BRIEF GUIDELINES

At the start of the interview please introduce yourself to the respondent, explain that the questionnaire is a continuation of the research with the experimental games and politely ask if they are willing to be interviewed.

This questionnaire is for the female spouse and strictly should not be answered by anybody else; the male spouse should be interviewed using another questionnaire.

Whenever possible interview the respondent alone. It is important that the spouse is not present.

Please stick to both wording and sequence of the questionnaire as much as possible.

Questions addressed to the respondent are given on the right (recto) side of the questionnaire while codes are given on the left (verso) side.

All the questions to be addressed to respondents are given in normal fonts while all instructions to enumerators are in italics.

The following codes should be used throughout all sections of the questionnaire.

666 = others, specify (enumerators should specify/write down what the 'other' stands for)

777 = I don't know

888 = not applicable

999 = not willing to answer

Don't change code numbers; for example, if codes are not relevant for the research site do not change the other codes to have consecutive numbers.

Question and section numbers in the female questionnaire sometimes are not sequential. This is on purpose in order to follow the question numbering of male questionnaire.
