

From: "[\[redacted\]](#)"
Sent: 18 May 2013 10:54
To: Pubs Consultation Responses
Subject: Pubco reform

I am a regular pub visitor. Once or twice a week I go to my local -- or somebody else's local -- to drink a pint or two and chat. No-one in the pub is drunk or rowdy. For many people, the pub is a social hub, a place of companionship and good humour.

It is sad that so many pubs are closing for lack of custom. What is sadder is that many are closing because the owners -- the large Pubcos -- are bleeding the tenants or leaseholders dry with iniquitous rents and tied beer pricing. When the pub must close because of predatory pricing, the Pubco wins again because the site is sold for redevelopment.

I welcome legislation to control the anti-social behaviour of the owners of large numbers of pubs.

This email was received from the INTERNET.

Communications via the GSi may be automatically logged, monitored and/or recorded for legal purposes.
