27. DVLA audits

DVLA (or agents on DVLA's behalf) will audit every company who makes an enquiry for reasons 8 to 26 from the vehicle record. This can be done from DVLA offices or by site visit at the premises where DVLA sent the data. DVLA (or agents on DVLA's behalf) will take samples of your enquiries and will check that you are able to trace them with the reference number you entered at the time you made the enquiry. This is to evidence that the case files exist and can be cross referenced with the vehicle registration number.

Our auditors will discuss and check your processes and procedures, data protection registration and your physical and IT Security for the personal data you hold. All evidence to support your enquiry must be kept for a minimum of 2 years. All personal data received from DVLA must be deleted once you've finished with it.

You must have a full audit trail of evidence to support each data request and show that it meets all of our criteria for releasing information. Such evidence may be an invoice, report, photographs, finance agreements, copies of tickets and so on.

In each case you must show that the enquiries relate to legitimate investigations and produce the evidence to back them up.

Before you make a request for DVLA data, you must satisfy yourself that there is a documented report linking the vehicle being enquired upon to the matter being investigated. If auditors challenge your request, the report will be available to support your enquiry. This will protect you from any allegation that you made the request for an unauthorised reason.

The auditors will check the date of incident of each enquiry. Giving the right date of incident will make sure the correct keeper is given for that date. If the date is wrong, the enquiry may give you personal data for an individual no longer associated with the vehicle. This may occur where there has been a change of keepership. Such an enquiry may breach the data protection laws and will infringe that individual's right to privacy.

All requests for information that you make from DVLA must be easily and positively traceable. You must also support the reasons for your enquiry with documented evidence. This helps protect you from any possible claims that you requested the information for unauthorised purposes. It also provides evidence that you have met the 'reasonable cause' requirement for the release of information.

If you do not comply with the above, DVLA could refuse all future requests for information permanently, or until you show that you have corrected your procedures. If an audit raises a number of issues, a revisit may be necessary.
