As a current publican I would like to think that this enquiry will take a suitably balanced look from both sides of the coin. I have 3 pubs with a pub co and its not all bad. People need to stand by the deals they make and ask themselves if they as landlord are doing there share. Most go to the pub co long after it is too late for help. 1000s owed to Hmrc isn't as easy to solve as a few grand to the brewery. Some of us would find being operators and multiples impossible without the pub co. They are by no means perfect and blameless but this consultation needs to be fair, open minded and not just looked at from the grievance of failed operators but with due consideration for the ones of us who work hard in this industry and that have had the backing of a pub co to make this happen.

Best Regards
