

Parental attitudes to childhood immunisation

Some key findings

Most parents recognise how serious vaccine preventable diseases can be. The diseases perceived to be the most serious were ...

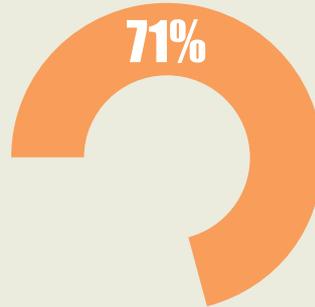

Meningitis

Septicaemia

Pneumonia

Polio

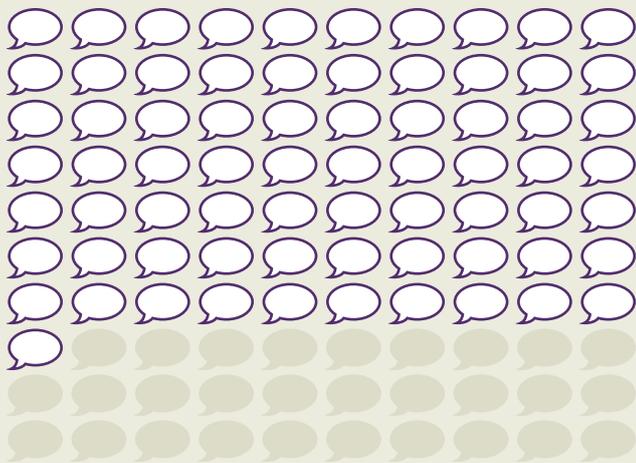

% very serious

Discussions with health professionals

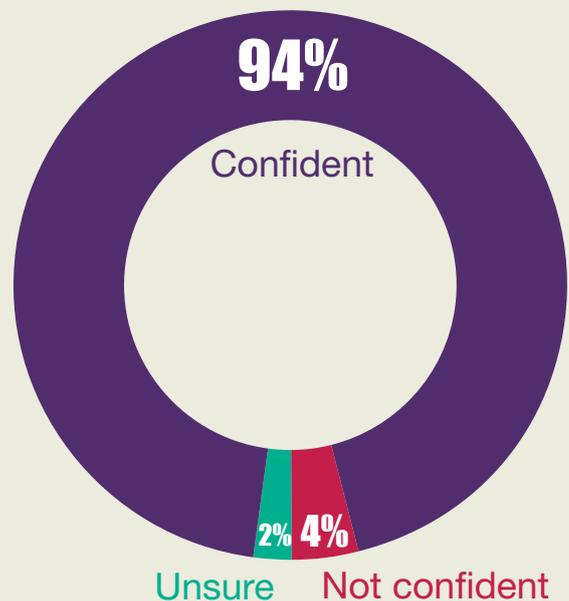

71%

of parents had a discussion with a health professional before their child was due to be immunised

94%

of parents were confident in the immunisation programme

GPs and practice nurses were the most common health professionals to have a discussion with