Dear Nadia,

Replacement of the Financial Services Authority by the Financial Conduct Authority and the Prudential Regulation Authority and the Bank of England as the Competent Authority for certain Directives and Regulations

As you will be aware, the UK Government has undertaken a broad programme of financial reform in response to the global financial crisis. Key elements of this reform package are the changes to the UK's system of financial regulation and supervision. The purpose of this letter is to notify you of the replacement of the Financial Services Authority (FSA) with new regulatory authorities.

The UK has created a system where responsibility for each facet of financial stability is clearly divided among the different regulatory and supervisory authorities. The Financial Services Act 2012 provided for the creation of:

- an expert macro-prudential authority, the Financial Policy Committee (FPC) within the Bank of England to monitor and respond to systemic risks in the financial sector;
- a focused micro-prudential supervisor, the Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA), to supervise firms that manage complex risks on their balance sheets - specifically, all deposit takers, insurers and some large investment firms; and
- a focused conduct of business supervisor, the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA), to ensure that business across financial services and markets is conducted in a way that advances the interests of all users and participants. The FCA is also responsible for the prudential supervision of financial services firms not regulated by the PRA.

This new system came into effect on 1 April 2013.

The Tables in Annex A indicate which of the new UK authorities replace the FSA as the Competent Authority or Authorities in respect of the relevant Directives and Regulations. Table 1 indicates which authorities are competent authorities for passporting purposes, and for remaining purposes, in respect of European legislation which contains passporting provisions. Table 2 indicates which authorities are competent authorities for the purposes of European legislation which does not contain passporting provisions.

This letter therefore constitutes the formal notice of information to the Commission of the designation of the new Competent Authority or Competent Authorities as a result of these replacements, for the purposes of each Directive or Regulation which requires a formal designation, notice or information, and the Tables in Annex A indicate the provision under which any such designation, notice or information is made. Where a Directive or Regulation uses the term "supervisory authority", the use of the term "competent authority" in this letter is intended to mean supervisory authority.

Additionally, this letter constitutes notice of the designation of the FCA as the single competent authority as a contact point for the purposes of article 56 of MiFID<sup>1</sup>, and of the Bank of England as the single authority responsible for co-ordinating co-operation and exchange of information for the purposes of article 22 of EMIR<sup>2</sup>.

This letter does not cancel or replace the role or designation as a Competent Authority of any authority other than the FSA. For example, the UK courts are a competent authority for the purposes of various Directives and Regulations listed in Annex A; this letter does not affect the status of the courts as a competent authority.

Where more than one UK authority is the competent authority, the role of each will reflect their domestic responsibilities and objectives as a firm's supervisor, as set out in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 and the subordinate legislation which underpins that Act.

In general, a firm's supervisor will either be (i) the FCA or (ii) both PRA and FCA, depending on whether the activities a firm undertakes fall within the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (PRA-Regulated Activities) Order 2013. In summary, the activities which are PRA-supervised are: effecting or carrying out contracts of insurance, accepting deposits and, in certain cases, dealing on own account in relation to MiFID financial instruments. Where a firm carries out PRA-supervised activities, it will be subject to dual supervision - by the PRA generally in regard to prudential issues and the FCA in respect of conduct matters. Firms which do not carry out PRA-supervised activities will be supervised by the FCA alone, in respect of both prudential matters and conduct matters.

Annex B sets out contact details for the new Competent Authorities.

I am copying this letter to Steven Maijor at the European Securities and Markets Authority, Andrea Enria at the European Banking Authority and Gabriel Bernardino at the European Insurance and Occupational Pensions Authority to allow them to update their information as necessary, and in accordance with the obligations to notify or inform which are listed in Annex A. I am also copying this letter to Paul Tucker at the Bank of England, Andrew Bailey at the Prudential Regulation Authority and Martin Wheatley at the Financial Conduct Authority.
