

1) The unique number of candidates who sat the Driver Certificate of Professional Competence (CPC) module two (case studies) LGV theory test in 2010/11

2) The unique number of candidates who sat the Driver CPC module two (case studies) PCV theory test in 2010/11

In the table below, you can find the unique number of candidates who sat the Driver CPC lorry and bus module two theory tests in 2010/11.

We've also provided you with the number of lorry and bus conversion tests. These tests are for those candidates holding a bus licence who now wish to drive a lorry or vice versa. Rather than taking a Driver CPC test, a candidate will take the conversion test.

Financial year	Unique number of candidates taking their lorry module two (case study theory test	Unique number of candidates taking their bus module two (case study) theory test	Unique number of candidates taking their lorry conversion theory test	Unique number of candidates taking their bus conversion theory test
2010/11	7,908	3,252	20	24

Please note that:

- we have interpreted the unique number of candidates to mean the number of individuals taking their test.
- the above information is based on a candidate's driving licence number; therefore, if a candidate changed their driving licence number and sat two lorry or bus module two theory tests in 2010/11 under different licence numbers, they'll be counted twice in the above information.
- you can find more information about Driver CPC, including the conversion test, online at <http://www.businesslink.gov.uk/bdotg/action/detail?itemId=1082123743&r.i=1082123864&r.l1=1081597476&r.l2=1082103262&r.l3=1084756387&r.l4=1082123038&r.s=sc&r.t=RESOURCES&type=RESOURCES>
