Introduction

This report presents the latest findings from the Justice Data Lab, and summarises the requests for re-offending information through the Justice Data Lab for the period 2nd April 2013 to 30th April 2015.

This report has been produced and published in line with the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This report will be updated and published on the second Thursday of each month for the duration of the Justice Data Lab pilot.

We welcome any feedback on this report or any other Justice Data Lab products. Please use the contact details at the end of this report to let us know your feedback.

What is the Justice Data Lab initiative and how does it work?

The Justice Data Lab is a small team from Analytical Services within the Ministry of Justice (the Justice Data Lab team) that supports organisations that provide offender services by allowing them easy access to aggregate re-offending data, specific to the group of people they have worked with. This service is intended to support organisations in understanding their effectiveness at reducing re-offending.

Participating organisations supply the Justice Data Lab with details of the offenders who they have worked with, and information about the services they have provided. The Justice Data Lab team matches these individuals to the re-offending datasets held within the Ministry of Justice and uses statistical modelling techniques to generate a matched control group of individuals with very similar characteristics. As a standard output, the Justice Data Lab supplies aggregate one year proven re-offending rates for the group of offenders the organisation has worked with, and those of the matched control group of similar offenders.

The re-offending rates for the organisation's group and the matched control group are also compared using statistical testing to assess the impact of the organisation's work on reducing re-offending. The results are then returned to the organisation with explanations of the key metrics, and any caveats and limitations necessary for interpretation of the results.

Finally, the tailored reports produced for each organisation are published on the Ministry of Justice website to promote transparency and ensure that findings produced through this service can be used by others to improve the rehabilitation of offenders.

Key Findings

The following activity has taken place this month:

- One request has been fully answered and is being published this month:
  - The request is for a number of Women's Centres throughout England where the analysis is of the support they provide against a matched national comparison group. Information was supplied by 39 Women's centres. This analysis shows statistically significant results in the one year proven re-offending rate.

To date:

Between the launch of the Justice Data Lab service on the 2nd April 2013, and 30th April 2015 there were 159 requests for re-offending information through the Justice Data Lab. Of these requests;

- 124 reports have been published previously. 1 report is being published this month.
- 19 requests could not be answered as the minimum criteria for a Justice Data Lab analysis had not been met.
- 2 requests were withdrawn by the submitting organisation previously.
- The remaining 13 requests will be processed in due course.

Definitions used in Justice Data Lab reports:

One year proven re-offending rate

The one year proven re-offending rate is defined as the proportion of offenders in a cohort who commit an offence in a one year follow-up period which was proven through receipt of a court conviction, caution, reprimand or warning during the one year follow-up or in a further six month waiting period. The one year follow-up period begins when offenders leave custody, start their court sentence, or from receipt of their caution.

Frequency of one year proven re-offending

The frequency of one year proven re-offending is defined as the number of re-offences committed in a one year follow-up period which were proven through receipt of a court conviction, caution, reprimand or warning during the one year follow-up or in a further six month waiting period. The one year follow-up period begins when offenders leave custody, start their court sentence, or from receipt of their caution.

Time to re-offending

Time to re-offending is defined as the average number of days between the index date (release date from custody or start of probation date) and the offence date of the first re-offence within the one year follow-up period described in the definitions above. This measure is only calculated for individuals that re-offended in the one year follow-up period.

Table 1: Request being published this month.

Organisation and Programme	Summary of Programme	Effect on the one year proven re-offending rate	Effect on the frequency of one year proven re-offending	Effect on the time to re-offending
1 Various Women's Centres throughout England Mentoring Intervention	This analysis is based on information that has been supplied by 39 Women's Centres throughout England to the National Offender Management Service (NOMS). Women's Centres offer a range of services and opportunities to women in the community, including those that have an offending history across the UK. The Centres are not centrally managed and so will have different ways of working and main areas of focus, however they will share the common aim of helping to support, encourage and enable women to improve their quality of life and well-being. Individuals seeking support from Women's Centres will have a variety of needs and will sit across a spectrum of risk. It includes women who were referred to Women's Centres through various routes including; probation officers, social services, community drugs team, a statutory order as part of their sentence plan, to complete an accredited programme, or self referred to the service, and received support between 2010 and 2012. The engagement of these women with the services provided will have varied.	This analysis looked at the impact of receiving support provided by Women's centres throughout England. The analysis shows a reduction of between 1 and 9 percentage points compared to a matched control group of similar individuals from England and Wales.	The frequency of one year proven re-offending for 597 <sup>1</sup>offenders who received support provided by Women's centres throughout England was 1.12 offences per individual, compared with 1.29 per individual in a matched control group of similar individuals from England and Wales. Statistical significance testing has shown that this difference in the frequency of re-offending is not statistically significant.	The average time to the first offence within a year for the 180 individuals that were matched, and re-offended, after receiving support provided by Women's Centres throughout England was 140 days. This compares to 136 days for the 97,750 individuals who re-offended from a matched control group of similar individuals from England and Wales. Statistical significance testing has shown that this difference in the time to first re-offence within a year is not statistically significant.
