Currently, parents wanting an Orthodox Jewish secondary school for their children apply for places at the King David High School in Manchester, as this is the closest provision. The children commute daily by coach. Once open, Leeds Jewish Free School will provide a much closer alternative and so it is likely that the current year 7 will be the last Leeds pupils to travel to Manchester. King David High School are aware of the plans for the Free School and so will be able to manage the reduction in Leeds pupils and attract more local students because of the high quality of education offered.
