EDF and the EDF Research Network thank all those who gave their time to contribute to this project.
Background

It is Government policy that departments should evaluate primary legislation within 3 to 5 years of enactment. Moreover, there is a broad policy imperative to understand the impact of the Equality Act 2010 – whether it is meeting its stated objectives and original intentions, and where it is not, to understand why barriers to achieving equality still prevail. The GEO has therefore developed an Evaluation Framework, setting out its proposed overall approach to evaluating the Equality Act 2010.

Following a roundtable discussion in January 2011, EDF and the EDF Research Network undertook a two-month project to contribute to the evaluation process. The project’s main objectives were:

- to identify relevant research by academics and other researchers to contribute to the population of the GEO framework,
- to highlight aspects of the proposed framework that might be improved, and to identify key researchers, institutions and organisations working on equality and Equality Act related subjects.

This dossier is the result of the project. It is by no means an exhaustive dossier of material relevant to the evaluation process but we hope it is a useful first step.

The Equality and Diversity Forum is a network of national organisations committed to equal opportunities, social justice, good community relations, respect for human rights and an end to discrimination based on age, disability, gender and gender identity, race, religion or belief, and sexual orientation.

The Equality and Diversity Forum Research Network is a multi-disciplinary equality and human rights network. It was established to bring together academics, policy makers and NGO researchers to encourage and facilitate the production of authoritative policy-relevant research on cross-cutting equality, human rights and related subjects in the UK.
Methodological Note

This dossier has been prepared using both primary and secondary materials. The information in the dossier has been collected from the following sources: responses to a general call for evidence circulated in late February 2011; responses to a targeted call to EDF contacts who are carrying on work in relation to specific sectors relevant to the Equality Act 2010 (EA 2010) in early March 2011; and desk-based research. We have not included a systematic review of EHRC research (or the research commissioned by its predecessors the Commission for Racial Equality, the Equal Opportunities Commission and the Disability Rights Commission).

The dossier is organised into the categories prioritised by the GEO. Within each category the most relevant qualitative and quantitative reports, journal articles, case notes, book chapters and legal cases, which we feel merit consideration in any process that seeks to evaluate EA 2010, are flagged along with a description of the key issues being dealt with in the document and its link. As a further filter, certain documents are preceded by a ‘(Double Right Arrow)’ which indicates they may be of particular relevance. Every category is prefaced by a short narrative, which provides the context, extracts the key flagged questions from the existing research, points out gaps in the research if there are any and also indicates ongoing and future research which may be tracked. Due to constraints of time, we have not included all categories.

The main dossier is accompanied by an appendix containing documents which do not fit neatly in the aforesaid categories or where it was beyond the scope of the project to analyse but which are nonetheless relevant. It is organised into categories along the lines of the protected characteristics with additional categories on areas such as employment and multidimensional discrimination. It begins with a section analysing material on dual discrimination. This material was collated before the announcement in the Budget on 23 March that dual discrimination measures will not be implemented.

This dossier is not an exhaustive bibliography of equality-related materials which may be relevant for evaluation of EA 2010 and does not purport to be. The gaps that we point out in the dossier thus refer to gaps in the research we have identified, rather than suggesting there is no research which has been carried out regarding these issues at all. The dossier seeks instead to present an overarching (albeit detailed in specific areas) picture of the legal, socio-legal and social science research that has been done, and point to similar research that is ongoing. Such an approach, we believe, will optimise the interaction between GEO and the wider research community, thereby aiding the process of evaluation of the Equality Act 2010.
Evidence

The body of the dossier is structured to correspond to the provisions in the Equality Act 2010 that GEO have identified as key areas for collating research. Time and resource constraints prevented inclusion of all provisions in this dossier.
Public Sector Equality Duty

Context
The vision of EA 2010, of a unified equality legislation consolidating each of the protected characteristics is manifested in the public sector Equality Duty. The general duty is provided for in Section 149 and it requires a public authority to have 'due regard' for certain ends laid down in the Act.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. What is the meaning of the term to pay 'due regard'? Is it appropriate to ensure the enforcement of equality duties fulfilling the objectives of the Act?
2. What comparative lessons can be learnt from the operation of the public sector Equality Duty in Northern Ireland?
3. What effect does consolidation of the equality strands in a unified duty applicable across strands have? Are any specific strands adversely affected by such consolidation?
4. How successful is S. 149 in widening the aim of equality from process-based compliance by public authorities to an outcome-based approach? What is the added value of specifying the objectives in S. 149(3) (removing disadvantage, accommodating difference and encouraging participation)?
5. Whether the duty should apply to refugees and asylum seekers?
6. What is the effect of the new approach to specific duties, which stresses transparency rather than the preparation of equality plans etc?

Gaps in Existing Research:
1. Specific impact of the uniform public sector Equality Duty on each of the covered protected characteristics not sufficiently assessed
2. Exceptions where the duty does not apply and the rationale for such exceptions
3. Effect of such duty on provision of public services not sufficiently assessed
4. Effect of change in approach to specific duties
5. Analysis of the growing number of judicial review cases
6. Role of the EHRC in achieving compliance
7. Relationship to regulatory theory: how best to achieve a change in culture in public bodies?

Research to Track:
1. Ipsos Mori/EHRC, The Equality Duty and Schools
   Key Issue/ Summary: The aim of this study is to provide baseline evidence regarding how schools have implemented the specific race, disability and gender duties and to capture examples of positive practice, where schools are able to demonstrate that they are raising standards and improving outcomes for pupils through the implementation of the general and specific duties. The findings will inform guidance to the sector to support the implementation of the new Public Sector Equality Duty.

Materials Summaries

✔ For an analysis of all provisions in the Equality Act, including the Equality Duty, see John Wadham, David Ruebain, Anthony Robinson and Susie Uppal eds., Blackstone’s Guide to the Equality Act 2010 (Oxford: OUP, 2010). The publication combines the full text of the Act with an expert narrative. It seeks to explain the scope and impact of the Act, including the civil liberties implications, and to bring practitioners up-to-date.

• Key Issue/Summary: A thorough understanding of proactive measures/positive action/mainstreaming, its pre-requisites and its role alongside complaints-based enforcement in relation to gender equality. It includes a survey of proactive measures in 30 European countries. The majority of duties were on public bodies, but some EU countries also include trade unions and a minority include private employers (including Northern Ireland).
• Link/Availability: http://ssrn.com/abstract=1631762

• Key Issue/Summary: This article discusses the statutory framework for positive public sector duties to promote equality, commenting specifically on disability and gender equality duties and succinctly analysing the case law regarding judicial review of governmental steps in fulfilling these duties since the landmark case of R (on the application of Elias) v Secretary of State for Defence (2006) EWCA Civ 1293
• Link/Availability: On file with EDF

• Key Issue/Summary: This article discusses the relevance of lessons from the operation of the public sector equality duty in relation to public procurement in Northern Ireland in the interpretation of the state’s duty to promote equality with regard to the exercise of its procurement powers in Great Britain, acknowledged as a key factor in the promotion of equality under EA 2010.

- Key Issue/ Summary: The main argument in this article is that the public sector Equality Duty when extended to religion and belief may be counter-productive; it discusses the philosophical rationale behind such an equality duty and suggests a modification which grounds the duty in the elimination of disadvantage rather than in a recognition of dignity, which can mitigate such counter-productive effects.

- Key question/ summary: How the gender equality duty is being implemented by local governments and the effect on its implementation by the introduction of the integrated equality framework proposed by EA 2010.
- Link/ availability: Westlaw/ On file with EDF

- Key Issue/ Summary: This article examines the record of the European Commission in acting out its commitment to gender mainstreaming, in particular through an examination of outputs in the period 1995 to 2006. It considers the form mainstreaming activities have taken, the success of these activities and the problems revealed, with a specific focus on its impact on gender equality.
- Link/ Availability: On file with EDF

- Key Issue/ Summary: Though this article focally deals with the public sector duty in S. 1 and not the public sector equality duty in S. 149 (which is the subject of the base map), it is relevant to understand the significance of the ‘due regard’ standard (analogous to the standard in S. 149) and issues of enforcement of positive duties.

Positive Action

Context
EA 2010 now incorporates a specific exception permitting (although not requiring) positive action in particular contexts. It is incorporated through a general provision (S. 158) and several specific provisions (in recruitment and promotion, for political parties and charities). The scope, nature and efficacy of positive action has been the subject of considerable research.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. Can positive action under EA2010 work effectively given the lessons from EU Law, especially case law from ECJ?
2. How have positive action measures impacted on the need for greater equality?

Gaps in Existing Research
1. The existing research has focused primarily on positive action in relation to age and gender and not sufficiently on the other protected characteristics which are equally covered by S. 158
2. There is insufficient sector-centric research on measures taken by employers in incorporating positive action provisions.

Material Summaries:
  - Key Issue/ Summary: This article analyses the problems in the UK law relating to positive action, provides a clear conceptual understanding of the term, discusses approaches to positive action in EU law and on this basis suggests appropriate reform of UK law.
  - Link/ availability: Westlaw/ On file with EDF

  - Key Issue/ Summary: This article seeks to compare the legal position in the UK at the time of formulation of the Sex Discrimination (Election Candidates) Act, 2002 (whose provisions S. 104(8) of EA 2010 largely replicates) with regard to the extent to which the legal system provides for the use of positive action for women in candidate selection for the legislature, in comparison with Sweden, Norway, Germany and France.
  - Link/ Availability: HeinOnline/ On file with EDF

  - Key Question/ Summary: This chapter is a comprehensive comparative survey of positive action measures including the position under EU law, UK law, USA and Canada
  - Link/ Availability: On file with EDF

- Key Issue/ Summary: This essay contains a close legal analysis of Sections 158 and 159 of EA 2010, focusing particularly on its relationship with EU law and case law from the ECJ

Disability related provisions

Context
This section covers material relevant to provisions on:
- Limiting the use of disability-related pre-employment enquiries
- Indirect disability discrimination
- Simplifying the law relating to disability discrimination

Protection from indirect discrimination for disabled people is a new measure in s.19 of the Equality Act 2010. Indirect disability discrimination happens when there is a policy or practice that applies to everyone but which particularly disadvantages disabled people and which cannot be shown to be a proportionate means of meeting a legitimate aim.

The Act simplifies the law relating to disability discrimination by: removing the requirement to show than an impairment affects a particular ‘capacity’; introducing a single definition of disability discrimination; introducing a single threshold requiring reasonable adjustments; and replacing a range of justifications with a single objective justification defence (s.6, s.20 and schedules).

The Act prohibits employers from asking about the health of applicants during recruitment, subject to certain exceptions (s. 60).

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. How can the evaluation address the breadth of disability as a discrimination ground; there is great variation in discrimination experiences relating to mental health, AIDS, different physical and sensory impairments etc
2. What changes can be attributed to the introduction of protection from indirect discrimination as distinct from the existing requirement to make ‘reasonable adjustments’?
3. Will definitional changes in the Equality Act 2010 make it difficult to use existing research to track changes in outcomes for disabled people?

Gaps in Research
1. Much of the high-profile research identified is attitudinal and based on large scale surveys in the UK and Europe taking disability as a homogenous discrimination ground.

Research to Track:
Lorna Adams, Katie Oldfield, Laura Godwin and Charlie Taylor, Opening Up Work Opportunities for Disabled People, IFF Research/Equality and Human Rights Commission
- Key issue/summary: To explore disabled people’s work aspirations and innovations in job design and work organisation that break down current barriers and meet needs more appropriately. The research will inform the EHRC’s Working Better programme. Based on focus groups and interviews with disabled people.
ONS on behalf of Office for Disability Issues, Life Opportunities Survey, 2010

- Key issue/summary: The Life Opportunities Survey is a major new national survey of disability in Britain. Survey compares how disabled and non-disabled people participate in society in a number of areas topics include work and learning, health, transport, community and social life, leisure, use of key services, caring and domestic life, hate crime and discrimination, income and benefits. Longitudinal survey that is in process of establishing baseline through 2-year survey.

European Commission, Eurobarometer (see below)

Material Summaries

- European Commission, Eurobarometer

- Key issue/summary: The standard Eurobarometer was established in 1973. Each survey consists of approximately 1000 face-to-face interviews per Member State (except Germany: 2000, Luxembourg: 500, United Kingdom: 1300 including 300 in Northern Ireland). Reports are published twice yearly. ‘Eurobarometer 296: Discrimination in the European Union: Perceptions, Experiences and Attitudes’ published in 2008 showed that disability is considered to be the third most widespread form of discrimination after the grounds of ethnic origin and sexual orientation, though it is perceived to be less widespread than in 2006. Identifies 2% of respondents as saying they had experienced disability discrimination over preceding year. Uses 10 point ‘comfort scale’ to measure whether people would be comfortable to have a disabled neighbour or would welcome a disabled person in high office. ‘Eurobarometer 317: Discrimination in the EU in 2009’ shows an increase in percentage seeing disability discrimination as widespread from 45% to 53% between 2008 and 2009.

  Eurobarometer 317 available at http://ec.europa.eu/social/main.jsp?langId=en&catId=89&newsId=630&furtherNews=yes

- Key issue/summary: The 2006 Institute for Social and Economic Research report compares the employment prospects of disadvantaged social groups in Britain over a thirty year period. It identifies which groups experience the greatest ‘employment penalties’. In relation to disability, it finds that the employment disadvantage increased steadily between the 1970s and the mid-1990s and that people with a long-standing limiting illness or impairment are also about 15 percentage points behind those with no health problem. The 2010 publication uses survey data to plot trends over time in the prevalence of disability, and in the employment rates of disabled people. It identifies an increase in both the prevalence of disability and the ‘employment disability penalty’.

Secretary of State reports on disability equality. Overview (and individual reports by key Secretaries of State), 2008
- Key issue/summary: The report is an overview of individual reports of key Secretaries of State showing progress made across their policy sectors towards disability equality, and what co-ordinated actions are proposed to make further improvements.

  - Key issue/summary: Report to inform EHRC’s work aimed at narrowing the employment and skills gap between disabled and non-disabled people. Report includes definitional issues, statistics on disabled people’s employment rates and qualifications, policies including employment policies, the limitations of looking at disabled people in groupings, analysis of support strategies.

  - Key issue/summary: This article explores the limitations built into the new judicial constructions of disability discrimination by association, discrimination by declaration (for example in an advertisement or announcement), and discriminatory duties of disclosure (for example, pre-appointment medical questionnaires), in the context of the proposed Equality Directive and the UK Equality Act 2010. Discusses key cases such as Lewisham v Malcolm and the Coleman judgement. Identifies the premise that some indirect disability discrimination is economically rational and argues for a more ‘through’ approach to addressing indirect discrimination.
  - Link/ availability: On file with EDF

  - Key issue/summary: The report identifies the challenges facing people with a mental health condition, including discussion of pre-employment health checks.

  - Key issue/summary: Report based on more than 200 questions to 4,010 current or recent employees across Britain covering workers awareness of their rights and the support available to them. Findings cover awareness of rights and employers’ legal obligations, awareness of employment rights support, problems at work, experiences of discrimination and harassment, resolution of problems in relation to different grounds including disability. Findings include that those with a disability are more likely to experience workplace problems.

- Key issue/summary: Report of responses to a module of questions on both the 2005 and 2009 British Social Attitudes Surveys (BSAS). The aim of these questions was to measure public attitudes towards disabled people and disability. Report shows an improvement in attitudes to disabled people. However, this is alongside a perception that disability discrimination is widespread.

- Key issue/summary: Considers disability equality within a single Equality Act based on written and oral evidence received, including disability-related discrimination and discrimination by association, and issues relating to scope and definition. The report includes evidence submitted relating to pre-employment questionnaires.

- Key issue/summary: This report explores how organisations responded to the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 as amended by the Disability Discrimination Act 2005. It is a follow-up to studies undertaken in 2003 and 2006. The study has explored more fully changes introduced by the 2005 legislation, and particularly the extension of anti-discrimination provisions to cover: public bodies exercising their functions; larger private clubs; and locally electable authorities in their dealings with their disabled elected members. The research has also explored whether and how the current economic downturn has impacted on organisations’ willingness and ability to comply with the legislation. The research is based on 2,000 telephone interviews and 97 in-depth interviews. It covers awareness of the legislation, recruitment and employment practices, and goods, facilities and services provision.

Bent Greve, The labour market situation of disabled people in European countries and implementation of employment policies: a summary of evidence from country reports and research studies, Academic Network of European Disability Experts (2009)

- Key issue/summary: This report is based on evidence submitted in national reports produced by members of the Academic Network of European Disability experts (ANED) representing the EU Member States (except Luxembourg) plus Norway and Iceland. It is supplemented with evidence from existing studies with a focus on disabled people’s access to integration and retention in the labour market, and recommendations to enhance the current position. The report considers features of and trends in employment policies – such as the use of quotas, mainstreaming and examples of good practice. It identifies a need for better awareness campaigns, the difficulty in combining mainstreaming with targeted measures to integrate disabled people in the workforce, and links marginalisation in employment with education levels.

- Key issue/summary: Uses data to examine the relationship between education, employment, income, social class and group-based inequalities including disability.
Civil Partnership in Religious Premises

Context
Section 202 of the Equality Act provides for amendments to the Civil Partnership Act 2004 which removes the prohibition on religious premises registering civil partnerships. Since this provision has not been brought into force by regulations, there is no material which specifically deals with statistics or analysis of civil partnerships in religious premises. Most such research in this area will thus have to be obtained going forward, by tracking institutions and organisations which work in this area (for example, Stonewall and the Board of Deputies of British Jews).

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. How is the freedom to practice one’s religion to be balanced with the right to sexual equality of prospective civil partners?
2. How do people of faith view same sex couples?
3. Statistics on civil partnership registrations (already on base map)

Gaps in the Existing Research
1. Rigorous analysis of the qualitative effect such registration would have on civil partners
2. Rigorous analysis of the qualitative effect such registration would have on those responsible for the administration of religious premises, including religious officers
(The qualitative effects referred to here are how affected persons feel about such a provision coming into effect; whether same sex couples feel that it will be a significant benefit; and whether religious officers feel that it is a significant hindrance to the practice of faith.)

Material Summaries
- Key Issue/ Summary: Hepple’s book contains an analysis of legal decisions regarding the inter-relation between civil partnership/ sexual orientation and religious belief, which are the competing issues in the question of registration of civil partnerships at religious premises as well.
- Link/ Availability: On file with EDF

=> James Wilson, Civil Partnerships on Religious Premises: Three Competing Rights
- Key Issue/ Summary: A legal response to the Minister’s announcement regarding implementation of S. 202 of the Equality Act and accordingly amending the Civil Partnership Act 2004; talks of ways of balancing competing rights and the compatibility of the change with EU law.

=> Citizens Advice, Civil Partnerships- Another Year On (2007)
- Key Question/ Summary: Research to explore the impact of the Civil Partnership Act (2004) on the needs of potential advice service users; make recommendations for improving advice services for lesbian gay and bisexual clients with respect to forming civil partnerships; and influence policy debate regarding the legal union of same sex couples. Based on twenty semi-structured interviews.

Ruth Hunt and Gill Valentine, Love thy Neighbour: What People of Faith Really Think about Homosexuality, Stonewall Report

- Key Issue/ Summary: The document is useful to understand the general perception regarding questions of sexual orientation amongst persons of faith; these issues become centrally relevant to a question of registering civil partnerships on religious premises where controversy stems from a fractured interaction between religious belief and equality law.

- Link/ Availability: www.stonewall.org.uk/documents/love_thy_neighbour.pdf

- Key Issue/ Summary: This article provides a conceptual understanding of civil partnerships and the dilemmas that it poses for the Church of England; useful background for the religion- civil partnership/ sexual orientation interface.

EHRC documents:

Title: Sexual orientation explored: A study of identity, attraction, behaviour and attitudes in 2009
Author/Organisation: Ellison, G. and Gunstone, B. EHRC
Date of publication: 2009

Key Issue/ Summary: based on more than 5,000 survey responses, findings include: the majority of respondents agreed that it is acceptable to answer social survey questions on sexual orientation; public attitudes towards LGB people were not consistent; fear of disadvantage and discrimination impacts upon the lives of LGB people in profound ways; and LGB women and men face disadvantage, exclusion and segregation as a result of their sexual orientation.

Cases

- Lilian Ladele v. London Borough of Islington, [2010] IRLR 211 (Court of Appeal)
  (This case is on appeal to the Supreme Court)
  - Issue: This case involved the question whether the respondent borough was entitled to compel the appellant, a registrar, to register civil partnerships even though she objected to officiating at such registrations on the grounds of her religious beliefs; direct, indirect discrimination and harassment claims raised.

Gender Reassignment – Definition and Extent of Protection

Context
EA 2010 has made two significant changes to the law relating to gender reassignment: First, it has extended the definition of gender reassignment beyond the earlier definition in the Sex Discrimination Act removing the requirement of medical supervision; second, it now covers direct and indirect discrimination as well as harassment on the ground of gender reassignment. At the same time the replication of an earlier exception allowing a discriminatory provision to be justified if it is a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim (Schedule 3, ¶28) continues and is seen as problematic.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. What are the effects of legal provisions on societal attitudes towards trans persons and assessing changes to their life experiences?
2. Areas where further research would be of benefit include judicial interpretation of gender reassignment under previous legislations; status of gender recognition certificates

Gaps in Existing Research:
1. A legal analysis of the definition of gender reassignment under EA 2010 and the exceptions
2. Awareness of rights amongst trans persons themselves
3. Specific cases relating to discrimination claims brought by transgender persons (currently included within the wider category of sex discrimination claims)

Research to track:
Michelle Gray, Martin Mitchell and Meera Balarajan, NatCen/EHRC, Developing gender identity (including transgender) questions that public bodies can use (ongoing)
• Key Issue/ Summary: Purpose of project: to develop and cognitively test questions for monitoring (including surveys) that begin to capture gender identity/transgender status that can be used with the general population. The results of the project will provide information for those who use questions for gender identity/transgender status monitoring, and will include concepts, categories and instructions that people don’t understand/do understand, and what can/can’t be captured at this stage. The study reviews and develops questions and uses a systematic set of focus groups and individual interviews with transgender and non-transgender people aged 16+.

Extending Harassment outside the Workplace

Context
EA 2010 extends the scope of harassment outside the workplace in relation to the protected characteristics of age and disability. The extension does not extend to sexual orientation or religion and belief (EA ss29(8); 33(6)). However, there is little available research to analyse the impact this extension has had. A few key exceptions (relating to sexual orientation which is not covered by this section) are:

   Key Issue/ Summary: A concise summary of some of the issues that affect lesbian and gay people, and how these issues can be explored within the context of public policy. It specifically covers surveys done showing the incidence of homophobic bullying in schools, an aspect not covered by EA 2010.

Ongoing projects relevant for the purpose, which may be tracked are:
Wendy Sykes et al, Independent Social Research/EHRC, Inquiry into disability-related harassment: interviews and focus groups (together with consultation responses from a variety of groups)
   ● Key Issue/ Summary: This study researches disabled people's experiences of disability-related harassment, focusing on public bodies' responses. This research is part of the EHRC's Inquiry into Disability-Related Harassment.

Peter Smith et al, Goldsmiths University of London/EHRC, Identity-Based Bullying: Prevention and Response, 2010
   ● Key Issue/ Summary: The purpose of this project is to establish what local authorities and their schools are doing to prevent and respond to the different types of identity-based bullying across our equality mandate both inside and outside of school. A review of policy and literature relating to identity-based bullying. This will include some interviews with stakeholders to establish what the key issues are for those who are preventing and responding to identity-based bullying. A survey of all local authorities across England, Scotland and Wales, to establish what is being done at the local level in schools and the wider community to prevent and respond to identity-based bullying.

Outlawing Pay Secrecy

Context
One of the key aspects of ensuring equal pay in EA 2010 has been the need to make the process of payments by employers optimally transparent. The key feature of such a transparent regime of payments is Section 77 (in force) which: renders contractual provisions prohibiting disclosures of payment and seeking disclosures of payment from colleagues by employees unenforceable, and outlaws victimisation for seeking or receiving relevant pay disclosures.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. To what extent can positive duties on employers be incorporated into the effort to ensure equal pay?

Gaps in Existing Research:
1. Definition of ‘colleague’ in section 77 and its implications
2. S. 77 and its use relating to relevant pay disclosures apart from those relating to gender
3. The extent to which section 77 will assist plaintiffs to find relevant comparators in order to bring an equal pay claim, given that disclosure, while not prohibited, is also not required.

Simplifying and standardising definitions of discrimination and related concepts

Context
One of the key achievements of EA 2010 has been providing clear definitions broadly standardised across protected characteristics of direct and indirect discrimination. This unified definition replaces the variety of differently worded provisions in the previous legislation. It should in principle simplify the law as well as ensuring its compliance with EU law. However, the need to account for relevant differences between protected characteristics has meant that there are a number of specific provisions containing exceptions for specific characteristics. There has been considerable literature on the definitions adopted and the exceptions to these. Selected articles which cover the questions raised are summarised below.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. What are the conceptual differences between direct and indirect discrimination?
2. On what basis and in what form should exceptions to age and sex discrimination be incorporated? (disability discrimination is dealt with elsewhere in this dossier)
3. How can the definitions of direct and indirect discrimination leading to a complaints-based model of enforcement work harmoniously with a scheme for positive action such as the public sector Equality Duty?

Gaps in Existing Research:
1. The role (if any) of statistics in proving indirect discrimination under the new definition (incorporated from EU law), which refers to ‘particular disadvantage’. Although this definition had already been incorporated into domestic law, there is as yet little case law or academic analysis of this issue.
2. The changed wording of the justification defence for indirect discrimination, which expressly incorporates proportionality.
3. The relationship of direct discrimination to equal pay law in the context of ss.70-71 EA 2010, which provide that, although as a rule, direct discrimination does not apply in relation to pay, it may do so if a sex equality clause (implying equal pay into the contract) ‘has no effect’.
4. The relationship between the concepts of direct and indirect discrimination on the one hand, and Article 14 ECHR (covering freedom from discrimination) on the other.

Material Summaries
- Key Issues/ Summary: This chapter is fundamental for understanding the key issues relating to the definitions of direct and indirect discrimination, the applicable exceptions and the legal issues arising out of the formulations adopted.
- Link/ Availability:

- Key Issues/Summary: This chapter contains a comprehensive legal analysis of the definitions of direct and indirect discrimination as well as victimisation, deals with the philosophical foundations of the concepts and focuses crucially on the role of the comparator, a key issue in discrimination jurisprudence. It also has an up-to-date listing of cases which have dealt with the issue which are indicative of judicial attitudes towards interpreting these definitional sections.

- Key Issue/Summary: This article discusses what the proper approach to interpreting a provision justifying age discrimination should be, conceptually and in light of Regulation 3 of the Employment Equality (Age) Discrimination Regulations, and suggests that this should be derived from considerations of transparent decision-making, and the need to respect the dignity of the individual.

- Link/Availability: On file with EDF

- Key Question/summary: To what extent does the material factor defence (whether an employer can establish that a difference in pay between the applicant and a comparator is genuinely due to a ‘material factor’) apply in sex discrimination claims under the Equal Pay Act and as a defence to a claim of indirect discrimination under EA 2010? This can be alternatively stated as: Whether the decision of the Court of Appeal in Armstrong v Newcastle upon Tyne NHS Hospital Trust ([2005] EWCA Civ 1608) has been reversed by Parliament by EA 2010?

- Key Issue/Summary: An analysis of the Eweida v British Airways Plc decision ([2009] I.C.R. 303 (EAT)) focusing especially on indirect discrimination claims by those who hold minority religious views. It argues that the best way to achieve protection for individual beliefs would be to allow individual claims of indirect discrimination in religion cases, and to enable the proportionality of any restrictions on religious manifestation at work to be dealt with while considering justification.

Extending Protection because of Pregnancy and Maternity

Context
EA 2010 makes pregnancy and maternity a protected characteristic under Section 4. The protection is available for work as well as non-work cases. It is also expressly provided that the woman alleging such discrimination does not need a comparator, all she has to prove is ‘unfavourable treatment’. This has offset the issue of equality as conformity insofar as pregnancy is concerned and the earlier need of finding an appropriate comparator.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. What material is available covering the definition of pregnancy and maternity-time period for protection and whether it includes forms of assisted reproduction?
2. Has there been any research contrasting the approaches outlawing discrimination on the basis of pregnancy and the parallel development of vesting rights in pregnant mothers?

Gaps in the Existing Research
1. Insufficient legal analysis on the removal of the requirement of a male comparator and the connotation of the word ‘unfavourable’ as opposed to ‘less favourable’ in EA 2010
2. No research relating to pregnancy and maternity in non-employment cases

Materials Summary
  - Key Issue/ Summary: This working paper consolidates available evidence of pregnancy discrimination in the United Kingdom at the time, the legal framework for preventing such discrimination and the gaps which exist, both in the law and in the available research; also provides perspective on the UK position with a comparative analysis with legal provisions in France and Sweden

- Equal Opportunities Commission, Greater Expectations (June 2005)
  - Key Issue/ Summary: This report presents the results of a two-year EOC review of pregnancy discrimination at work; it identifies the causes for such discrimination and crucially provides guidance to employers regarding their duties relating to pregnant workers, in order to improve awareness

  - Key Issue/ Summary: Both these articles are case comments on whether employees undergoing IVF (or another form of assisted reproduction) would qualify as pregnant such that ‘less favourable treatment’ meted out to them would be tantamount to sex discrimination (Sex Discrimination Act- UK) and provide protection from dismissal (Pregnant Workers’ Directive- EU)

- Key Issue/ Summary: This article aims to review and assess the legislation and case law on pregnancy and maternity in the United Kingdom, the United States and the European Community. It contains a brief description of the background and context critically examines the equality-difference dichotomy in the context of anti-discrimination legislation and considers the possibility of departing from an approach based on equality and dealing with pregnancy and parenthood by means of specific rights instead; contains a comparative analysis of case law from UK, USA and the EU.

Widening the Powers of Tribunals so that they can make Recommendations that Benefit the Wider Workforce

Context
Under Section 124 of EA 2010, tribunals are vested with the power of making appropriate recommendations which the respondent must implement within a specified time to obviate or reduce the adverse effect on the complainant or ‘any other person’. This is a marked shift from earlier legislations under which a recommendation could be ordered only for individual benefit. The effect that the availability of this remedy has had, its recorded usage by tribunals and its efficacy are thus topics for further research.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. Is Section 124 sufficient in ensuring that recommendations made by tribunals for general, as opposed to individualised benefit, are complied with?
2. How have courts interpreted the scope of such a remedy under previous legislations?
3. Have tribunals used this provision widely so far?

Gaps in Existing Research
1. Lessons to be learnt from S. 39 (1) (c) of the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Treatment Order, 1998 which is an analogous provision
2. Creation of a separate head tracking the number of times this remedy (of appropriate orders) has been used in statistical data relating to tribunals hearing discrimination cases

Research to Track
Citizens Advice, Data on cases
- Key Issue/ Summary: This ongoing study covers client data for certain areas of discrimination (employment, housing, benefits etc) and protected characteristics. Citizens Advice also captures outcomes related to financial gains from Employment Tribunals (including discrimination), being reinstated at work (including for discrimination) and non-financial gains related to discrimination cases. From 2012, Citizens Advice IT system will be able to capture all the Equality Act protected characteristics and will have improved recording of outcomes.

Materials Summary
- Key Issue/ Summary: This section of Fredman’s book contains an exhaustive legal analysis of S. 124(2)(c) and the power of a tribunal to make an appropriate recommendation in cases of non-compliance, including earlier cases which have ordered such a remedy. The three key issues it highlights are the impunity with which such an order can be ignored, the minimal usage of the power to recommend by tribunals and a comparative analysis with the more efficacious mandatory injunction which can be issued by courts in the USA.

Cases

Capeling v Devonport Royal Dockyards Ltd (3 Dec 2008; Employment Tribunal)
- Issue: Whether the claimant was subject to direct sex discrimination, sexual harassment and victimisation by male colleagues at the respondent company where she was employed; appropriate remedies in such situations
- Held: In addition to monetary compensation, keeping in view that the claimant continued to be employed by the respondent company, the relevant managers of the respondent company would be sent for diversity and equal opportunities training, dealing in particular with sex discrimination and "a gender-imbalanced workforce" and the Industrial Skills Manager would also be given specific training to ensure that he exercised his duties in a way that is compatible with the principles of the Sex Discrimination Act.
- Relevance: Appropriate recommendations issued not only for claimant's benefit but for the benefit of all employees.

- Issue: Whether in a case of racial discrimination, the tribunal was authorised to recommend the respondent's promotion as a remedy under S. 56(1)(c) of the Race Relations Act
- Held: Relying on North West Thames Regional Health Authority v. Noone ([1988] I.C.R. 813) held that recommending promotion was not a recommendation which was within the power of the tribunal since it was an act of positive discrimination, not allowed by the provision.
- Relevance: Can be used to understand recommendations which may be held judicially permissible under S. 124 EA 2010.

Westlaw General Note on the phrase “Without Reasonable Excuse”
- Key Issue/Summary: By S. 124(7) a respondent who has failed to implement a recommendation made by the tribunal can claim that there was a reasonable excuse for not doing so. This general note contains an analysis of case law of how this term is to be interpreted, which has significant implications on how effective the provision for a recommendation will be.

Protection against Third Party Harassment

Context
In Section 40(2) of EA 2010, an employer is liable for harassment of employees by third parties such as customers or clients if he fails to take steps reasonably practicable to prevent such harassment. In addition, sub-section (3) retains the 'three strikes' rule and mandates that such liability would ensue only when the employee has been harassed on at least two other occasions by third parties. This provision thus statutorily establishes third party liability for employers in harassment cases, an issue which has had a fractious history in the United Kingdom. The measure is an extension to previous protection which applied only to sex discrimination.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. What is the legal position relating to liability of employers for third party harassment in the common law and the Protection from Harassment Act 1997?
2. What are the conceptual foundations for vicarious liability in relation to harassment?
3. What are the problems with the 'three strikes rule' retained in S. 40(3)?

Gaps in Existing Research
1. Insufficient analysis of the under-inclusiveness of liability for third party harassment
2. Insufficient analysis on numbers of cases in relation to third party harassment filed in courts
3. Insufficient research on employers' obligations to prevent third party harassment

Material Summaries
  - Summary/ Key issue: The legal problems with the drafting of S. 40 EA 2010 (issues for future research identified)

Improving the Handling of Discrimination Cases by County Courts and Sheriff Courts

Context
Under EA 2010, jurisdiction for most categories of non-employment cases is vested in County Courts in England and Wales and Sheriff Courts in Scotland. EA 2010 incorporates in Section 114(7) a provision for specialist assessors being appointed. Since this continues the previous provision for appointment of assessors in race and sex discrimination cases, interpretations of the latter will be useful in understanding how S. 114(7) should be best used to improve handling of discrimination cases by County Courts.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. When is a judge required to sit with assessors compulsorily in race discrimination claims?
2. What is the precise role of assessors when they have been appointed in a discrimination claim, especially in relation to hearing of the case, recording their views, and in the ultimate decision reached by the Court?

Gaps in Existing Research
1. Currently county court statistics do not provide specific data in relation to discrimination claims or assessors appointed. See: http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/judicialandcourtstatistics.htm
2. Comparison of costs, delays etc in county courts as against employment tribunals. Role of legal aid and awards of costs in favour of the successful party. Reasons for costs and delays and ways of reducing these.
3. Tracking of scale and nature of remedies and comparison of remedies available in county courts as against tribunals.

Cases
- Deman v Commission for Equality and Human Rights, [2010] EWCA Civ 1279 (Court of Appeal)
  - Issue: Whether a judge was required to sit with lay assessors to determine an application by the respondent commission to strike out X's claim for racial discrimination and victimisation under the Race Relations Act
  - Held: A judge hearing a matter under the Race Relations Act 1976 where lay assessors were capable of contributing special knowledge and experience of problems connected with relations between persons of different racial groups, pursuant to s.67(4), was required to sit with those assessors and did not have the option of discharging them.
  - Quote of relevance: “We note with relief that this legislative provision is now superseded by the Equality Act 2010, s. 114(7) , which spells out plainly the meaning that we have extracted from s.67(4) of the 1976 Act.”

Ahmed v Governing Body, University of Oxford, [2002] EWCA Civ 1907 (Court of Appeal)

Issue: The appellant alleged that he had been racially discriminated by his tutor at the respondent institution; the question, apart from the merits of the claim, before the Court of Appeal was to delineate the exact role of the assessors who were appointed to hear the claim, their relation with the judge and ancillary aspects.

Held: Precise role of the assessors laid down; the failure of the judge to record in the judgment the views expressed by the assessors in the decision making process and his reaction to those views, did not lead to a miscarriage of justice as it could not be said that a reasonable tribunal could have reached a different conclusion from the one which the judge had reached.

Appendices: Further Resources

The resources listed below are categorised by discrimination ground followed by material that does not fit into these categories. A small amount of research specific to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is included. Material in each category is listed chronologically, with the most recent material first.

The section begins with an analysis of material on dual discrimination. This material was collated before the announcement in the Budget on 23 March that dual discrimination measures will not be implemented.

Categories are: Race, Gender, Disability, Age, Age – children/young people, Sexual orientation, Religion or belief, Multidimensional (two or more grounds), Legal, Refugees and migrants, Gypsies and Travellers, Social care, Education, Health, Employment, Socio-economic/poverty, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, Other.

This is not a comprehensive list of equality research and data, but rather a list of the materials we were able to identify within the confines of a short scoping project. Our apologies for any significant material that is omitted.

Please note all gender identity material is listed in the main body of the dossier. There is a recognised lack of research on this subject.
Dual Discrimination

Please note, this material was collated before the announcement in the Budget on 23 March that dual discrimination measures will not be implemented.

Context
Section 14 of EA 2010 provides for combined discrimination, referred to as intersectional discrimination in academic literature. The incorporation of this provision was pursuant to the evidence presented to the Discrimination Law Review by a number of organisations. As the provision has not yet been brought into force there is little in terms of material which analyses its operation. However for the purpose of evaluating the provision at this stage, reports, legal analyses, judicial decisions and comparative materials are significant. The most relevant of such material is appended below.

Flagged Questions from Existing Research
1. What are the underlying rationales and aims of combined discrimination? Should it be founded on the concept of difference or disadvantage?
2. Should the definition of multiple discrimination be limited to two grounds or should discrimination claims based on more than two grounds be permitted?
3. How is combined discrimination understood in comparable legislations in other jurisdictions, most notably under EU law?

Gaps in Existing Research
None, though the material on each issue is insufficient to show any workable consensus on the basis of which law reform can be based.

Research to Track
2. “Diversity: The Experience of Discrimination on Multiple Grounds” ACAS funded research on experiences of claimant’s who take multiple discrimination claims to Employment Tribunal (estimated completion date: 30.04.11) http://www.psi.org.uk/research/project.asp?project_id=229 (Contact Person: Maria Hudson [PSI])
Material Summaries

- Key Issue/ Summary: This is an absolutely seminal understanding of intersectionality analysis focusing on the intersection between race and gender. It provides a trenchant critique of traditional discrimination law understanding racial and gendered experiences as distinct and discrete.
- Link/Availability: On file with EDF

- Key Issue/ Summary: Though this article was written before the Equality Act 2010 under which multiple discrimination claims can be made, its fundamental point which is relevant for the current legislation as well is the fact that for multiple discrimination claims to be successful it is not just a unification of protected characteristics that is required, but both a broad uniformity in their treatment under the unified regime as well as a change in philosophy of anti-discrimination from addressing difference to addressing disadvantage.
- Link/Availability: On file with EDF

- Key Issue/ Summary: This book contributes to a critical reflection of current legislative and jurisprudential developments in Non-Discrimination Law, focusing on the European Union. The book is focused on intersectionality between gender, race and disability and the question of whether, and to what extent, this intersection can be adequately addressed in (EU) law. Gay Moon, “Multiple Discrimination: Problems Compounded or Solutions Found?”

- Key Issue/ Summary: This article provides a succinct analysis of the issues involved in effectively incorporating multiple discrimination in an equality statute. It deals specifically with the role of the comparator, the grounds to be included and making the exceptions to the said grounds uniform. [note: Gay Moon’s most recent work on multiple discrimination is Chapter 10 in Schiek and Lawson eds. 2011, above]

- Key Issue/ Summary: This is a seminal article on how a multiple discrimination provision ought to be designed keeping in mind existing social realities of sources of structural disadvantage; useful for reform if contemplated.
- Link/Availability: http://www.equalrightstrust.org/view-subdocument/index.htm?id=84

- Key Issue/ Summary: This article argues that to overcome difficulties of identifying and assessing intersectional discrimination, the qualitative difference between intersectional claims must be understood, the logic of immutability underlying each ground must be modified to accommodate intersectionality and a method must be found which allows courts to incorporate such an understanding based on the overall social context into judicial decisions.

- Key Issue/ Summary: This article provides a comprehensive analysis of the movement towards intersectionality in EU equality law especially the adoption of the Anti-racism Directive and Directive 2007/78/ EC establishing a general framework for equal treatment of persons in employment; most of the article is however conceptual dealing with the principled arguments in favour of intersectionality and how best it can be implemented in legislation
- Link/Availability: On file with EDF

- Key Issue/ Summary: This is a very comprehensive resource for writings on multiple discrimination worldwide with a specific focus on countries in the EU. It includes the point that the lack of consciousness regarding multiple discrimination and the consequent lack of an interest group to promote protection against multiple discrimination are problems which limit its significance (a problem which largely continues till today). It calls on member states to remedy this problem.

- Key Issue/ Summary: Makes the case for extending legislation to cover multiple discrimination, highlights some relevant cases, looks at the limitations in what the Government proposed, considers the implications for employers, service providers and tribunals.

- Key Issue/ Summary: Based on survey in 2008 covering perceptions and experiences of discrimination relating to ethnic origin, Roma, disability, sexual orientation, age, religion or belief, gender and multiple discrimination. Also covers equal opportunities in employment, combating discrimination and knowledge of the law.

Pragna Patel, Notes on Gender and Race Discrimination, Commission on Racial Equality (CRE) Document

- Key Issue/ Summary: This article looks at intersectionality analysis generally listing out relevant issues. Its particular significance however is in discussing domestic violence and the need to factor it within the ambit of multiple discrimination.

Cases

  - Issue: Whether the Ministry of Defence had indirectly discriminated against the respondent by not offering the same childcare facilities to British and Commonwealth women soldiers
  - Held: MoD guilty of indirect race and sex discrimination with an express recognition of intersectionality with the words “discrimination was often multi-faceted and could not always be compartmentalised into discrete categories.”
  - Link/Availability: On file with EDF/ Official Transcript of EAT

- Bahl v. Law Society, [2004] EWCA Civ 1070 (Court of Appeal); [2003] IRLR 640 (EAT)
  - Issue: Whether the Law Society and some of its officers (impleaded in the case) were guilty of racial and sexual discrimination with relation to the appellant who was a black Asian woman of British nationality, when they alleged misconduct by the appellant, lodged a formal complaint against her and suspended her from her role as Vice President.
  - Held (CA): The tribunal had erred by not looking at sex and racial discrimination separately; the two were independent grounds which had to be satisfied; (EAT- same decision on merits) additionally held- A hypothetical comparator is not a requirement in such cases; if it is used as the Employment Tribunal did, treatment of the comparator in different circumstances would be irrelevant for determining discrimination in the given case.
  - Link/Availability: On file with EDF/ Official Transcript

In addition there are several cases arising from disputes before Employment Tribunals under the Sex Discrimination Act, Race Relations Act, Disability Discrimination Act, the Age Regulations which implicitly recognise the need for dual discrimination and highlight the impracticality of proving and assessing discrimination on individual grounds instead of doing so in a combined manner:

2. British Airways Plc v. Mak, [2011] EWCA Civ 184 (Court of Appeal), (on file with EDF- age, sex and race discrimination)

Title: Ageism and Age Discrimination
Author/Organisation: Professor John Macnicol, ILC-UK
Date of publication: 2010
Link: http://www.ilcuk.org.uk/record.jsp?type=publication&ID=65
Summary: This ILC-UK published think piece by Professor John Macnicol analyses the basis and history of ageism in social relations and attitudes, employment and in the distribution of goods and services. It finds that ageism ‘in all its forms is a complex and convoluted topic to analyse, especially as its recent revival has been closely associated with governmental efforts to encourage…older people back into paid employment.’ It suggests that the numbers of people to benefit from the abolition of the default retirement age will likely be small. Combating age discrimination in employment by policies based upon positive action could include measures such as subsidies to ensure that working as one ages becomes more attractive.

Title: Equality and diversity and older people with high support needs
Author/Organisation: ILC-UK
Date of publication: 2010
Summary: This research was commissioned by the Joseph Rowntree Foundation to conduct a ‘capability-based’ review of existing literature regarding the knowledge of the needs and situations of older people with high support needs from different equality strands. The paper examines the effect of dual discrimination for older people with support needs with reference to additional discrimination issues related to age disability, ethnicity, gender, religion or belief, sexual orientation and poverty.

Title: The Future of Retirement
Author/Organisation: ILC-UK
Date of publication: 2010
Summary: This discussion paper is an analysis of the factors and socioeconomic trends which are influencing, and will continue to influence, retirement ages. According to this research, the abolition of the default retirement age removes a barrier to extending working life and allowing older people more flexibility at the end of their employment. However, there is no guarantee that there is a demand for older workers who will become available due to this removal, or that this group has the skills required ‘to meet real labour demand in the economy’. In addition, the current working environment in the labour market for older employees may act as a deterrent for some to defer their retirement and extend their working life. The Equality Act 2010 should seek to improve the labour market practices for older workers in order to encourage participation in employment for longer after the removal of the DRA.

Title: The Golden Economy: The Consumer Marketplace in an Ageing Society’
Author/Organisation: ILC-UK/Age UK
Date of publication: 2010
Summary: This research examined the role of older people in the consumer marketplace, looking both at their contributions as a significant spending group, and at the barriers and issues they face in this environment. Specifically; upper age limits mean that some products and services are inaccessible to the older population; incomprehensible jargon, poor design and modern phraseology can make the consumer marketplace complicated for people of all ages; and mis-selling is a major issue of concern for the older consumer.

Title: Second survey of employers’ policies, practices and preferences relating to age
Author/Organisation: Hilary Metcalf and Pamela Meadows
Date of publication: July 2010 (plus baseline survey 2006)
Summary: This report presents findings from a survey of employers carried out to enable evaluation of the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations which was implemented in 2006 and the Default Retirement Age, set at 65, which was introduced with the Age regulations. This survey is based on a representative survey of 2205 establishments in Britain with at least five employees. The research was commissioned by the Department for Work and Pensions and Department for Business, Innovation and Skills and was carried out by the National Institute of Economic and Social Research and the TNS-BMRB. Findings from this survey are compared to a baseline survey carried out in 2006 prior to the introduction of the Age regulations (Metcalf and Meadows, 2006, DWP Research Report 325) and to feed into the review of the Default Retirement Age.

Author/Organisation: Dr Helge Hoel/ESRC
Date of publication: Completion September 2013
Link: http://www.esrc.ac.uk/my-esrc/grants/RES-062-23-2412/read
Summary: This study will examine the working experiences of lesbians, gay men and bisexuals (LGB) in terms of discrimination, bullying and harassment. By means of a survey of a random sample of 500 LGBs and a similar number of heterosexual employees, the study will describe and quantify experiences, examine how experiences vary between lesbians, gays and bisexuals, and how they differ from those of heterosexuals. Factors which may contribute to negative experiences, eg gender, age, ethnicity, disability, levels of education, pay, tenure, organisational status and occupation will be explored. The survey will be followed up by six organisational case studies, two each from the public, private and third sectors, respectively.

Title: An Anatomy of Economic Inequality in the UK
Author/Organisation: the National Equality Panel
Date of Publication: January 2010
Summary: A comprehensive evidence-based review of the state of economic inequality by a panel of leading academic experts under Professor John Hills of the London School of Economics, commissioned by Government. Presented evidence on inequalities of educational outcomes, employment, earnings, individual and household incomes and household wealth. In particular the presentation of the distribution of wealth represented an important advance on previous work. Analysed the inequalities in relation to socio-economic groups, all the discrimination grounds, nation and area distribution. Demonstrated how inequalities change over the life cycle. Extensive diagrammatic material. Not asked to make policy recommendations, but drew attention to the policy implications of the findings. The NEP commissioned 10 major pieces of research (see p 416 of the main report) and drew on a wide selection of other research. A 35 page summary is available.

Title: The Millennium Cohort Study
Author/Organisation: Centre for Longitudinal Studies
Date of publication: ongoing
Link: http://www.cls.ioe.ac.uk/text.asp?section=000100020001
Summary: The Millennium Cohort Study (MCS) is a multi-disciplinary research project following the lives of around 19,000 children born in the UK in 2000/1. It is the most recent of Britain’s world-renowned national longitudinal birth cohort studies. The study has been tracking the Millennium children through their early childhood years and plans to follow them into adulthood. The four surveys of MCS cohort members carried out so far – at age nine months, three, five and seven years – have built up a uniquely detailed portrait of the children of the new century. They have also amassed a vast amount of information on the children’s siblings and parents. The study was commissioned by the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC), whose funding has been supplemented by a consortium of Government departments and the Wellcome Trust. The next sweep of the study is planned for 2012. Data published in December 2010 covers education, health, income and housing. Study was designed to cover areas with high minority ethnic populations and disadvantaged areas.
