

THE ARMED FORCES COVENANT ANNUAL REPORT 2017

Summary

A message from the Defence Secretary

The Covenant honours the sacrifices the Armed Forces Community make to keep us safe, including those of Families and Veterans. It is also a partnership between the Armed Forces and wider society and I am pleased to see evidence in this year's report of the positive impact the Covenant is having in helping to integrate the Armed Forces with their local communities.

The annual report details the progress made in 2017, including in the key areas of healthcare, education and accommodation. As with previous years, the main achievements are summarised in this booklet. For serving personnel and their families, these include the continued success of the Forces Help to Buy Scheme; better processes being introduced to support Service children transferring between schools; and agreement from the major broadband providers to waive cancellation fees for Service personnel and their partners posted abroad, complementing similar schemes already in place for mobile phone contracts and car insurance. For those approaching the end of their service and those who have left, the launch of the Veterans' Gateway and the Transition Intervention and Liaison services are examples of coordinated, easily accessible services being provided for those most in need.

Whilst much has been achieved, more remains to be done. Feedback has identified a range of issues where concerns remain, including the maintenance of Service accommodation, childcare provision and transition to civilian life. These areas and others will be the focus of our efforts going forward.
