Details recorded on CID and other Home Office databases. This must cover similar details to the file. CID entries must always be checked against tetained paper records to establish an immigration history which is as complete, accurate and consistent as possible. You must also do a Central Reference System visa application check where relevant. Arrange a nationality and identity interview through CC's prison operations and removals team (PORT). You must discuss this with an immigration officer who must be given directions on the questions to be asked and answered. It is best practice to use this interview to establish or discredit facts, rather than use it as a 'fishing trip'. You must examine all files carefully for evidence of identity and nationality. If you need to pass a case file to another caseworker, it is recommended the new caseworker re-examines the files (along with other data from IT) instead of relving on the previous officer's assessments, particularly where these are older records. This allows the new officer to become familiar with the FNO's immigration history, and provides a safety net that will pick up any previous errors or omissions.

	Her Majesty's Revenue & Customs (HMRC)
	HMRC can confirm if a person has claimed the following benefits in the UK:
	Child benefit
	Child tax credit
	Working tax credit
	Health in pregnancy grant.
	To obtain these benefits, individuals must provide proof of identity and HMRC will often retain copies of identity documents provided. Copied documents can then be used not only to establish or verify nationality and identity of a FNO, but to support an ETD application for them.

Checks with HMRC are carried out by CC's investigations team (IT) and you must contact them if you require such checks (for contact details see link on left: Country specialist team and investigations team).
Department of Work and Pensions (DWP) DWP can confirm if a person has claimed the following benefits in the UK:
 Attendance allowance Carer's allowance Disability living allowance Employment and support allowance Income-based job-seeker's allowance Income support Severe disability allowance Social fund payment State pension credit.
For details of how DWP can be contacted see related link: How to request information from DWP.
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) DVLA can confirm if a person has obtained a driving licence in the UK, which requires that individual to provide proof of identity. DVLA will usually retain copies of identity documents provided. Copied documents can then be used to verify the FNO's identity and support any ETD application.
Requests for information must be made under the Data Protection Act 1998 to the DVLA's Drivers Investigation Team using the related link: Email DVLA DIT. It is suggested that when requesting such information, you state:
'I confirm that the information requested is for the prevention or detection of crime, or the prosecution of offenders. If I do not receive this information it will prejudice my enquiry. I am requesting this information under section 29(3) of the Data Protection Act 1998. I understand that any information supplied is governed by the Act and to treat to the information in confidence.'

National Offender Management Services (NOMS) NOMS hold useful additional information on FNOs as they will have assigned an offender manager (OM) to their case who has direct contact with the FNO, both in custody and after release. It is vital for you to keep OMs informed of crucial developments in the progression of a FNO's deportation and OMs are also supported to provide you with relevant information.
 deportation, and OMs are also expected to provide you with relevant information. It is best practice to contact an OM directly by telephone. Their contact details should have been given to CC at the point of referral or as soon as one is assigned to the case. These are usually recorded in the special conditions screen of CID, and/or the notes screen. Local authorities (LAs) LAs are likely to hold useful information on FNOs which may assist. They will hold details of individuals who have been housed by them or given access to other social services, and also where an individual is engaged in Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA). You can establish which LA covers a specific address by using external link: Local authority finder. It is best practice to contact the LA by telephone in the first instance.

	A custody record also has reference to any of the prisoner's property seized by the police at the time of arrest and/or charge. This may include a passport or identity card or other form of identification. The police will have retained such items in their prisoner property store.
	Bail surety checks
	In cases where a bail application is received, sureties should have been nominated. These may claim to be relatives or friends of the applicant, and so the police can be asked to visit them before the bail hearing to help find out any useful information as to the FNO's identity and nationality.

You can request such visits by contacting the local police station's control room by telephone. You must explain why you would like police to make the visit. Checks can also be made by the police on sureties previously given for bail purposes. In London the Safer Neighbourhood Teams can be contacted about this, for more information, see related link.

Police intelligence

The police may have obtained various information during their criminal investigations into the subject or a member of their family. You can ask local police to provide details that may assist, by contacting the relevant police force by telephone.

Community engagement

The police have powers to make enquiries in the field. You can ask them to make specific enquiries in a FNO's local community including, where appropriate, with relatives, friends, or victims. You may contact the relevant local police force about this.

NCA

NCA became fully-operational as an organisation in October 2013, designed to replace the former Serious Organised Crime Agency. Like its predecessor, it tackles the different kinds of serious organised crime that affects the UK and its citizens. This includes:

- class 'A' drug use or dealing
- people smuggling
- human trafficking
- child exploitation
- major gun crime
- fraud
- computer ('cyber') crime, and
- money laundering.

NCA also deal with some aspects of border policing formerly managed by the UK Border Agency.

You can ask them to check biometric fingerprint records against criminal records held in other countries who maintain a fingerprint database. If you request assistance from NCA, you must be specific about which country or countries you wish checks to be carried out with, and must seek advice of the CC investigations team (IT) in each case by referring it to the monthly surgeries they hold locally in CC's commands. For more information on liaising with NCA in FNO cases generally, see related link: Liaison with the National Crime Agency. You can contact CC IT for advice about using any of the above sources.

	There may also be other useful information in their records. It is best practice to contact all employers by telephone in the first instance. If the FNO's employment began on or before 29 February 2008 then section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 will apply (see related link: Asylum & Immigration Act 1996). If it started after 29 February 2008 then section 15 of the Immigration, Nationality and Asylum Act 2006 will apply (see related link: Immigration Nationality & Asylum Act 2006).
	Family and friends
	You can approach family members or friends of FNOs to assist in identity and nationality enquiries, but this is best done by contacting the local police to arrange interviews through their services.

Legal representatives

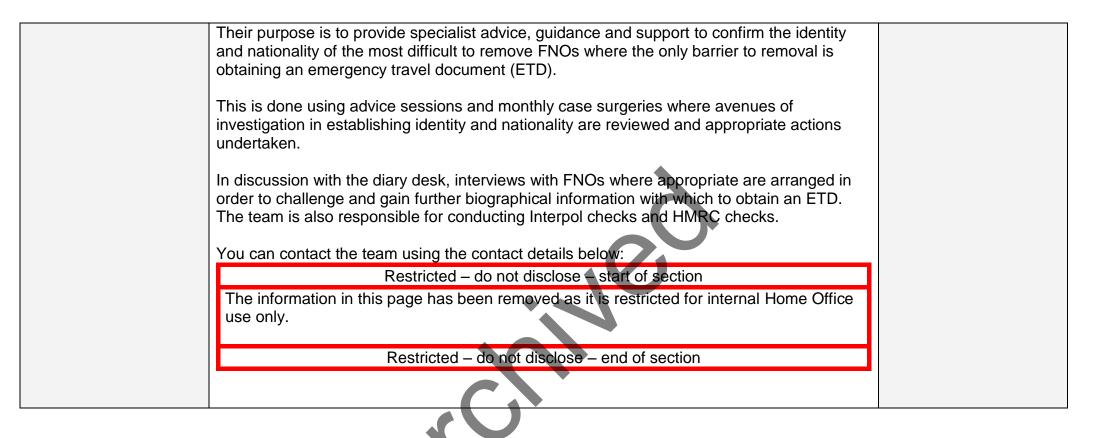

Representatives do retain records of current and former clients. You can contact them to find out if they would be willing to disclose any information in their records which may be of use. It is best practice to contact representatives in writing.

Open sources – the internet

The internet can be a very powerful and useful tool to assist with establishing and verifying a FNO's identity and nationality, and it can be freely searched for such information. It can be especially useful in determining correct spellings of information which needs to be entered into an ETD.
