WHAT DOES THE EU SETTLEMENT SCHEME MEAN FOR EMPLOYERS?

Given the valuable contribution EU citizens¹ make to businesses and organisations across the UK, employers may wish to communicate with their EU staff about the EU Settlement Scheme. The information below sets out your obligations as an employer:

- It is the responsibility of the individual to make an application to the EU Settlement Scheme. There is no requirement for the individual to inform you, as an employer, that they have applied or the outcome of their application. Likewise, you are not required to check that an employee has applied.
- You have a duty not to discriminate against EU citizens in light of the UK's decision to leave the EU as both a prospective and current employer. You cannot make an offer of employment, or continued employment, dependent on an individual having made an application.
- Current 'right to work' checks (e.g. passport and/or national identity card) apply until the end of 2020. EU citizens can also evidence their right to work using the online right to work service, if they choose to do so. However, they are under no obligation to demonstrate their right to work in this way.
- There will be no change to the rights and status of EU citizens living in the UK until 30 June 2021².
- You will not be required to undertake retrospective checks on existing EU employees when the UK transitions to the future skills-based immigration system.
- There is no legal obligation for you to communicate the EU Settlement Scheme, however, you may wish to signpost the information that the Government is providing.
- You should not interpret information provided by the Government and you must be careful not to provide immigration advice, unless you are qualified to do so. For more information please visit the Office of the Immigration Service Commissioner (OISC) guidance on GOV.UK.

¹ EU citizens used throughout refers to EEA and Swiss nationals, who are all eligible to apply to the EU Settlement Scheme.
