

Consultant 23

16 September 2013

Sir,

It appears that, emboldened by the Competition Commissions statement on the Private Provision of HealthCare the insurers are determined to rig the market to favour doctors that contract to treat for diminishing fees rather than keeping to structured and economically valid schedules of fees.

I have now been derecognised by AXA PPP in September 2009 and PruHealth in September 2013 on the grounds of my fees that rise with inflationary pressures. My practice is being threatened by BUPA.