Understanding and Use of Trauma Informed Practice

featuring

Dr Kieran McCartan | Professor of Criminology | University of the West of England and

Lisa Rowles | Director of Innovation & Evidence | Khulisa

(Plus pre-recorded input from a service user discussing their experiences and the role of trauma in their journey)

Experience of trauma, especially psychological and emotional, is universal and impacts on all areas of human functioning, including physical, emotional, social and spiritual wellbeing.

Trauma is often an “underlying” condition informing other problematic presentations, (e.g. drug/alcohol misuse/difficult behaviours). Trauma-informed practice builds on the foundation of awareness, understanding and responsiveness to the impact of traumatic events in the lives of both service users and professionals.

This free seminar will offer an overview of current national and international research on adverse childhood experiences, trauma and problematic experiences. Expert Practitioners and a former service-user will then discuss the real world challenges faced and what services need to be commissioned to increase the resilience and wellbeing of those affected.
