwelling provided it is bought within 12 months of displacement.

No disturbance when land value reflects development potential

- 2.61 You are only entitled to compensation for disturbance where the compensation for land taken has been based upon the market value for its existing use. Where the land compensation is based upon the development value of the land there is no entitlement to disturbance compensation.
- 2.62 This restriction only applies within a single claim. Where there are two or more claimants within one property (for example a landlord and a tenant), the actions of one claimant will not bind the other. So, for example, if the landlord of a property submits a claim based on the development value of his freehold interest in the property, this will not preclude the tenant from being compensated for the existing use value of his leasehold interest plus the disturbance compensation for having to move out of the property.

Disturbance to investment owners

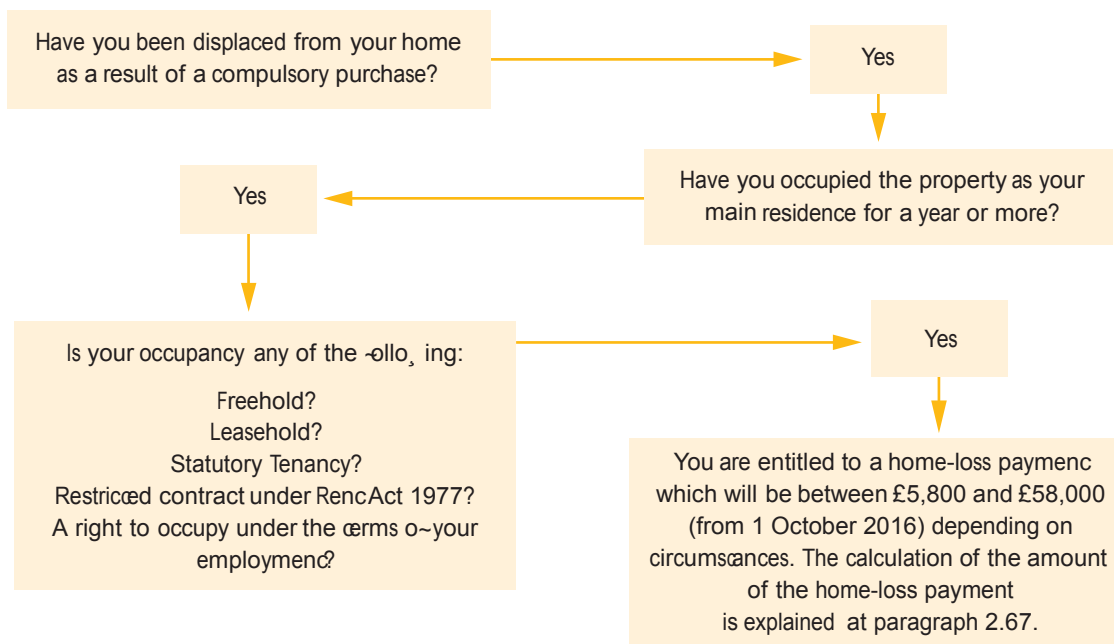

- 2.63 In order to be entitled to compensation for disturbance you must normally be in physical occupation of the land. There is, however, a limited right to disturbance for owners of investment properties who are not in occupation. Compensation is payable in respect of incidental charges or expenses incurred in acquiring, within a period of one year of date of entry, an interest in other land in the United Kingdom.

Home-loss payment

- 2.64 If you are actually living in the property you may be entitled to a home-loss payment in addition to any other compensation due. The home-loss payment is an additional sum to reflect and recognise the distress and discomfort of being compelled to move out of your home. A number of criteria need to be fulfilled to qualify for payment. These are summarised in Diagram 5 and explained more fully in the accompanying text.

Diagram 5

AM I ENTITLED TO A LOSS PAYMENT?

Occupation of the property

2.65 To qualify for a home-loss payment:

- you must have lived in the dwelling, or a substantial part of it, as your only or main residence, for a period of not less than one year ending with the day you have to move out; and
- your interest or right to occupy the property was freehold, leasehold, statutory tenancy or restricted contract under the Rent Act 1977, or a right to occupy under the terms of your employment or under a licence where secured tenancy or introductory tenancy provisions apply.

2.66 If you occupy a caravan you may qualify for a home-loss payment if you have lived in a caravan on the same permanent site for a minimum period of one year and no suitable alternative site for stationing your caravan is available on reasonable terms.

Amount of home-loss payment

2.67 If you are the owner of a freehold or a lease with at least three years unexpired you are entitled to 10 per cent of the market value of your interest, subject to a maximum payment of £58,000 and a minimum payment of £5,800 (from 1 October 2016). Any other claimant is entitled to a flat rate of £5,800.

2.68 Where two or more people are entitled to make a claim for a home-loss payment in respect of the same interest (such as a husband and wife who are joint owner-occupiers or joint tenants who share the same home) the payment is divided equally between claimants.

2.69 The claim for a home-loss payment must be submitted within six years of the date you have to move out and must be in writing.

2.70 The acquiring authority must make the payment on or before the latest of:

- the date of displacement; or
- three months from the date of the claim; or
- the date on which the market value of the interest (upon which the payment is based) was agreed or determined.

Re-housing

2.71 Where no suitable alternative accommodation is available on reasonable terms the local housing authority has a duty to re-house a resident whose dwelling has been compulsorily acquired regardless of which public authority was responsible for the acquisition.

2.72 In order to qualify you must have been in residence from the date the notice of making of the compulsory purchase order was published.

2.73 There is no entitlement to re-housing for a trespasser, a person permitted to reside pending demolition, or a claimant who brings about the acquisition by serving a blight notice. Further details about blight notices can be found in Booklet 1 – Compulsory Purchase Procedure.

2.74 If you are genuinely made homeless but you do not qualify for re-housing you should contact your local housing department immediately as they may still be able to help.

2.75 If you are re-housed this will not affect the amount of compensation which the acquiring authority pays and an authority must not seek to make a reduction to reflect re-housing.

2.76 The compensation payable to a landlord will not be affected if his tenants are re-housed by the council. Provided they are re-housed after the landlord receives his notice to treat compensation will continue to be assessed at market value subject to the occupational tenancies.

2.77 The right to re-housing does not only apply to houses and flats but also extends to permanent caravan sites. The qualifying conditions are the same as for other dwellings except that there is no right to be re-housed if there is a suitable alternative site for stationing the caravan available on reasonable terms.

Disabled persons

- 2.78 If the home of a disabled person has been adapted to meet his or her special needs, the compensation to the occupier or the landlord may reflect the cost of providing or modifying a similar dwelling.
- 2.79 There may be circumstances where a disabled person is a tenant in a dwelling which is acquired and the landlord is not prepared to provide another dwelling which is suitable for occupation by a disabled person. If this occurs and there is no other suitable alternative accommodation available on reasonable terms, the council may re-house the disabled tenant and make alterations to the dwelling they provide as necessary.

Occupiers with no compensatable interest in land

- 2.80 There is a limited right of compensation if you were in lawful occupation of land at the time the compulsory purchase order was first published, but you have no “compensatable” interest in the land. This may include tenants at will, licensees and tenants holding over. Each of these amount to occupation of land or buildings by some form of agreement with the owner which is less than a formal lease and, in most cases, they may be terminated at short notice by either party.
- 2.81 Trespassers and squatters do not have any rights to compensation.
- 2.82 Compensation should reflect disturbance items such as removal costs. Regard is had to the amount of time the land occupied would have been likely to have remained available for occupation. There is also a discretionary power to make payments to people who do not qualify.

Advance payment of compensation

- 2.83 In some cases it may be necessary for the acquiring authority to take possession of your property before compensation has been paid, or even agreed. In these circumstances, you are entitled to request an advance on your compensation. The advance payment request may be made before or after possession of the land has taken place. The authority is obliged to make the payment within three months of receipt of the request provided they have taken possession of the land. If they have not taken possession of the land within three months from receipt of the request, the advance payment must be paid once entry onto the land occurs.

- 2.84 The level of advance payment is 90 per cent of either:
- the agreed compensation, or
 - where there is no agreement, the acquiring authority's estimate.
- 2.85 If the property is mortgaged the acquiring authority will reduce the advance payment by the amount of the outstanding mortgage sum. However, in some circumstances it may then be possible to require the authority to make an advance payment direct to your mortgagee.

Blight

- 2.87 If your property is “blighted” you may be able to serve a blight notice to compel an authority to acquire the property.
- 2.88 The definition of blight, and the requirements and procedures for serving a blight notice are set out in Booklet 1 Compulsory Purchase Procedure. If you are successful and your blight notice is accepted, the principles of valuation and assessment of compensation are identical to those which apply had the land been compulsorily acquired.

3. Compensation when no land is taken

- 3.1 The procedures outlined so far apply only when land (or new rights over land) is acquired. However, a right to compensation may also arise in limited circumstances when no land is taken but when statutory powers are exercised.
- 3.2 Compensation can be claimed for:
- a reduction in the value of your land caused by the execution (construction) of public works
 - a reduction in the value of your land caused by the subsequent use of public works.
- 3.3 Each is summarised in Diagram 6. Greater detail is provided in the accompanying text.

CLAIM WHEN NO LAND IS TAKEN

Moveable homes

- 3.4 In addition to the circumstances explained below in Diagram 6 there are further compensation provisions to be considered for occupiers of moveable homes (which include caravans and houseboats).
- 3.5 If you occupy a moveable home you may be able to receive a "noise payment" of up to £1,650 if a new highway or altered highway is constructed or opened to the public within 300 metres of your moveable home. For further details see the section on moveable homes in Booklet 5 Mitigation Works.

Reduction in value caused by the execution of works

- 3.6 Compensation is payable when a loss occurs because some right in property (as opposed to the actual property itself) is taken away or interfered with. For example, this could be a right of way. The requirements are that the injury done must:
- be authorised by statutory power;
 - arise from that which would, if done without the statutory authority, have been actionable at law, for example as a nuisance;
 - arise from a physical interference with some right, public or private, which attaches to the land;
 - arise solely from the execution of the works and not as a result of their subsequent use.

Valuation date

- 3.7 The relevant date for the assessment of compensation is the date at which the loss occurred. This is most likely to be the date of interference with the right in land.

Basis of compensation

- 3.8 Were it not for the fact that the works giving rise to the loss are authorised by an Act of Parliament a claim for damages could be pursued.

- 3.9 You must be able to demonstrate that the loss is a natural and reasonable consequence of the execution of the works. Compensation is based upon the reduction in value of the land which had benefited from the right which has been interfered with.

Reduction in value caused by the use of public works

- 3.10 This right to compensation is set out in Part I of the Land Compensation Act 1973. This is commonly referred to as “a Part I claim”. It applies to certain “public works” such as a highway, an aerodrome and other works provided under statutory powers. In addition to new works the provisions cover substantial alterations and changes of use to existing works but not intensification of a use (unless alterations are also carried out).

- 3.11 In order to be able to submit a claim you must own a qualifying interest in the land before the relevant date.

The relevant date

- 3.12 If the public works in question is a highway, the relevant date is the date on which it was first open to public traffic. With regard to any other public works it is the date on which they were first used after completion.

Qualifying interest

- 3.13 A qualifying interest is a freehold or a tenancy in a dwelling house or flat with at least three years unexpired at the date of notice of claim.

Valuation date

- 3.14 Compensation is based upon prices current on the first claim day, which is 12 months after use of the public works first commenced. Interest is payable from the date the claim is submitted until payment.

Basis of compensation

- 3.15 Compensation is based upon the depreciation in the value of the land due to the "physical factors" caused by the use of the public works.
- 3.16 The seven specified physical factors are:
- noise
 - vibration
 - smell
 - fumes
 - smoke
 - artificial light
 - discharge onto the land of any solid or liquid substance.
- 3.17 Any depreciation in value which is attributable to reasons other than these seven specific factors is not compensatable. For example, the loss of a view is not compensatable.
- 3.18 The important distinction between this and a claim for the execution of works (described in paragraph 3.6) is that it is the use of the works which must cause the depreciation. For example, if a motorway is constructed in close proximity to a house, any claim under Part I must relate to the depreciation in value caused by the noise and other physical factors associated with the traffic using the road and not to the physical existence of the highway.
- 3.19 If you sell your property before the first claim day (see paragraph 3.14) you must make a claim between exchanging contracts and completion or you will lose your rights to compensation.

4. Compensation for the adverse effects of development

- 4.1 In addition to decreasing the value of land, development works may cause inconvenience and discomfort to people living in the area. An obvious example is the development of a new motorway.
- 4.2 Although financial compensation can be paid for the reduction in value of your property if the requirements of the Compensation Code are fulfilled, this will not remove the source of the discomfort. Acquiring authorities have therefore been given certain duties and discretionary powers to take action which will help to reduce the impact of their development works. The exercise of these powers is referred to as “mitigating the injurious effects” of the development.
- 4.3 The main duty is a requirement to undertake noise insulation works where certain specified criteria are fulfilled. This duty only applies to dwellings or other buildings used for residential purposes.
- 4.4 A number of criteria need to be fulfilled to qualify for noise insulation works. This is set out in more detail in Booklet 5 – Mitigation Works.
- 4.5 In addition to their duty to undertake noise insulation works, acquiring authorities have certain discretionary powers to reduce the effects of their development by agreement with those whose premises are affected. Such measures can include sound-proofing (in a wider range of circumstances than those to which the statutory duty applies); acquiring more land than that required for the actual development; carrying out earth-moulding and other landscaping works; and paying your expenses if the authority were to agree that you needed to move out temporarily during the construction works.
- 4.6 Further details about these duties and powers are provided in Booklet 5 – Mitigation Works.

5. Fees

- 5.1 The acquiring authority will usually pay the reasonable surveyors fees which you incur for negotiating claims. Before employing a surveyor it is wise to ensure that you both agree a reasonable basis for calculating fees.
- 5.2 Legal fees for conveyancing are also payable, and likewise a reasonable basis for their calculation should be agreed.

6. Interest

- 6.1 Where an acquiring authority enters and takes possession of land before agreeing compensation, simple interest, at a prescribed rate, is payable from the date of entry until compensation is paid.
- 6.2 If a claim is made for compensation which arises as a result of nearby public development, but no land is actually acquired, simple interest is payable on any sum due from the date you submit your claim to the date of payment.

Appendix 1 – Terms used in compulsory purchase

Set out below is a list of terms and definitions commonly referred to when dealing with compulsory purchase matters.

Compensation Code

A collective term for the principles, derived from Acts of Parliament and case law, relating to compensation for compulsory acquisition.

Entry

See “Taking of Entry”.

General Vesting Declaration (GVD)

A legal procedure used in connection with compulsory purchase whereby an acquiring authority, having obtained a compulsory purchase order, is able to obtain possession and ownership of the land. This is a procedure for the speedy acquisition of land and normal conveyancing practice does not have to be adopted.

Goodwill

The price which a purchaser of a business is prepared to pay, above the value of the premises and stock, for the probability that customers will continue to resort to the old place of business, or continue to deal with the firm of the same name: it is the benefit or advantage which a business has in its connection with its customers.

Investment property

Generally, any property purchased with the primary intention of retaining it and enjoying the total return, i.e. income and/or capital growth, over the life of the interest acquired.

Land

Land includes buildings and structures. Existing interests and rights in land, such as freehold or leasehold together with any existing rights can be compulsorily acquired either as a whole or in part.

Lands Tribunal

A tribunal for England and Wales set up under the Lands Tribunal Act 1949 and proceeding in accordance with rules made by the Lord Chancellor. Its jurisdiction, amongst others, includes adjudication on disputed compensation for the compulsory acquisition of land. The tribunal comprises the President (who must be a barrister or have held judicial office) and members who are all either legally qualified or experienced in valuation.

Marriage value

Latent value which is or would be released by the merger of two or more interests in land. For example, two adjoining parcels may be worth more as one property than the aggregate of their separate values. Similarly, two interests in the same property (such as the freehold and the leasehold) may have a greater value when merged than the sum of their individual values.

Mitigation of loss

The duty of a claimant seeking compensation to take any reasonable steps open to him to reduce or avoid loss. For example, a claimant could mitigate loss by seeking a number of quotes from reputable contractors and instructing the cheapest.

New rights

Compulsory purchase can be used by most acquiring authorities to create and acquire new rights over land. An example would be the creation of a right of way or a right of support.

Noise payment

A noise payment is available to moveable homes within 300 metres of a new or altered road who have been seriously affected by increased noise levels as a result. It is payable at the discretion of the Highway Authority.

Notice of Entry

A notice served on the owner and occupier(s) of a property by an authority possessing compulsory purchase powers requiring possession to be given by a date prescribed in the notice. A minimum of 14 days notice must be given.

Notice to Treat

A notice served on owners, lessees and mortgagees by an authority with compulsory purchase powers to acquire land. The notice gives particulars of the property to be acquired, demands details of the recipients interest in the land and his claim for compensation and states that the authority are willing to treat for the purchase of the land.

Public development

A new or altered highway, aerodrome or other public works.

Ransom value

The ability to obtain a high price for a small area which is key to the site being developed. For example, where your land could unlock the development potential of an adjoining site by providing the only possible access to it.

Relevant date

In the context of a Public Inquiry it is the date of the letter which the Confirming Minister sends to the acquiring authority and the objectors confirming that an Inquiry is to be held. This date is used to establish timetables for the Inquiry procedure.

Statement of case

A statement prepared by the acquiring authority which sets out full particulars of the case to be put forward at the inquiry and justifies the reasons for making the compulsory purchase order.

Statement of reasons

Sets out the authority's reasons for seeking to acquire the land, and will accompany the compulsory purchase order.

Taking of Entry

This is the act of an acquiring authority physically entering and taking possession of a property following service of Notice to Treat and Notice of Entry.
