

www.mininghealth.org

Understanding how the mining sector can contribute to better health in low income countries

The Mining Health Initiative is undertaken by Health Partners International and Montrose International, in partnership with the Institute of Development Studies and the International Business Leaders Forum.

The Initiative is funded by DFID and the World Bank International Finance Corporation under the aegis of HANSHEP. For more information, see www.hanshep.org

The Mining Health Initiative will analyse evidence of what works - existing structures and mining health programmes already in place - and identify best practice models for future partnerships.

This will be achieved through a series of in-depth case studies about mining companies as well as in-country stakeholder consultations in Africa.

The Mining Health Initiative is keen to engage with industry, state actors, civil society and other stakeholders.

For additional information please go to: www.mininghealth.org

Contact

Health Partners International

E: info@healthpartners-int.co.uk

T +44 (0) 1273 477474

W: www.healthpartners-int.co.uk

Montrose International

E: info@montroseafrica.com

T: +256 (0) 772 765 680

W: www.montroseint.com

