This is being achieved through a programme of stakeholder workshops and a development forum, linked to the application of an assessment framework and peer-group evaluation. This is being extended in Orissa into capacity-building for 300+ small-scale women beekeepers in order to consolidate the commercial viability of small-scale honey producers through the provision of training, equipment, marketing, banking linkages and knowledge-sharing. It will also create district-level Resource Centres for honey pooling, filtering and storage for wholesale purchase; form a Women Beekeepers' Association to strengthen stakeholder collaboration and, in the longer-term, enable Fair Trade registration and development

ABOUT THE PROJECT

This project was designed to pump water from wells and rivers to villages for drinking water, domestic consumption and irrigation of crops. The project was monitored by Luta Hamutuk who found no major problems with it, apart from the problems with access to some documents. During monitoring they noticed that the original planned budget for this project was $120,000, but the actual project amount was $103,999. The community were involved in project implementation.

This project was monitored by Luta Hamutuk

Global Open Data Initiative

The Global Open Data Initiative (GODI) is an initiative led by civil society organizations to share principles and resources for governments and societies on how to best harness the opportunities created by opening government data. It is intended to provide a roadmap of policies and institutions that countries can use to build meaningful new open data reforms and initiatives, informed by the successes of others.

Through GODI and associated work, we intend to:

- Provide a leading vision for how governments approach open data.
- Increase awareness of open data and related issues.
- Support the development of the global open data community.
- Gather, expand, and amplify the evidence base for open data.
