A career in the Army Reserve offers you the challenge and adventure that you simply can't find in any other job. You'll be able to play a variety of sports and take part in adventurous training activities from kayaking to mountain biking. Plus you'll have the opportunity to travel all over the world on training exercises in places such as California and Kenya.

TRAINING

When you join the Army Reserve, your training will be all about self-development. We'll help you learn team-building, decision-making and leadership skills, plus you'll have plenty of opportunities to earn qualifications that could be used in your civilian career. Units have a minimum annual training commitment which changes depending on which role or unit you choose. Training normally takes place at the weekends and one evening a week.

PAY

You get paid for all the time you spend in the Army Reserve with your pay rising as you are promoted through the ranks. There is also an annual tax-free bounty that you are entitled to if you complete your minimum annual training commitment that increases to £1,708 after five years of Army Reserve service. New entrants are also now eligible for extra payments of up to £2,300.
