Public Forest Estate

I am writing to you regarding government plans outlined in the document Towards a new Public Forest Estate management body.

You will appreciate the importance of the public forest estate to people that shoot, the income this produces through sporting leases and in the wider rural economy. There are also significant benefits for biodiversity that result from managing woodland for shooting.

The proposed new structure would include not only a Board to manage the new organisation, but also Guardians, representing the interests and expertise of the forest estate users who will support delivery of the new body. Both groups will focus on ways to maximise the economic, social and environmental value of the estate.

I would be grateful for any assurances the Department is able to provide to ensure that the new body takes advantage of the benefits provided by shooting.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,
