English providers

From 1 August 2017, UK students who choose to study in England should apply to their home country for fee and living cost support. These students will receive support for fee loans and living costs through the standard student support system, rather than through course fees and NHS bursaries for living costs.

These students will therefore be subject to the same student finance arrangements that apply to other undergraduates in 2017/18.

Scottish providers

From 1 August 2017, UK students who choose to study in Scotland, and who are not ordinarily domiciled in Scotland, should apply to their home country for fee and living cost support.

These students will receive support for fee loans and living costs through their home country's standard student support system, rather than through the SAAS.

These students will therefore be subject to the same student finance arrangements that apply to other undergraduates who are not ordinarily domiciled in Scotland in 2017/18.

Students who are ordinarily domiciled in Scotland, who choose to study in another part of the UK, should apply to the Student Awards Agency Scotland (SAAS) for the standard undergraduate support package. The Scottish Government has written to all Scottish universities and colleges to explain the changes.

Welsh providers

From 1 August 2017, UK and EU students who choose to study in Wales will continue to receive the current bursary package, subject to them meeting a new eligibility requirement.

Students must now sign an agreement to work in Wales for two years post-study in order to be eligible for the healthcare bursary. Note that this will apply to all UK and EU students.

If the student chooses not to agree to the 2 year tie in, they will be ineligible for the healthcare bursary. These students should apply to their home country for fee and living cost support and will therefore be subject to the same student finance arrangements that apply to other undergraduates in 2017/18.

NI providers

From 1 August 2017, only Northern Irish and EU students will be able to apply for courses at NI providers. Bursary arrangements for these students remain in place.
