Sir,

Tackling the binge drinking problem is long overdue and must succeed. The current proposal to increase the price of alcohol is missing the target and hits others who are not involved. Those who are involved and should be the target are those who become drunk and disorderly in public. FINE HEAVILY those who become drunk and disorderly in public, for example £50 on each occasion, and the problem will go away or become reduced significantly without involving anyone else.

Kind regards,
