Subject: Government Review of the Pub Industry

Dear Sir/Madam,

With reference to the Government's upcoming consultation review of the pub industry, although there are some merits to a potential overhaul, there are many positives that the Pubcos bring to the industry too.

We are tenants of Enterprise Inns, and without their low-cost support given to first-time publicans, we couldn't have had our first attempt at running a pub, nor could many others - this is akin to the recent Budgetary measure by George Osborne, boosting the housing market by the freeing up of lending.

In the first six months of tenancy, through training, advice, and helpful staff, the transition into a new industry has definitely been made easier, whilst investment in new projects gives an extra angle for comfort.

As a result of the above, we feel that perhaps another view should be looked at before any across-the-board decision is made.

Yours sincerely,
