ICT Services for Education

- Your route to buy specialist ICT services, hardware and infrastructure for the education sector

The ICT Services for Education deal was developed in collaboration with the Department for Education and the Education Funding Agency.

With access to a diverse pool of suppliers ranging from small to large enterprises, the agreement provides a flexible and quick route for education establishments (including academies, free schools, colleges and universities) to access specialist ICT services, hardware and infrastructure.

Through this agreement you can buy anything from a complete solution for a new school through to ongoing IT maintenance and support.

Products and services available

If you're a public sector buyer, our software team can offer you a range of solutions and services to suit your organisation's needs and ensure great value.

The delivery models available under the agreement include:

- supply and fit
- support and maintenance
- systems configuration and management
- partial or fully managed ICT service
- complete integrated service with other technologies/partners
- supply and integration of solutions into both green field (new build) situations and legacy
- ICT environments requiring integration and repurposing of existing ICT

The ICT solutions available include, but are not limited to:

- hardware (servers and user computing devices)
- software (operating systems, office productivity, network, security etc.)
- networks (routers, switching, cabling, local area network infrastructures etc.)
- peripheral equipment (printers, peripherals to support specialist curriculum provision.)
- audio visual equipment
- user devices (desktop computers, tablets, high specification devices)
- mobile connectivity (as an integrated package within user devices)

Any other common commodity products or commercial off-the-shelf software applications can be bought through our Technology Products and Technology Services deals which both complement this agreement.
