I have Been a pub manager for years now and worked for many different companies {Punch,M&B,Sprite Group} plus more as well as independent pub owners. I have now been working for Enterprise for years all over the Country in different sites from town centre to Country pubs and Enterprise seem to treat all the sites with the same respect and help when needed. Working for a large company like Enterprise gives you an opportunity to and chance to get into the trade. Enterprise have very good training programs for new and old publicans with 24 hour help and ideas on the Website. Managing your own pub through a company like Enterprise on a tenancy or lease is a lot easier in some ways than running an independent/owned pub as if you have building problems roofs,floods,leeks etc they have a good property help desk that you wouldn't get having your own pub. Enterprise as a company also are they to help with money problems,sites that are struggling etc. People seem to forget that Enterprise are a company and there to make money as well as the pubs themselves,When you enter a new pub working with a Large brewery whether it be on a Tenancy or Lease before signing your rpt/rpl you no all the do's and don'ts if you still wish to sign and go-ahead then you no all rules etc.

Kind Regards
