

Titles (Foreign)

General guidance

1. George V took the view that the use in this country of foreign titles of nobility should in due course be discontinued and, in 1932, he revoked the Royal Warrants listed in the fourth column of the attached Annex which had allowed the use of the foreign dignitaries and titles set out in the second and third columns of the Annex. The current holder, his son and grandson where named could continue to use the title for his own lifetime.
2. Apart from these exceptions official recognition is not given to the use of foreign titles by British citizens and care should be taken not to address any British citizen (whether by naturalisation or otherwise) by such a title.

Foreign titles held by applicants for naturalisation

3. While there is nothing to prevent a British citizen in the United Kingdom from using a foreign title for private purposes, such a title cannot be officially recognised. When an application is received from a person who appears to hold a foreign title, the caseworker should:

- seek confirmation of its authenticity from the Honours Department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; and
- write, as below, addressing him by his title, to warn him that it will not receive official recognition

"The Secretary of State thinks it right to point out that if you become a British citizen your foreign title will not receive official recognition in this country and that in accordance with the established practice it will be omitted from the certificate. I am to request that you will specifically acknowledge your acceptance of this position."

4. Enquiries should not be put in hand until the applicant has acknowledged his acceptance of the position.
5. Similarly, if an alien who uses a foreign title enquires about becoming naturalised and appears to be residentially qualified, the answer to his enquiry should include a warning about the use of his title if naturalisation is granted and a request for a letter confirming that he accepts the position
