The effect of this notice is to end the tenancy at the end of the specified date. If you do not give up vacant possession of the residential premises by the end of the specified date the landlord may peaceably re-enter the property to take possession of it.

- The landlord does not require a court order to repossess the residential premises providing all occupiers are named in the Landlord Notice(s) served under section 33D(2), as disqualified from renting. I / we<sup>4</sup>, as the landlord of the premises below, have been given notice under section 33D(2) of the Immigration Act 2014 by the Secretary of State for the Home Department, advising me/us<sup>4</sup> that you [and all other occupiers<sup>5</sup> of the premises]<sup>4</sup> are <sup>1</sup> This notice may only be used to end a tenancy where the landlord has received one or more notices from the Home Office informing the landlord that all of the occupiers are disqualified from renting. If not all the occupiers are disqualified from renting (and therefore named in a notice from the Home Office), though some are, the landlord will need to take other steps to end the tenancy and obtain a possession order from the court. This notice cannot be used to end the tenancy in those circumstances. This notice can be used to end a tenancy entered into either before or after the coming into force of section 40 of the Immigration Act 2016.

<sup>2</sup> This notice may be served by being handed to the tenant or tenants personally or by leaving it at the premises or by sending it to the premises by post (section 33D(5) of the Immigration Act 2014). The landlord should retain proof of service, including the date on which it was served. The notice period cannot expire earlier than at the end of the period of 28 days beginning with the date on which it was served.

<sup>3</sup> This notice may also be used terminate a licence to occupy, where all the occupiers are disqualified from renting because a tenancy includes a licence to occupy for the purpose of the legislation (see section 20(3) of the Immigration Act 2014). Accordingly references to “tenancy” “tenant” or “landlord” also mean “licence”, “licensee” and “licensor” as appropriate. If the tenancy or licence is held jointly by two or more persons this notice must be given to all of those persons (see section 33D(3) of the Immigration Act 2014).

<sup>5</sup> The definition of an occupier is provided in section 33(8) of the Immigration Act 2014 and means a tenant, a person who, under the residential tenancy agreement, otherwise has the right to occupy the premises and is named in the agreement, and any other person who the landlord knows is occupying the premises.

Notes for the tenant / occupier

This notice is only valid if the landlord has received one or more notices from the Home Office (“the Landlord Notice(s)”) which specify that you and all the other occupiers of the residential premises to which it relates, are disqualified from renting in England. This notice is not valid unless a copy /copies of the Landlord Notice(s) is/are attached, or given with this notice. Where two or more Landlord Notices have been received, copies of all those notices must be attached or given with this notice. If you dispute that you and /or the other occupiers listed in the Landlord Notice(s) are all disqualified from renting because of your immigration status, you should contact the Home Office immediately – see the Landlord Notice for contact details.

This notice can only be withdrawn if the landlord receives, before the end of the specified date, written confirmation from the Home Office that you or one of the other occupiers named in the notice are not disqualified from renting, so if you have any doubt about your immigration status or the validity of the notice you must act quickly.

If you require assistance in leaving the United Kingdom, please contact the Home Office, your embassy/ high commission or see the advice online at the following website:

The effect of this notice is to end your tenancy at the end of the specified date. You can end the tenancy earlier by giving vacant possession before the end of the specified date.

This notice is to be treated as a notice to quit where such a notice would ordinarily be required to bring your tenancy to an end. Where this notice is used, you are not entitled to any longer notice period that you may have received had a notice to quit been used to bring your tenancy to an end.

The landlord does not require a court order to repossess the residential premises providing all persons occupying it are named in the Landlord Notice(s) served under section 33D(2), as disqualified from renting.

The tenancy becomes excluded under section 3A(7D) of the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 once the Home Office has served the Landlord Notice(s) under section 33D(2) in relation to all occupiers and section 3(1) of that Act (which requires possession to be obtained through a court order) specifically does not apply to excluded tenancies.

If you do not give up vacant possession of the residential premises by the end of the specified date the landlord may peaceably re-enter the property to take possession of it without letting you know when this will happen.

The landlord, or anyone acting for the landlord, may not use violence or threats of violence, or manhandle an occupier either to gain entry to or recover possession of the premises, and may not harass you or withdraw services from the premises in order to encourage you to leave. The landlord may not forcibly gain entry to the premises whilst there is someone opposed to the entry present on the premises (e.g. breaking a window to secure entry). These actions would constitute a criminal offence.

Alternatively, the landlord may appoint a High Court Enforcement Officer to recover possession of the premises after the specified date, as this notice is enforceable under section 33D(7) of the Immigration Act 2014 as if it were an order of the High Court.

If you need advice about this notice, or what it means for you and anyone else occupying the premises, you should seek help from Citizens Advice, a housing or immigration adviser or a solicitor immediately.
