

From: [REDACTED]
Sent: 15 May 2013 07:35
To: Pubs Consultation Responses
Subject: This may be of interest to you

A well know pub owning brewery is currently transferring a pub that it currently running under management to a tied tenant. The ingoing tenant has been told by the brewery that he will receive the benefit of having to pay for the bar stock on the day of transfer at the same cost as the managed house department has purchased it. However, the brewery have also told him that they will not be disclosing how much he will be charged for individual products and he will only be given the total value of the stock on hand. In other words they are ashamed to disclose how extra they will be charging their tied tenant for stock over and above that which they charge their own managed house department.

This email was received from the INTERNET.

Communications via the GSi may be automatically logged, monitored and/or recorded for legal purposes.

02/12/2013