

Periodic Table - update

- In our last newsletter it was noted that we aimed to issue a template to be populated by suppliers so we could start to build a periodic table to be shared with the market
- Since that newsletter was issued Intellect have launched their new Market Radar Map which is designed to be a comprehensive map based directory of suppliers of ICT products & services to the UK public sector
- We were aware that this initiative was coming but did not realise it would be quite so soon...
- As a result of the Market Radar Map launch DVLA will not now look to build its own periodic table as Market Radar will offer a cross market tool that will engender the collaborative working being actively encouraged across government departments and the market itself
- You do not have to be an Intellect member to take part in Market Radar and DVLA would actively encourage all suppliers to take this opportunity to join the Market Radar Map

After clicking on the 'Join the Market Radar' button you will be prompted to submit high level company information

Intellect will then contact you to complete the registration and gather additional information to be added to your company profile
