Introduction

This page tells you what exclusion is and the different legislation governing decisions to exclude a person from the UK.

Exclusion from the UK is used to prevent a person from entering the UK. If the person is in the UK, deportation will normally be the appropriate course of action.

Exclusion is normally reserved for cases involving national security, extremism, serious crime, international crimes (including crimes against humanity) and unacceptable behaviour. See grounds for exclusion for further information.

A decision to exclude a person from the UK is made either:

- by personal decision of the Secretary of State on the ground that it is conducive to the public good (exclusion decision), or;
- by exclusion order on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health in accordance with regulation 27 and Schedule 1 of the Immigration (European Economic Area) Regulations 2016 (EEA Regulations 2016), or on conducive grounds under regulation 27A of those regulations.

Exclusion on conducive grounds

Exclusion on the grounds that it is conducive to the public good applies in the following circumstances:

- A non-EEA national (with the exception of some non-EEA family members of EEA nationals)
- To an EEA national, their non-EEA family member or other relevant person who is protected by the Withdrawal Agreement or the savings provisions in the Citizens’ Rights (Application Deadline and Temporary Protection) (EU Exit) Regulations 2020 (the Grace Period Regulations 2020) only on the basis of conduct after 23:00 on 31 December 2020
- From 23:00 GMT on 31 December 2020 to an EEA national or their non-EEA family member who is not protected by the Withdrawal Agreement

Exclusion on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health

Exclusion on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health applies in the following circumstances:

- Until 23:00 on 31 December 2020 to any EEA national or their non-EEA family member
• From 23:00 on 31 December 2020, to those EEA nationals, their non-EEA family members or other relevant person who is protected by the Withdrawal Agreement or the savings provisions in the Citizens’ Rights (Application Deadline and Temporary Protection) (EU Exit) Regulations 2020 only in relation to conduct occurring before 23:00 GMT on 31 December 2020.

Protected cohorts

From 23:00 GMT on 31 December 2020 certain categories of EEA national will retain free movement rights under EU law. These are known as ‘protected cohorts’, as their rights are protected by the Withdrawal Agreement between the UK and the European Union. They are a person:

• who has been granted leave under Appendix EU or entry clearance under Appendix EU (Family Permit) of the Immigration Rules
• who was lawfully resident in the UK in accordance with the EEA Regulations 2016 by 23:00 GMT on 31 December 2020, or had acquired a right of permanent residence by that date (unless they have been absent from the UK for a continuous period of more than 5 years) (until 1 July 2021 or their application to the EUSS has been finally determined)
• who is a relevant family member of a person who was lawfully resident in the UK in accordance with the EEA Regulations 2016 by 23:00 GMT on 31 December 2020, or had acquired a right of permanent residence by that date (unless they have been absent from the UK for a continuous period of more than 5 years) (until 1 July 2021 or their application to the EUSS has been finally determined)
• who is a frontier worker as defined in regulation 3 of the Citizens’ Rights (Frontier Workers) (EU Exit) Regulations 2020 (Frontier Workers Regulations 2020)
• who is seeking permission to enter the UK as a service provider from Switzerland, or is in the UK having arrived with entry clearance granted by virtue of their right to enter the UK as a service provider from Switzerland under Appendix Service Providers from Switzerland to the Immigration Rules
• who has or is seeking permission to enter or remain in the UK as a patient for the purpose of completing a course of planned healthcare treatment in the UK which was authorised under the ‘S2 arrangements’, as provided for at Appendix S2 Healthcare Visitor to the Immigration Rules. This also includes persons or family members accompanying or joining the patient

This means that the provisions of EU law will continue to apply to these groups and any exclusion must be considered in line with the EU public policy, public security or public health test in Regulation 27 of the EEA Regulations 2016.

The best interests of a child

The duty in section 55 of the Borders, Citizenship and Immigration Act 2009 to have regard to the need to safeguard and promote the welfare of a child under the age of 18 in the UK, together with Article 3 of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, means that consideration of the child’s best interests must be a primary consideration in immigration decisions affecting them. This guidance, and the Immigration Rules it covers, form part of the arrangements for ensuring that we give practical effect to these obligations.

Where a child or children in the UK will be affected by the decision, you must have regard to their best interests in making the decision. You must carefully consider all the information and evidence provided concerning the best interests of a child in the UK and the impact the decision may have on the child. You must carefully assess the quality of any evidence provided.

All decisions must demonstrate that the child’s best interests have been considered as a primary, but not necessarily the only, consideration. Decisions must demonstrate that consideration has taken place of all the information and evidence provided concerning the best interests of a child in the UK. Documentary evidence from official or independent sources will be given more weight in the decision-making process than unsubstantiated assertions about a child’s best interests.

Although the duty in section 55 only applies to children in the UK, the statutory guidance – Every Child Matters – Change for Children – provides guidance on the extent to which the spirit of the duty should be applied to children overseas. You must adhere to the spirit of the duty and make enquiries when you have reason to suspect that a child may be in need of protection or safeguarding, or presents welfare needs that require attention. In some instances, international or local agreements are in place that permit or require children to be referred to the authorities of other countries and you are to abide by these and work with local agencies in order to develop arrangements that protect children, promote their welfare and reduce the risk of trafficking and exploitation.

Further guidance can be found in paragraphs 2.34 to 2.36 of the statutory guidance.

Exclusion on non-conducive grounds

This section tells you about an exclusion decision made on the grounds that it is conducive to the public good. This means that it is undesirable to admit the person to the UK because they pose a threat to UK society. This applies to conduct both in the UK and overseas.

The power to make an exclusion decision on non-conducive grounds can only be exercised personally by the Secretary of State, normally the Home Secretary or Minister of State on the Home Secretary’s behalf.

Exclusion on the grounds that it is conducive to the public good applies in the following circumstances:

- To non-EEA nationals (with the exception of some non-EEA family members of EEA nationals)
- From 23:00 GMT on 31 December 2020 to an EEA national, their non-EEA national family members or other relevant person who is not protected by the Withdrawal Agreement or the savings provisions in the Citizens’ Rights (Application Deadline and Temporary Protection) (EU Exit) Regulations 2020 (Grace Period Regulations 2020).
- From 23:00 GMT on 31 December to an EEA national, their non-EEA family member or other relevant person who is protected by the Withdrawal Agreement or the savings provisions in the Grace Period Regulations 2020 only on the basis of conduct after 23:00 on 31 December 2020.

Exclusion of EEA nationals and their non-EEA family members within scope of the Grace Period Regulations 2020 on the grounds that it is conducive to the public good must be done under the new Regulation 27A of the EEA Regulations 2016. Other protected cohorts must be excluded by virtue of an exclusion decision.

In most foreign national offender cases deportation will be the normal route for those the Home Office want to remove from the UK, but there may be cases where the person leaves the UK before deportation action can be completed. If you are aware, or reasonably believe, that the person is no longer in the UK, consideration may be given to exclusion. If deportation action was pursued in the belief that the person was in the UK, as the person had not informed us otherwise, it may still be appropriate to rely on the deportation order obtained rather than to pursue exclusion.

Refusal of entry clearance or leave to enter

A person who has been excluded and who applies for entry clearance or leave to enter the UK must have their application refused under paragraph 9.2.1. of Part 9 of the Immigration Rules, (or under paragraph EU15.1.b of Appendix EU or paragraph if they have applied to the EUSS or under paragraph FP7.1.b if they have applied for an EUSS Family Permit) on the grounds that the Secretary of State (or Minister of State acting on behalf of the Home Secretary) has personally directed that the person be excluded from the UK or that they are the subject of an exclusion order. This remains the case as long as the exclusion decision is still in force.

Exclusion on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health

This page tells you about the exclusion of an EEA national or a family member of an EEA national on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health. You must read it in conjunction with guidance on EEA decisions on grounds of public policy.

Regulation 27 and Schedule 1 of the EEA Regulations 2016 set out the principles to consider when making a decision to exclude on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health.

Where such a decision is taken on the grounds of public policy or public security, it must be made in line with the following principles:

- the decision must comply with the principle of proportionality
- the decision must be based exclusively on the personal conduct of the person concerned
- the personal conduct of the individual concerned must represent a genuine, present and sufficiently serious threat affecting one of the fundamental interests of society, taking into account past conduct of the individual and that the threat does not need to be imminent
- matters isolated from the particulars of the case or which relate to considerations of general prevention do not justify the decision
- the individual’s previous criminal convictions do not in themselves justify the decision
- the decision may be taken on preventative grounds, even in the absence of a previous criminal conviction, provided the grounds are specific to the person

A decision to exclude on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health should only be made against a person who is believed to be outside the UK. Where you are considering exclusion and there is evidence the person is resident in the UK, you must take account of the following considerations, in accordance with regulation 27(6):

- the person’s age
- the person’s state of health
- the person’s family and economic situation
- the person’s length of residence in the UK
- the person’s social and cultural integration into the UK
- the extent of the person’s links with their country of origin

EUSS leave, EUSS family permit or EUSS travel permit

Where an application has been made for leave under the EU Settlement Scheme (EUSS) or for an EUSS family permit or travel permit under Appendix EU or Appendix EU (Family Permit) (FP) to the Immigration Rules from a person who is outside of the UK and the case meets the criteria for referral to Immigration Enforcement as set out in the EUSS suitability guidance, consideration must be given as to whether to exclude the person from the UK.

If the applicant has already been excluded their application will fall to be refused under paragraph EU15(1) of Appendix EU or FP7(1) of Appendix EU(FP). If the applicant is subject to an exclusion decision and has since acquired an EEA right, consideration must be given to making an exclusion order on grounds of public policy, public security or public health.

Where a decision is made to exclude an applicant, their application will fall to be refused under paragraph EU15(1) of Appendix EU or FP7(1) of Appendix EU(FP). The applicant must be notified of both the decision to make an exclusion order and the decision to refuse their EUSS or EUSS family permit or travel permit application at the same time.

Individuals with 10 years’ residence or a permanent right of residence

Under regulation 27(4) of the EEA Regulations 2016, a decision to exclude a person from the UK is only permitted on imperative grounds of public security, where an EEA national either:

- has a right of permanent residence and has resided in the UK for a continuous period of at least 10 years prior to the decision
- is under the age of 18, unless the relevant decision is in their best interests, as provided for by the UN Convention on the Rights of a Child

Where an EEA national or their family member has established a permanent right of residence, a decision to exclude the person from the UK is only permitted on serious grounds of public policy or public security.

For further information on the impact on exclusion of residence in the UK see guidance on EEA decisions on grounds of public policy and public security.

Fundamental interests of society

Paragraph 7 of Schedule 1 of the EEA Regulations 2016 provides a non-exhaustive list of the fundamental interests of society in the UK, and provides examples of the types of behaviour that are contrary to those interests.

When making a decision about whether to exclude on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health, consideration must be given to the fundamental interests of society to determine whether exclusion is appropriate on the grounds of public policy or public security. You must list all the relevant fundamental interests which apply when making an exclusion decision on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health.
Further information about the fundamental interests of society including a list of the types of behaviour considered contrary to each fundamental interest of society can be found in the guidance on EEA decisions on grounds of public policy and public security.

Grounds for exclusion

This page tells you about the types of cases where the use of exclusion is appropriate.

Exclusion of a person from the UK is normally used in circumstances involving national security, criminality, international crimes (war crimes, crimes against humanity or genocide), corruption and unacceptable behaviour.

National security

National security threats will often be linked to terrorism. Terrorist activities are any act committed, or the threat of action designed to influence a government or intimidate the public, and made for the purposes of advancing a political, religious or ideological cause and that:

- involves serious violence against a person
- may endanger another person’s life
- creates a serious risk to the health or safety of the public
- involves serious damage to property
- is designed to seriously disrupt or interfere with an electronic system

Criminality

Where appropriate, individuals with past or present involvement in criminality will normally be refused entry to the UK in line with Part 9 of the Immigration Rules.

Exclusion will not usually be necessary, unless the level of criminality, or the threat posed by the person is so serious that it warrants exclusion. For example, if a notorious or dangerous criminal is a non-visa national, their ability to travel to the UK in the first place may be better prevented by exclusion. Exclusion may also be an option where a foreign national offender has left the UK before it has been possible to conclude the deportation process.

Exclusion on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health may be justified on the basis of serious or persistent criminality. Consideration must be conducted on a case by case basis and be based on the person’s conduct and circumstances, including whether they have any prior criminal convictions, the nature and seriousness of any previous offending and whether it is proportionate to exclude the person from the UK.

A conviction is not necessary in order to consider a person for exclusion. If the person’s activities are capable of falling within the scope of UK criminal legislation (or conduct prohibited by law), whether or not the individual is charged with or convicted of an offence, then it may warrant exclusion.

Exclusion on the basis of serious or persistent criminality will normally be appropriate if there is evidence to suggest that the person intends to travel to the UK.
may also be appropriate where an offender has left the UK before it has been possible to conclude the deportation process, meaning that they cannot be deported.

International crimes

War crimes are grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions committed during an armed conflict. This includes an internal armed conflict within a State and an international armed conflict between States.

The types of acts that may constitute a war crime include:

- wilful killing
- torture
- extensive destruction of property not justified by military necessity
- unlawful deportation
- the intentional targeting of civilians
- the taking of hostages

Crimes against humanity are acts committed at any time (not just during armed conflict) as part of a widespread or systematic attack, directed against any civilian population, with knowledge of the attack. This includes:

- murder
- torture
- rape
- severe deprivation of liberty in violation of fundamental rules of international law
- enforced disappearance of persons

Genocide means acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnic, racial or religious group.

This list is not exhaustive. The full definitions of war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide can be found in Schedule 8 of the International Criminal Court Act 2001.
Corruption

There is no single accepted definition of corruption. A number of organisations including Transparency International define it as ‘the abuse of entrusted power for private gain’.

The types of activities associated with corruption include, but are not limited to the following:

- tax evasion
- money laundering
- bribery and accepting kickbacks (part of an income paid to a person in return for an opportunity to make a profit, often by some illegal arrangement)
- extortion
- asset stealing
- fraud
- match fixing in sport

A person does not need to have been convicted of a corruption related offence in order to be excluded. Where there is substantive, reliable information that a person has been involved in corruption this should be taken into account.

Extremism

In October 2015 the Government published its Counter-Extremism Strategy, which contains a commitment to make it more explicit that the criteria for exclusion on the grounds of unacceptable behaviour include past or current extremist activity, either here or overseas. A person who has previously engaged in unacceptable behaviour may still be considered for exclusion, if their views were particularly abhorrent, even if they have since publicly retracted those views and have not re-engaged in such behaviour.

In EEA cases in order to meet the public policy, public security, public health test, you must be satisfied that the person poses a genuine, present and sufficiently serious threat to the UK, taking into account the past conduct of the person and that the threat does not need to be imminent.

Unacceptable behaviour

Unacceptable behaviour covers any non-UK national whether in the UK or abroad who uses any means or medium including:

- writing, producing, publishing or distributing material
- public speaking including preaching
- running a website
- using a position of responsibility such as a teacher, community or youth leader to express views which:
• provoke, justify or glorify terrorist violence in furtherance of particular beliefs
• seek to provoke others to terrorist acts
• provoke other serious criminal activity or seek to provoke others to serious criminal acts
• foster hatred which might lead to inter-community violence in the UK

This list is indicative rather than exhaustive.

Consideration of exclusion

This page tells you what you need to do when considering whether to recommend exclusion.

Official-sensitive: start of section

The information on this page has been removed as it is restricted for internal Home Office use.

Official-sensitive: end of section

Overview

A decision to exclude an individual from the UK is made by the Home Secretary (or Minister of State acting on behalf of the Home Secretary) following a recommendation. This must set out why exclusion is appropriate, either on the grounds that it is conducive to the public good or on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health.

Recommendations to exclude must be made on the facts of the particular case and must set out how the relevant test is met along with the evidence you have considered to support your conclusions. Where a recommendation to exclude is based on the public policy test, you must clearly set out how the decision is in line with Regulation 27 and the principles set out in Schedule 1 of the EEA Regulations 2016.

Official-sensitive: start of section

The information on this page has been removed as it is restricted for internal Home Office use.

Official-sensitive: end of section
Assessing cases

A recommendation to exclude an individual from the UK must be based on reliable evidence. This might include the use of criminal record checks, particularly where the recommendation is to exclude the person on the basis of criminality in the UK or overseas. In other cases, the evidence may not be so straightforward and a greater degree of scrutiny and assessment may be required.

You must consider all of the evidence available to you and give appropriate weight when deciding whether to recommend exclusion. For example, rumours or uncorroborated tip-offs by members of the public are likely to carry less weight than an assessment provided by a professional body or evidence supplied by another government department. However, where evidence has already been assessed by law enforcement agencies or similar organisations, it will usually be reasonable to rely on that assessment without undertaking your own consideration of the reliability of the underlying evidence.

Websites can be useful sources of information but you should exercise caution when using online research. For example, they might suggest that an individual has said or done something which would justify exclusion but the website information in fact only repeats allegations from other websites, which are wrong.

Direct statements made by an individual, together with the context in which they are made, are particularly helpful in unacceptable behaviour cases, such as cases in which an individual has been promoting extremism. However, they will not always be required to support a recommendation to exclude an individual, particularly where the recommendation is based on other evidence that has been provided by law enforcement agencies or similar organisations. The assessment should include the impact and degree of harm that the individual’s statements or actions have or would have upon the UK, communities within the UK or upon UK interests overseas both if the individual is permitted to enter the UK and if they are excluded.

An exclusion decision must be reasonable, consistent with decisions taken in similar circumstances, and proportionate. There must also be a rational connection between exclusion of the individual and the legitimate aim being pursued, for example safeguarding public security or tackling serious crime.

If, having consulted with any relevant stakeholders and senior caseworkers, you intend to submit to the Home Secretary or Minister of State with a recommendation on exclusion, you must make sure that your submission clearly sets out the options, with the evidence to support your conclusions and recommendation.

Considering conduct before and after 31 December 2020

Decisions to exclude a person from the UK are generally taken on the basis of conduct occurring over a period of time. It is therefore likely that when deciding whether to exclude an EEA national or their non-EEA family member you will have to consider conduct which occurs both before and after the end of the transition period on 31 December 2020.
You may either:

- consider the totality of their conduct under the public policy, public security or public health test; or

- consider only the conduct that occurred after 31 December 2020 on the ground it is conducive to the public good and do not rely on the conduct that occurred prior to that date

Example

It is April 2021. A case is referred relating to an EEA national who hosts a website promoting anti-Semitic views and encouraging violence against Jews. The website has been running since 2018 and the person posts articles approximately every 2 weeks. You discover they were granted status under the EU Settlement Scheme, but at the end of February they travelled to their home country from where they have continued to post online.

In this case, the person falls within one of the protected cohorts so you would have to consider pre-end of transition period conduct under the public policy test, or post end of transition conduct under the non-conducive test.

Human rights considerations

If, in the event of the Home Secretary, Minister of State or Director of Criminal Casework deciding to exclude the person, and it is proposed to remove any existing immigration status, you must make this clear in the submission. If the person has existing immigration status in the UK it will be particularly important to address any human rights considerations that may arise. This may be under any Article of the European Convention on Human Rights, but particularly Article 8 (private and family life).

Advice on human rights is available in the following guidance:

- Considering Human Rights
- Article 8
- Human rights claims on medical grounds

Once advice has been prepared and submitted to the Home Secretary, Minister of State or Director of Criminal Casework, the individual is within the scope of the Authority to Carry Scheme 2015 as the Home Secretary or Minister of State is ‘in the process’ of making an exclusion decision.

Official-sensitive: start of section

Removal of existing status in the UK

This page tells you what you need to do if a person has existing immigration status in the UK.

Overview

An exclusion decision or an exclusion order does not automatically invalidate any leave or EEA documentation that the person may have.

If, for any reason, a person who is to be excluded holds entry clearance or leave to enter or remain in the UK, you must cancel or revoke that leave or entry clearance as appropriate. This is a separate decision to the decision to exclude.

Any EEA documentation held by the person who is to be excluded must also be revoked.

Cancellation of leave

If a decision has been made to exclude a person, any leave to enter or remain that is in force, including indefinite leave to enter or remain, must be cancelled prior to arrival in the UK or at the border under paragraph 9.2.2. of Part 9 of the Immigration Rules on the grounds that the person has been excluded.

Where leave has been granted under the EU Settlement Scheme (EUSS) or acquired by virtue of having arrived in the UK with an EUSS family permit or travel permit, it may be cancelled prior to arrival in the UK or at the border under paragraph A3.1. of Appendix EU to the Immigration Rules. A decision to cancel leave granted under the EUSS or acquired by virtue of that person having arrived in the UK with an EUSS family permit or travel permit will attract a right of appeal.

A notice of the decision to cancel leave must be served in line with article 8ZA of the Immigration (Leave to Enter and Remain) Order 2000. If the leave cancelled has been granted under the EUSS or acquired by virtue of that person arriving in the UK with an EUSS family or travel permit, then the Immigration (Notices) Regulations 2003 also apply. If the person is outside the UK but able to return to the UK before service of a notice of cancellation of leave has taken effect, they will still have leave and cancellation must be done at the border.

Official-sensitive: start of section

The information on this page has been removed as it is restricted for internal Home Office use.
Revocation of entry clearance

If a person who holds valid entry clearance is made the subject of an exclusion decision, that entry clearance must be cancelled under paragraph 9.2.2. of the Immigration Rules. This does not apply to entry clearance granted under Appendix EU (Family Permit).

Entry clearance granted under Appendix EU (Family Permit) may be revoked under paragraph 30A(iv) of the Immigration Rules where the holder is made subject to an exclusion order, exclusion decision or Islands exclusion decision in respect of conduct occurring before 23:00 on 31 December 2020.

If the person holds an EUSS family permit or travel permit, a decision to revoke entry clearance will attract a right of appeal.

Revocation of refugee status

If a person who is being considered for exclusion is a recognised refugee in the UK you will need to consider whether there are grounds to revoke refugee status. The process of revoking refugee status can be started whilst the refugee is outside the UK. For information on when revocation might be appropriate and what you need to do, see revocation of refugee status guidance.

Appeal rights in exclusion cases

This page tells you about appeal rights and legal challenges in exclusion cases.

For information on appeal rights in relation to decisions to cancel or refuse leave, please see guidance on rights of appeal.

Exclusion decisions

There is no right of appeal against an exclusion decision, although the decision may be challenged by way of judicial review. Where the Home Secretary (or Minister of State acting on behalf of the Home Secretary) considers that the information relied upon either wholly or partly to make the exclusion decision should not be made public for any of the reasons below, the decision may be certified under section 2C of the Special Immigration Appeals Commission (SIAC) Act 1997.

- in the interests of national security
- in the interests of the relationship between the UK and another country
- in the public interest

Certification under section 2C provides for a review on judicial review principles to be heard in SIAC.

An excluded person may apply for entry clearance or for leave to enter while they are outside the UK. Refusal of a human rights or protection claim, including where raised as part of certain applications made under the Immigration Rules, attracts a right of appeal from outside the UK. Deprivation of citizenship, if applicable, also attracts a right of appeal.

Exclusion orders

A person has a right of appeal against a decision to revoke EEA documentation under regulation 36 of the EEA Regulations 2016. The right of appeal against the revocation of EEA documentation while the individual in question is outside of the UK can only be exercised from outside the UK in accordance with regulation 37(1)(f) of the EEA Regulations 2016.

EUSS leave, EUSS Family Permit or EUSS Travel Permit

Cancellation of EUSS leave or leave acquired by virtue of having arrived in the UK with an EUSS family permit or travel permit, and the revocation of an EUSS family or travel permit, attract a right of appeal under the Immigration (Citizens' Rights Appeals) (EU Exit) Regulations 2020.

Where the Home Secretary (or Minister of State acting on behalf of the Home Secretary) considers that the information relied upon either wholly or partly to make the exclusion decision or exclusion order should not be made public for any of the reasons below, the decision may be certified under section 2C of the Special

Exemption from control

This page tells you about the effect of exemption from control on exclusion decisions taken against members of a foreign government.

Under provisions in section 8 of the Immigration Act 1971 and in the Immigration (Exemption from Control) Order 1972, certain categories of person who do not have a right of abode in the UK, are either totally or partially exempt from immigration control.

Among the partially exempt categories are members of the government of a country or territory outside the UK and Islands (Channel Islands and Isle of Man) who are visiting the UK on government business. Such a person does not require leave to enter the UK. There is however provision in article 4(a) of the Immigration (Exemption from Control) Order 1972 for the Secretary of State to specifically direct in such a case that the person is not to be exempt from immigration control. This is important for exclusion cases, as on its own an exclusion decision taken by the Home Secretary (or Minister of State acting on the Home Secretary’s behalf) would have no legal effect to prevent the person’s entry to the UK, should they travel here on government business. A separate direction must be given against exemption from control.

Notification of exclusion

This page tells you about notifying a person they have been excluded from the UK.

Exclusion decisions

Where possible, a person who has been excluded from the UK by virtue of a personal decision by the Home Secretary or Minister of State they must be notified in writing of the decision and given reasons for their exclusion from the UK.

A notice of the decision to cancel leave must be served in line with article 8ZA of the Immigration (Leave to Enter and Remain) Order 2000. If the person is outside the UK but able to return to the UK before service of a notice of cancellation of leave has taken effect, they will still have leave and cancellation must be done at the border.

If the leave cancelled is EUSS leave or leave acquired by virtue of that person arriving in the UK with an EUSS family or travel permit, then the Immigration (Notices) Regulations 2003 also apply.

Exclusion orders

If an exclusion order has been made under the EEA Regulations 2016, the person must be notified of the exclusion order, as well any deadlines for appeal, in accordance with the Immigration (Notices) Regulations 2003.

If it is not possible to notify a person of their exclusion, or other appealable decisions taken, because their whereabouts are unknown, no address has been provided and their last known or usual place of abode or business is not known, or the address given is defective, false or no longer in use by the person (for example a notice sent to the person’s last known address is returned as ‘gone away’ or ‘not known at this address’), the notice should be served to file and the file minuted accordingly. If the person is subsequently located, they must be given a copy of the notice as soon as it is practical to do so.

Entry in breach of an exclusion decision or an exclusion order

This page tells you what to do if a person enters or seeks to enter the UK in breach of an exclusion decision or exclusion order.

Under paragraphs 9.2.1. of Part 9, paragraph S-EC.1.2 of Appendix FM, and paragraph EU15 (FP7) of Appendix EU (EU(FP)) of the Immigration Rules, if a person has been excluded from the UK, any application made by that individual for entry clearance or to enter the UK must be refused.

A person subject to an exclusion order may be refused admission under regulation 23(2) of the EEA Regulations 2016.

If a person enters in breach of having been excluded, they must be dealt with as an illegal entrant under the Immigration Act 1971. If they have extant leave it must be cancelled under paragraph 9.2.2. of the Immigration Rules. EUSS leave or leave acquired by virtue of having arrived in the UK with an EUSS family permit, must be cancelled under Annex 3 of Appendix EU to the Immigration Rules.

If, despite measures to prevent an excluded person travelling here, including refusing a carrier authority to carry, the person is encountered in-country, further enquiries must be made to establish how they entered the UK. This will help determine if the person is to be considered and removed as an illegal entrant. For example:

- what route did the person use
- what was the mode of travel
- which part of the UK border, including consideration of the Common Travel Area, did the person cross
- did the person travel clandestinely
- if UK entry clearance was obtained, was deception employed
- had a false identity been adopted
- were false or forged documents used

It will also be relevant to know whether the person was successfully notified of the exclusion decision or exclusion order. If, despite being notified of their exclusion, an excluded person has entered the UK, they will have done so in the knowledge that they are prohibited from entering the UK and potentially will have failed to declare a material fact to the entry clearance officer or Border Force officer.

If, on arrival, the person is found to be in possession of an entry clearance that confers leave to enter, the leave must be cancelled by the Border Force officer. See cancellation of leave.

Revocation of an exclusion decision or an exclusion order

This page tells you about applications to revoke an exclusion decision or an exclusion order.

Both an exclusion decision and an exclusion order remain in force until revoked.

A person who is the subject of an exclusion decision or exclusion order can make a request to the Home Office to have the exclusion decision or exclusion order revoked. Such requests may be made in writing directly to the Home Office or to a British diplomatic mission overseas.

Exclusion decisions

Applications for revocation will normally be refused unless:

- this would be in breach of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) or the Convention and Protocol Relating to the Status of Refugees
- the situation has changed significantly and materially since the exclusion decision was made

Where an excluded person applies to have the exclusion decision revoked, they will need to explain why the decision should be revoked, providing any available supporting evidence. For example, if the person was excluded for engaging in unacceptable behaviour, they should be able to show genuine and credible evidence that they have publicly renounced the behaviour that led to their exclusion.

There is no formal process for applying for the revocation of an exclusion decision. The excluded person or their representative can make a written request to the Home Office or an overseas entry clearance post.

If a person was excluded from the UK on the basis of a conviction, the fact that the conviction has become ‘spent’ or completed when they apply for revocation is not by itself enough to justify revoking the exclusion decision.

Exclusion orders

A person may apply to the Secretary of State for revocation of the exclusion order on the basis that there has been a material change of circumstances since the order was made (regulation 34(3)). Under regulation 34(5), the Secretary of State must revoke the exclusion order if they consider that the criteria for making an order are no longer satisfied. There is no formal process for revocation of an exclusion order, but any application must be made in writing from outside of the UK, and must set out the material change in circumstances relied on.
Upon receipt of an application for revocation the Secretary of State must make a decision within 6 months after the date of receipt (regulation 34(6) of the EEA Regulations 2016).

Refuse to revoke

Where you decide to maintain exclusion, having considered and where appropriate consulted on an application for revocation, you must provide clear reasons, responding to the points the applicant has raised. You must minute the case and your response must be approved by a senior caseworker.

When you notify the person of the outcome of their application you must also notify them of any appeal rights they may have, for example refusing to revoke an exclusion order under the EEA Regulations 2016 attracts a right of appeal from outside the UK (regulations 36 and 37). For further information see the rights of appeal guidance.

Agree to revoke

Where you consider that the exclusion decision or exclusion order should be revoked you must submit your recommendation to the Home Secretary (or Minister of State), clearly setting out the reasons why you consider revocation to be justified, including advice or views from any other interested parties. Where the decision to make an exclusion order on grounds of serious or persistent criminality was made by the Director of Criminal Casework, any recommendation to revoke must also be submitted to the Director of Criminal Casework.
If the Home Secretary, Minister of State or Director of Criminal Casework agrees to lift the exclusion you must notify the individual or their representative of the decision. If the application for revocation was made at an overseas post the decision must be sent to the entry clearance officer (ECO) who must notify the person concerned.

You must explain in your notification letter the revocation decision and warn that this does not mean that any leave to enter or remain that was previously cancelled is reinstated. Where the individual in question does not have admission or residence rights under the EEA Regulations 2016, you must also explain that the revocation decision does not mean that the individual has a right to come to the UK, nor does it guarantee the success of any application for a visa. The requirements of the Immigration Rules or the EEA Regulation 2016, as appropriate, must still be met.

You must place copies of all letters sent on the Home Office file and update the case record.

Former non-EEA nationals

It is possible that an exclusion decision will have been made against a non-EEA national who now falls to be considered under the public policy test. This could happen if, for example, the non-EEA national becomes the family member of an EEA national who is protected under the Withdrawal Agreement.

If the person applies for revocation you must consider whether the reasons for the original exclusion decision would justify the Home Secretary, Minister of State or Director of Criminal Casework making a decision to exclude in the public policy test. If they do, the case must be re-considered and a submission sent to ministers or the Director of Criminal Casework explaining the recommendation to make an exclusion order against the person.

If the case for maintaining exclusion cannot be justified under the public policy test, the exclusion decision will need to be revoked. You must still submit to ministers to seek agreement for revocation.

The person must be notified of the outcome, whether that is to revoke the exclusion decision or to make an exclusion order. If an exclusion order is made it will attract a right of appeal under the regulation 36 of the EEA Regulations 2016.
