

1) The number of category D theory tests conducted between September 2004 and 31 December 2011 and the pass rate. I'd like this information broken down by each financial year and pass rate by attempt.

At Annex B, you can find the number of category D theory tests conducted between September 2004 and 31 December 2011 and the pass rate. This information is broken down by each financial year and the pass rate by attempt.

Please note that the category D theory test was split on 4 August 2008. This meant that candidates could either take the multiple choice (MC) theory test and the hazard perception test (HPT) at the same time or separately. Therefore, from 4 August 2008 we have provided you with the number of category D theory tests conducted and the pass rate by each financial year and attempt split by HPT and MC. Prior to the 4 August 2008, the MC and HPT had to be taken at the same time.

2) The number of category D1 practical tests conducted between April 2004 and 31 December 2011 and the pass rate. I'd like this information broken down by each financial year and pass rate by attempt.

At Annex C, you can find the number of category D1 practical tests conducted between April 2004 and 31 December and the pass rate. This information is broken down by each financial year and the pass rate by attempt.

Please note that the practical test information provided for 2011/12 should only be treated as provisional information. This is because all the information of tests conducted in 2011, particularly those tests conducted in December, will still be in the process of data capture and not yet uploaded onto our reporting system.
