New criminal offences

England and Wales

1st June 2009 – 31st May 2012

Statistics Bulletin

Preface

The Ministry of Justice committed in its 2011-2015 business plan to establish a gateway to scrutinise all legislation containing criminal offences. It also committed to publish annual figures as part of the planned information strategy.

This publication provides users with information concerning the activity of government departments in creating new criminal offences in England and Wales during the period 1 June 2010 to 31 May 2012, with comparison made to figures from the previous 12 months where available.

This is an Official Statistic produced by the Ministry of Justice to the standards specified in the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. The most recent assessment by the UK Statistics Authority can be found at:

- www.statisticsauthority.gov.uk/assessment/assessment-reports/index.html

Background

Within the normal constraints of collective Cabinet responsibility, individual Government departments have sole responsibility for the development of their own policies and legislation. As part of the Coalition commitment to prevent the proliferation of unnecessary new criminal offences, the Secretary of State for Justice established a Criminal Offences Gateway in June 2010 to scrutinise proposals to create new criminal offences (but not the policy underpinning the legislation). This is to investigate whether the offences proposed are necessary. As part of this commitment, the Ministry of Justice also pledged to counting the number of new criminal offences created each year across Government¹ and to publishing the resultant figures.

¹ This excludes offences created by the Ministry of Defence, these are specific to the armed forces and do not typically apply to the public at large.

Key findings

- In the 12 months ending May 2012 new criminal offences were contained in 52 pieces of legislation; this compares to 33 legislative provisions passed in the 12 months to May 2011.
- From the 52 pieces of legislation 292 new criminal offences were created, an increase of 67.8 per cent on the previous 12 months (174) and a 59.0 per cent fall from the 12 months ending May 2010 (712).
- According to estimates based on data extracted from the Police National Legal Database, 188 offences were repealed in England and Wales in the 12 months ending May 2012. This compares to 155 offences repealed in the preceding 12 months to May 2011.

New offences

- In the 12 months ending May 2012 the number of legislative provisions containing new offences rose by 57.6 per cent (52) compared to the 12 months ending May 2011 (33), with the number of new criminal offences contained within these provisions increasing by 67.8 per cent to 292.
- Of those offences created in the 12 months ending May 2012:
 - 87.7 per cent (256) were created in secondary legislation, an increase of 5.5 percentage points on the previous 12 month period. Whilst the remaining 12.3 per cent (36) were created in primary legislation.
 - 85.6 per cent (250) were concerned with implementing European Union obligations – with 118 offences coming under the Veterinary Medicines Regulations 2011 and the remainder relating to sanctions in respect of countries involved in acts of terrorism or other conflict.
 - There were no new indictable only offences created, 82.9 per cent of offences were triable either-way (242) and the remaining 17.1 per cent were summary only (50).

- Over three-quarters (78.1 per cent, 228 offences) of the total new offences carried a possible custodial sentence. The majority of these offences (52.6 per cent, 120 offences) were created by The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.
- The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs created 136 new offences – accounting for 46.6 per cent of the total new offences in the 12 months ending May 2012. This includes 118 offences under the Veterinary Medicines Regulations 2011 which are reviewed annually.

Repeals

- Just as the number of new offences created have increased compared to the last 12 month period, so too have the number of offences being repealed and removed from the statute book. In the 12 months ending May 2012 there were 188 offences² repealed in England and Wales, this compares to 155 offences repealed in the 12 months ending May 2011.
- Of those offences repealed in the 12 months to May 2012:
 - 2.7 per cent were indictable only offences;
 - 36.7 per cent were triable-either way offences, and;
 - 60.6 per cent were summary only offences.

² Repealed offences are counted by the Police National Legal Database on a different basis to that used by the Ministry of Justice for new offences and no comparison should be drawn between them.

Data sources and quality

The data for the 12 months ending 31 May 2011 and 2012 have been supplied by an administrative system operated by the Criminal Offences Gateway Team in the Ministry of Justice. The data summarises legislation commenced between 1 June 2010 and 31 May 2012 and has been subject to quality assurance processes.

Data for the period 1 June 2009 to 31 May 2010 have been gathered via a retrospective count based on published legislation and to provide an indicative baseline against which the number of new criminal offences can be measured. This one off counting exercise has used the same counting rules as applied to the new criminal offences identified for the later periods and the legislation included in the retrospective counting exercise has been identified from the Government's Legislation database. The figures have been quality assured by both the Criminal Offences Gateway Team and Justice Statistics Analytical Services.

The Ministry of Justice does not monitor repealed offences. The data on repeals has been provided from the Police National Legal Database (PNLD). The Ministry of Justice works in close collaboration with the PNLD team in maintaining a comprehensive list of criminal offences used in England and Wales. Repealed offences are counted on a different basis to that used by the Ministry of Justice for new offences and no comparison should be drawn between them.

Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented in this publication are accurate and complete; individual cases are quality assured and validated. Caution should be taken when extrapolating from subsets of the data due to the small figures reported.

Methodology

Definitions

In this publication a new offence covers both entirely new criminal offences and new offences that replace or re-enact previous offences. The complexity of legislative drafting means it is not possible to present these separately.

A repealed offence is a criminal offence which is removed from the statute book by new legislation. The Police National Legal Database categorises individual offences by legislative provision, which differs from the counting methodology used by the Ministry of Justice to record new criminal offences. Even when an offence has been repealed, it may still be used to prosecute historical cases.

Counting rules

To identify a new criminal offence for the purposes of this publication, the following rules have been considered:

- behaviour: identify particular conduct being criminalised.
- legislative drafting: how is the provision drafted? Does it as a matter of common sense read as a single offence or does the drafting create a number of separate offences?
- penalties: does each offence counted carry a single maximum penalty? Or are any of the offences divided into their constituent elements with differing maximum penalties?

A legislative provision drafted as a single offence with a single maximum penalty is counted as one offence, even if it targets a number of different types of conduct.

A legislative provision that appears to be drafted as a single criminal offence but which in fact criminalises diverse behaviour with differing maximum penalties is counted as more than one offence, depending on the number of different penalties applied.

An example is given below:

Example:

The Misuse of Drugs Act 1971

Large sections of the Act refer to a small number of substantive criminal behaviours, for example 'production of or being concerned in the production of a controlled drug' contrary to section 4(2) of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971:

"Subject to section 28 of this Act, it is an offence for a person—

*(a) to produce a controlled drug in contravention of subsection (1) above; or
(b) to be concerned in the production of such a drug in contravention of that subsection by another."*

The drafting of the provision targets particular behaviour, as opposed to listing every type of drug which it is an offence to produce – thus it looks like a single offence.

However, there are three different maximum penalties available for this behaviour, reflecting the three different drug classifications (i.e. Class A, B and C), e.g. the production of heroin (Class A) carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment, compared to 5 years for the production of ketamine (Class C).

Applying the Ministry of Justice's counting rules; section 4(2) would be counted as containing three offences:

- an offence of producing or being concerned in the production of a Class A drug with a maximum custodial penalty of life imprisonment (on conviction on indictment) or 6 months (on summary conviction);
- an offence of producing or being concerned in the production of a Class B drug with a maximum custodial penalty of 14 years' imprisonment (on conviction on indictment) or 6 months (on summary conviction), and;
- an offence of producing or being concerned in the production of a Class C drug with a maximum custodial penalty of 14 years' imprisonment (on conviction on indictment) or 3 months (on summary conviction).

Legislation

This bulletin covers new criminal offences in primary and secondary legislation which takes effect in England and Wales. Legislation that applies outside England and Wales only or applies only at a limited local level has not been included.

Accordingly, the following legislative vehicles are not counted:

- Byelaws;
- Transport and Work Act orders;
- Harbour orders;
- Private Bills;
- Hybrid Bills;
- Devolved legislation

In addition, criminal offences created by the Ministry of Defence are not included. These are specific to the armed forces and do not apply to the public at large.

Timing

The point in time at which an offence is counted impacts on the number of offences included within a given 12 month period. Offences in secondary legislation have been counted at the date they come into force. Since the commencement of primary legislation can be very complicated, criminal offences contained in Acts of Parliament are counted from the date of Royal Assent.

International obligations

The UK is a signatory to various international treaties and Government departments are responsible, where appropriate, for implementing into domestic law requirements arising from these international obligations. The Ministry of Justice has recorded where the offence is arising from international obligations, such as European Union legislation.

Example:

The Export Control Order (Libya) 2011

This Order puts in place criminal penalties for breach of directly applicable EU legislation prohibiting trade, technical assistance, financial assistance or brokering in equipment that may be used for internal repression in Libya.

Under the powers of section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972 the criminal offences arising from Council Regulation (EU) No.961/2010 of 25 October 2010 were introduced domestically.

Glossary of terms used in this publication

Byelaws

These are laws of local or limited application made by local councils or other bodies using powers granted by an Act of Parliament. Some byelaws are made by private companies or charities that exercise public or semi-public functions, such as airport operators, water companies or the National Trust.

Commencement date

This refers to the date on which a primary legislative provision comes into force. Different sections of the same Act of Parliament may be commenced at different times, and may even be commenced for different purposes at different times.

Criminal offence

An act punishable by law in criminal courts of England & Wales. This does not include civil offences that may be categorised as criminal for the purposes of ensuring adequate procedural safeguards by the European Court of Human Rights.

Harbour Order

Orders made under powers given in the Harbours Act 1964 for the effective management of a harbour. Formerly under the responsibility of the Department for Transport, applications are now dealt with via the Marine Management Organisation.

Hybrid Bills

Hybrid Bills mix the characteristics of Public and Private Bills. The changes to the law proposed by a Hybrid Bill would partly affect the general public but would also have a significant impact for specific individuals or groups. The Bills passed concerning the construction of the Channel Tunnel are examples of Hybrid Bills.

Indictable only offences

These are the most serious criminal offences and must be tried in the Crown Court. Indictable only offences include murder, manslaughter, rape and robbery.

Primary legislation

General term used to describe an Act of Parliament. It originates as a Bill and is debated in both the House of Commons and the House of Lords, and becomes an Act of Parliament on receiving Royal Assent from the Queen.

Private Bill

Private Bills are usually promoted by organisations, like local authorities or private companies, to give themselves powers beyond, or in conflict with, the general law. Private Bills only change the law as it applies to specific individuals or organisations, rather than the general public. Groups or individuals potentially affected by these changes can petition Parliament against the proposed Bill and present their objections to committees of MPs and Lords.

Public Bill

Public Bills change the law as it applies to the general population and are the most common type of Bill introduced in Parliament. Government ministers propose the majority of Public Bills - those put forward by other MPs or Lords are known as Private Members' Bills.

Re-enactment

Re-making a law that has been repealed.

Repeal

A specific type of legislative amendment where the effect is to remove part or all of a piece of legislation. Amending legislation may specify that words or provisions "shall be omitted" or "shall cease to have effect".

Royal Assent

When a Bill has completed all its Parliamentary stages in both Houses, it will become an Act of Parliament (law) when it receives Royal Assent. Royal Assent is the Monarch's formal agreement to the legislation. This is not necessarily the point at which the legislation comes into effect.

Secondary legislation

Secondary, delegated or subordinate legislation is made by a person or body (usually a Minister) under authority contained in primary legislation. It allows the provisions of an Act of Parliament to be brought into force, supplemented or altered without having to pass a new Act. Secondary legislation includes rules, regulations and orders.

Summary only offences

These offences may only be tried in the magistrates' court (unless a defendant is tried at the Crown Court for a mixture of indictable and summary only offences). Summary only offences are the least serious offences.

Transport and Work Act Order

This is the usual means of authorising a new railway or tramway specific scheme in England and Wales. Applications for orders are made to the relevant Secretary of State or to the Welsh Assembly Government. Applications are made by, or on behalf of, the promoters of the scheme. For more information visit the Department for Transport website here: <http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/twa/>

Triable either-way offences

These offences may be tried summarily at the magistrates' court or on indictment at the Crown Court, carrying a different maximum sentence depending on where they are heard. These offences include theft and burglary for example.
