

Forestry Commission Centenary celebrations

December 2017

As we celebrate our centenary, we will inspire a deeper appreciation of our forests, while nurturing and protecting them for the future.

Economy

Wildlife

Woodland creation

Social

Health

Living spaces

Centenary book

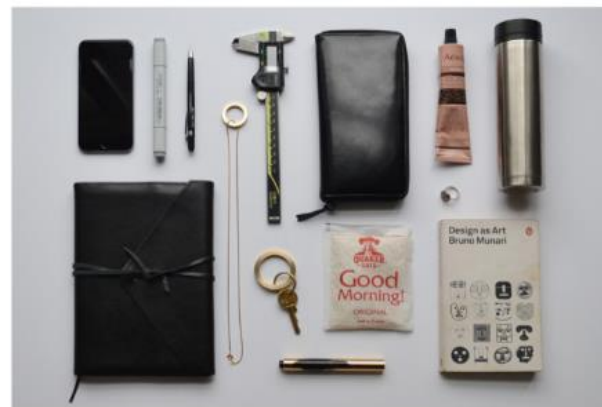

TV Series

2019

Maria Thomson tells us how she became inspired to become a National Park Service ranger, followed by her two children who also became rangers. She found her park at Everglades National Park, so get out and find yours!

Staff stories 2019

Alice Walsh
Alice Made This

www.alicemadethis.com
Twitter: @alicemadethis
Facebook: alicemadethis
Pinterest: alicemadethis
Instagram: @alicemadethis

iPhone

My diary, my audio, my alarm, my camera, my communication!
Copic Promarker C3: To highlight my favorite sketch ideas.

0.5mm mechanical pencil

Travel time is good for sketching ideas so the pencil and the Pro Marker travel with me at all times.

A precision 4-way digital measuring caliper

I always take this to any factory visit or product meeting - 1mm is a massive difference with a product of our size so precision and proportion is key.

Listen to Audio Excerpts

(Click on the photos to listen to the excerpts.)

Meg Weesner: Community and Natural Resources

In the 1980s Meg Weesner was among a pioneer generation of women to move into Natural Resources Management in the National Park Service. During her career she discovered that collaboration with partners was the best way to preserve and protect valuable resources.

J.D. Swed: Dealing with Death

J.D. Swed shares some of his experiences as a search and rescue ranger in the parks. He discusses how he learned to deal with death and helped others to do the same.

Next Steps