Q8. In the alcohol strategy, the government committed to introducing a minimum unit price for alcohol in England and Wales. This consultation will contribute to the debate on the most appropriate price per unit and the mechanism by which, once set, minimum unit pricing would remain effective. It is also an opportunity for interested parties to raise other issues around minimum unit pricing. The purpose of minimum unit pricing is to reduce alcohol consumption, particularly by the most hazardous and harmful drinkers who tend to show a preference for the cheapest alcohol products. By doing so the government estimates there will be a reduction in the associated crime and health harms, especially the numbers of hospital admissions, alcohol-related deaths and alcohol-related crimes. Minimum unit pricing is not intended disproportionately to affect responsible drinkers or particular social groups but to reduce the availability of alcohol sold at very low or heavily discounted prices. More information (including the definitions of hazardous and harmful drinkers) is available in the full consultation document and the impact assessment. Do you want to answer questions on minimum unit pricing? Please select one option.

Q9. The impact of minimum unit pricing will depend on the price per unit of alcohol. The government wants to ensure that the chosen price level is targeted and proportionate, whilst achieving a significant reduction of harm. The government is therefore consulting on the introduction of a recommended minimum unit price of 45p. The government estimates a reduction in consumption across all product types of 3.3 per cent, a reduction in crime of 5,240 per year, a reduction in 24,600 alcohol-related hospital admissions and 714 fewer deaths per year after ten years. Do you agree that this minimum unit price level would achieve these aims? Please select one option.

No

If you think another level would be preferable, please set out your views on why this might be in the box below (keeping your views to a maximum of 200 words):

The Salvation Army has already publicly supported the Scottish Government's desire to introduce a 50p MUP. We also support this level in Northern Ireland which has proposed MUP legislation. We feel that there is a clear argument for one price across the UK to prevent alcohol tourism. The Salvation Army believe that the MUP level ought to be set at 50p as recommended by the Chief Medical Officer in 2008.

We believe that 45p will not affect price sufficiently at the high strength low cost low quality end of the market. The Sheffield study estimated that an MUP of 45p would result in 344 fewer deaths in Year 1, but 50p would mean many fewer – 521. Research suggests that a 50p minimum unit price will reduce consumption by 6.7%, saving around 97,000 hospital admissions a year once the policy has been in place for ten years. Crime and healthcare benefits rise similarly steeply at an MUP of 50p. Healthcare savings would be £86.7 million at 50p in year 1, as opposed to £58.6 at 45p.

Q10. Should other factors or evidence be considered when setting a minimum unit price for alcohol? Please select one option.

Yes

If yes, please specify these in the box below (keeping your views to a maximum of 200 words):

The effect of adult alcohol consumption on children is difficult to include in financial modelling, but it is a matter of central importance. It is estimated that 700,000 children in England and Wales live with a dependent drinker and 2.5 million with a hazardous drinker. ('Silent Voices' Report for the Children's Commissioner, 2012.) These children are at increased risk of later problem drinking as well as having to deal with emotional difficulties in the present. Since hazardous drinkers are particularly affected by MUP, a level of 50p would help reduce both present and future suffering. Alcohol-related harm is estimated to cost around £21 billion per year in England. This figure comprises NHS costs, alcohol-related crime and lost productivity due to alcohol. If the costs of wider social harm, such as the effect on children, were included the cost would be considerably higher. Alcohol is associated with more than 60 medical conditions and deaths directly related to alcohol rose by 22% between 2001 and 2010. Urgent action is needed to combat these harms.

Q11. The government wishes to maintain the effectiveness of minimum unit pricing and is therefore proposing to adjust the minimum unit price level over time. How do you think the level of minimum unit price set by the government should be adjusted over time? Please select one option.

Q12. The aim of minimum unit pricing is to reduce the consumption of harmful and hazardous drinkers, while minimising the impact on responsible drinkers. Do you think that there are any other people, organisations or groups that could be particularly affected by a minimum unit price for alcohol? Please select one option.

Yes

If yes, please specify in the box below (keeping your views to a maximum of 100 words):

1. Children could be helped by the introduction of a MUP for alcohol: It would reduce their being affected by adult drinking as well as reduce the chances of early drinking and/or excessive consumption in young adulthood. Under 18s from deprived backgrounds have shown the strongest rise in hospital admissions for alcohol-related conditions. 3. Victims of crime: A reduction of 5.7% in violent crime is forecast at 45p per unit, and 10.5% at 50p. 4. Police and hospital: Time would be freed to deal with other needs.

Page 4: A ban on multi-buy promotions in the off-trade

Q13. The government is consulting on introducing a ban on multi-buy promotions in the off-trade (e.g. shops and off-licences) as part of its wider strategy to reduce excessive alcohol consumption, and alongside the introduction of a minimum unit price. A ban on multi-buy promotions would therefore not apply to pubs, clubs, bars or restaurants. The term 'multi-buy promotions' refers to alcohol promotions that offer a discount for buying multiple items. The aim of a ban would be to stop promotions that encourage people to buy more than they otherwise would, making it cheaper (per item) to purchase more than one of a product than to purchase a single item. As well as being part of a wider strategy to reduce consumption and tackle irresponsible alcohol sales, a ban on multi-buy promotions would also contribute to the government's aim of encouraging people to be aware of how much they drink and the risks of excessive drinking, so that they can make informed choices. The aim of this consultation is to assess support for such a ban and contribute to our understanding of the impact a ban on multi-buy promotions may have. The types of promotion it is proposed that a ban would include, are: two for the price of one, three for the price of two, buy one get one free, buy six and get 20 per cent off, 24 cans of lager costing less than 24 times the cost of a single can of lager in the shop, a case of wine sold cheaper than the individual price at which the same bottles are sold in the shop, 3 for £10 where each bottle costs more than £3.33. If yes, please specify in the box below (keeping your views to a maximum of 100 words):

Because of the health dimension, alcohol cannot be considered like other products and it should not be sold cheaply, or as a loss-leader. The ban on multi-buy promotions will not be as effective if other methods of cheaper sale are still available. Some retailers may, for example, decide not to sell bottles of wine individually if they think they can sell more by providing it only by the case. This would have the same effect as multibuy. We think this, and all forms of discounting should not be permitted.

Alcohol is a substance that can cause considerable harm to individuals, families, and wider society. The dominant view that alcohol is a product that can be treated like any other needs to be challenged. A ban on multi-buy promotions combined with a MUP of 50p would have a significant impact on reducing the harm and associated costs of alcohol misuse. As a society, we are currently paying a huge price attempting to deal with the harms of alcohol misuse retrospectively. An Alcohol Concern and Balance survey of 16-24 year olds found that promotions on alcohol encouraged them to drink more than they would otherwise. University of Sheffield modelling for the Scottish Government indicates that a ban on price discounts alongside a MUP of 50p (at 2009 prices) would have a far greater impact than MUP alone. Alcohol-related hospital admissions for middle-aged people cost the NHS significantly more than those related to binge-drinking by young people. (Alcohol Concern Alcohol Harm Map, 2012) It is important that alcohol policy tackles the less obvious problems of regular drinking over health limits, as

Young people would benefit particularly as they are among the groups most likely to buy cheap alcohol. Services such as ambulance services hospitals and the police would be dealing with fewer cases of alcohol-related harm. People from disadvantaged areas would be benefited. On average they are less likely to drink than other groups. However, if they do drink, recent data suggest that men in the most deprived areas are five times as likely to die of an alcohol-related illness as those in the most affluent areas, and women are three times as likely. Page 6: Reviewing the mandatory licensing conditions

Q18. In its response to the 'Rebalancing the Licensing Act' consultation in 2010, the government committed to review the impact of the current mandatory licensing conditions. More recently, the alcohol strategy made a commitment to review these mandatory licensing conditions to ensure they are sufficiently targeting problems such as irresponsible promotions in pubs and clubs. The government has also committed to consult on whether these mandatory licensing conditions should, where relevant, apply to both the on- and off-trade. This consultation forms part of that review, and will contribute to the government's understanding of how these mandatory conditions are perceived. The five mandatory licensing conditions currently set out in regulations in relation to the supply of alcohol are: a ban on irresponsible promotions a ban on dispensing alcohol by one person directly into the mouth of another a requirement to provide free tap water on request to customers a requirement to have an age verification policy to prevent the sale of alcohol to persons under 18 years of age, and a requirement to make available to customers small measures such as half pints or beer or cider or 125ml glasses of wine More information is available in the full consultation document. An explanation of each of these terms can be found on page 20 of the consultation document, in the glossary at the end. There are still many promotions that encourage more – and indeed excessive – consumption. These include incentives to buy a whole bottle of wine rather than purchase by the glass and two for one offers. We would also have concerns about cheaper prices at particular times of the day.

Q21. Are there other issues related to the licensing objectives which could be tackled through a mandatory licensing condition? Please select one option.

Yes

If yes, please specify in the box below (keeping your views to a maximum of 200 words):

Soft drinks in licensed premises can sometimes be more expensive than the cheaper forms of alcohol. A licensing condition stating that soft drinks should be made available at reasonable prices, and at cheaper prices than alcohol would be welcome. Newer, larger measures have now become more common. We welcomed the mandatory availability of wine by the old 125ml measure. However, the 250 ml glass can often mean alcohol is sold more cheaply than in two 125ml glasses, which provides an incentive for higher consumption. In view of the fact that 250mls of many wines takes women over daily recommended limits, we think the 250 ml measure should be withdrawn, as should the 35ml measure for spirits. The old 25ml corresponds to one unit, and is both safer and easier to calculate for consumers.

trade and only one of those to the off-trade, is appropriate? Please select one option.

If no, please explain why you think the current approach is not the best approach (keeping your views to a maximum of 100 words):

Whilst some of the conditions are not so readily applicable to many off-trade premises, it seems inconsistent that the conditions are not common between these two types of outlets.

Page 8: Health as a licensing objective for cumulative impact policies

Q23. We want to ensure that licensing authorities are able to take alcohol-related health harms into consideration when making decisions about cumulative impact policies (CIPs) which can be used to manage problems linked to the density of premises in specific areas. A CIP introduces a rebuttable presumption that all new licence applications and variations in that area will normally be refused if the licensing authority receives a relevant representation stating that the application will add to the cumulative impact. However each application must still be considered on its own merits and the licensing authority may still grant the application if it is satisfied that the application will not contribute to the cumulative impact. We are proposing that licensing authorities will be able to take evidence of alcohol-related health harm into account in deciding whether to introduce a CIP and the extent of that CIP. This would be a discretionary power and not an obligation. We expect that those areas with the highest levels of alcohol-related health harm, or fast rising levels of harm from alcohol, will be most likely to use this power. It will allow local health bodies to fully contribute to local decision making and mean licensing authorities can restrict the number of licensed premises in the local area on the basis of robust local evidence. Q24. What sources of evidence on alcohol-related health harm could be used to support the introduction of a cumulative impact policy (CIP) if it were possible for a CIP to include consideration of health? Please specify in the box below (keeping your views to a maximum of 200 words):

The Salvation Army supports this provision, and would like to see it adopted nationally.

Local Authorities should have the power to use information that they find relevant, including the representations of residents or local health bodies.

Local hospital admissions, death rates, incidences of under-age drinking, especially those resulting in hospital admission, and rates of referrals for alcohol treatment are all relevant health indicators.

Alcohol-related crimes of violence and data from Social Services about the role/incidence of alcohol in family problems would also be relevant.

Q25. Do you think any aspects of the current cumulative impact policy process would need to be amended to allow consideration of data on alcohol-related health harms? Please select one option.

Yes

If yes, please specify which aspects in the box below (keeping your views to a maximum of 200 words):

We welcome the Government's proposal to allow local authorities to take the health harms of alcohol into account when determining the density of licensed premises in their local area. The Salvation Army believes that health should be a licensing objective in its own right as it is in Scotland.

Please specify your answer in the box below, providing evidence to support your response (keeping your views to a maximum of 200 words):

Health-harms data should always feed into licensing decision-making. Allowing licensing authorities to consider alcohol-related health harms will provide them with an additional, and much-needed, tool to proactively refuse new applications/extensions on the basis of local health considerations.

Q27. The government has committed to consult on giving licensing authorities greater freedom to take decisions that reflect the needs of their local community. Following the government's Red Tape Challenge in 2011, three areas of reform were specified: alcohol licensing for certain types of premises providing minimal alcohol sales, temporary event notices (TENs) and the licensing of late night refreshment. This section asks for views on these proposals and suggests further ways to reduce burdens on business. The proposals set out here can be seen alongside work undertaken by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport to remove unnecessary red tape from regulated entertainment. More information on each of these areas for reform is available in the full consultation document. There are five subjects covered in this section. They are: ancillary sales of alcohol, occasional provision of licensable activities at community events, an extension of the temporary event notice limit at individual premises, late night refreshment, and further proposals to reduce burdens on business. Q28. Ancillary sales of alcohol For many businesses, the sale of alcohol is only a small part of, or incidental to, their wider activities, and occurs alongside the provision of another product or service (which this consultation refers to as an 'ancillary sale'). For example, a guesthouse might wish to provide wine to its guests with an evening meal or a complimentary bottle of wine in a guest's room, while a hairdresser might wish to offer clients a glass of wine. Should special provision to reduce the burdens on ancillary sellers be limited to specific types of business, and/or be available to all types of business, providing they meet certain qualification criteria for limited or incidental sales? Q30. Do you have any suggestions for other types of businesses to which such special provision could apply without impacting adversely on one or more of the licensing objectives? Please write your suggestions in the box below, keeping your views to a maximum of 200 words:

Whilst we could understand the reasoning behind a wish to reduce some of licensing requirements on some sellers of alcohol The Salvation Army are not in favour of any such liberalisation.

Alcohol cannot be considered a normal commodity, rather a toxic substance which can result damage to health. The Salvation Army has been involved in dealing with the consequences of alcohol abuse since the 19th Century. We currently run treatment programmes for those who are alcoholic and feel that the perils of alcohol are still not being taken seriously by society.

It is right that vigorous procedures are in place to ensure that sale of alcohol is effectively regulated. Such procedures should not be regarded as protection for us all against the abuse of alcohol.

Q31. The aim of a new 'ancillary seller' status is to reduce burdens on businesses where the sale of alcohol is only a small part of their business and occurs alongside the provision of a wider product or service, while minimising loopholes for irresponsible businesses and maintaining the effectiveness of enforcement. Alternatively, a second option is to broaden the definition of 'ancillary sales' to include all businesses (and/or not for profit activities) through the use of a general set of qualification criteria, for example, to the effect that: alcohol must be sold or supplied as a small part or proportion of a sales transaction or contract for a wider service, and the amount of alcohol that could be supplied as part of that contract cannot exceed a prescribed amount. Do you think that the qualification criteria proposed meet this aim?

No

Please use the space below to provide further comments (keeping your views to a maximum of 200 words):

The Salvation Army is not in favour of measures that would result in increasing the casual availability of alcohol.

A personal licence holder gives the police a named individual to contact if problems arise, and means businesses have to think carefully about their responsibilities under the Licensing Act.

Removing the need for a premises licence would reduce the rights of local residents, who would not know when an alcohol licence was being applied for, even though they might be affected by it.

Reducing existing licensing requirements for ancillary sellers would result in increased availability of alcohol and strengthen the culture of drinking as an every-day activity.
