

I've got something to say

The statements below are from actual victims who communicated with their offenders. The victims explained to their offenders the effect the crime had on them in a process called Restorative Justice. Here is what they said...

Meeting my offender gave me the opportunity to tell him how I felt.

Restorative Justice meant that my voice was heard.

I met with my offender because I wanted to know why I was targeted.

Restorative Justice helped me move forward with my life.

When we spoke, I told the offender how his crimes impacted my whole life.
