Understanding the tipping point of urban conflict

DEFINITIONS

- Santiago is a civilly safe city but a socially insecure city.
- Violence is related to a neoliberal model that has exacerbated inequalities in Chile.

DEFINITIONS

Categories of violence (Moser 2004)
Social violence	Against people
Economic violence	Against property
Political institutional	Citizen rights and human rights

3 Types of Violence (Galtung, 2004)

- Direct – physical, verbal, psychological visible violence
- Structural – indirect violence associated to economic or social policies
- Cultural – violence that legitimises a framework for structural and direct violence

Tipping points:

- 1973 – Coup d'Etat- The end of democracy and the welfare state, a violent implementation of a neoliberal platform.
- 1990 –Transition to democracy, new political regime but not a new socio economic model, neoliberalism is deepened.
- 2011-2012 – Students' and other social manifestations in Santiago make part of a broader social indignation movement. The start of a new tipping point?

FINDINGS

Violence is not confined to poor areas

- Direct violence: against women, child abuse, sexual harassment, bullying, fights, shootings, drug related deaths, robberies and muggings.
- Structural violence: economic and social inequalities; lack of opportunities, education and money (low).
- Cultural violence: machismo, consumerism, individualism; stress and pressure of the system (middle); winner culture and lack of values (high).

FINDINGS

Violence according to place, income and gender

LOW

- Drug use, micro-trafficking, fights, shootings, power struggles, generate fear and impede the free use of public spaces.
- Houses are not safe spaces, reduced size and precariousness result in stress and frustration that lead to violence in family relationships.
- Violence problems that affect men are related to fights, weapon use, conflicts between gangs; problems that affect women are mainly tied to violence within couples, teen pregnancies, that later give rise to child abuse.

FINDINGS

Violence according to place, income and gender

MIDDLE

- ‘Pressure of the capitalist system’ and ‘the stress that we live as a society’.
- Consumerism, individualism, frustration, a workaholic ethic and a loss of authority and communication with sons and daughters.
- Assaults and muggings affect women, boys and girls; violence against women within couples, economic dependency, uncertainty and discrimination related to employment.

FINDINGS

Violence according to place, income and gender

HIGH

- Bullying at school and in the family.
- Importance of physical appearance.
- Assaults, house burglaries, theft of and from cars
- Intolerance towards diversity, fear of the 'other' as different, poor and violent, creates a feeling of insecurity and unsafety.
- Violence against women within couples. Fights among young men.

Direct violence
On a daily basis,, in the home and in the street, part of a contínuum
LOSERS of the system

Direct violence
Stress
Domestic violence
Workaholics –Illusion of integration vía the market.
‘Caught in the middle’
Want to move away from the poor and get nearer to the rich

Direct violence
Less severe, less recognised, less visible.
The “WINNERS” of the system.

POLICY PROPOSALS TO REDUCE VIOLENCE

1. All violence must be made visible. By defining urban violence only as crime and as a problem of poor areas, other existing manifestations of violence become invisible.
2. Inclusion and social cohesion must be incorporated as crosscutting urban policy themes. Segregation in Santiago is both the expression and cause of violence.
3. Citizen participation. The role of local community in the application of urban policies must be recognised in order to reinforce identity and a sense of belonging.
4. The focus of public policy should be violence instead of security. By making this change 3 main areas appear in which intervention is required: the family, schools and barrios.

CRITERIA FOR PUBLIC POLICIES

Changing what public policy is understood to be. “Public policy is not a specific intervention to solve a problem, but a space in which society agrees on how to settle the way its members wish to live together”. PVA is a powerful tool that pools perceptions and proposals from communities.

A city-based public policy. The issue of territorial and social exclusion as a central aspect of urban living comes up in the discussion of the case of Santiago together with the aspects of insecurity and segregation.

Different uses of power are seen behind the different manifestations of violence. Cities are a privileged space in which several different uses of power become manifest. Cities are also a privileged space for detecting and reverting these chains of power and violence.
