Preface

Rules of terminology

1. Terminology forms a foundation for common understanding, and therefore builds interoperability. The 2012 direction by Chief of the Defence Staff and Permanent Under Secretary to 'put NATO [North Atlantic Treaty Organization] at the heart of Defence', has also been adhered to for terminology. Staff officers should be aware of the following guiding principles when using terminology and aim to use agreed terminology whenever possible in their work. There is a hierarchy of terms and definitions we use, which are:

- Concise Oxford English Dictionary;
- NATOTerm; and
- Joint Doctrine Publication (JDP) 0-01.1, UK Terminology Supplement to NATOTerm.

2. Concise Oxford English Dictionary. This is the primary source publication for all terminology (even NATO, who also use Le Petit Robert for the French equivalent). Where a definition already exists in the dictionary and it is applicable to the context you are using it in, you should use it without modifying or enhancing it.<sup>1</sup> If, however, the definition is not fit for purpose for your concept, then move on to the next stage – NATOTerm.

3. NATOTerm. This is NATO's terminology database. In the past NATO has maintained many individual glossaries. The overarching glossary has been Allied Administrative Publication (AAP)-06, NATO Glossary of Terms and Definitions, which contains:

- 'general terminology with a specific military meaning;

1 Make sure you are using the most up-to-date version of the hard copy – not an online version. In 2018, the most current version is the 12th Edition, published 2011.

- specialist terminology that needs to be widely understood throughout NATO; as well as
- terms that are not adequately defined in the NATO Terminology Programme (NTP)'s reference dictionaries (Concise Oxford English Dictionary and Le Petit Robert), thus promoting mutual understanding and strengthening the Alliance's defence capabilities.<sup>2</sup>

Whilst AAP-06 does still exist, it will be phased out and we should therefore always use the authoritative database NATOTerm. NATOTerm has also incorporated more than 20 other specialist subject glossaries, for example, AAP-39, NATO Handbook of Land Operations Terminology and Allied Medical Publication (AMedP)-13, NATO Glossary of Medical Terms and Definitions. NATOTerm now holds more than 10,000 terms and definitions.

4. Joint Doctrine Publication 0-01.1, UK Terminology Supplement to NATOTerm. If the Concise Oxford English Dictionary and NATOTerm do not have a definition that is fit for purpose, then check this JDP.

Current edition changes

5. This publication will be updated electronically twice a year to take into account the update of UK doctrine publications, as well as removing those definitions that have now been developed and ratified by NATO. From 2019 onwards, 'Year, Edition A' will be published in January and 'Year, Edition B' will be published in July.

Proposing new or amending terminology

6. If you have new terminology you would like to propose to be added to this publication, or amendments you feel should be made, please contact the Development, Concepts and Doctrine Centre's Editor 2. Contact details are below.

Acronyms and abbreviations

7. NATOTerm gives a full and comprehensive list of all NATO Agreed acronyms and abbreviations. Where the UK has formally agreed the use of an acronym or abbreviation, it will be shown in JDP 0-01.1 as part of the terminological entry.
