ISS delivers information capabilities to the MOD that are a force multiplier

- The concept of a force multiplier is well recognised in the military, but perhaps less so in the civil service
- A force multiplier is a factor that dramatically increases effectiveness – in the battle space it increases the effectiveness of the force on the ground, whilst in the corporate space it increases the effectiveness of staff work
- Information capabilities can be a significant force multiplier, in both environments, if they are up to date, work as intended and are delivered in an agile and timely fashion. Leading edge capabilities can deliver even more of a multiplier effect
- ISS is embarking on a major journey over the next 12 months to achieve this vision
