Protecting, expanding and improving England's woodlands

The Forestry Commission website is moving to GOV.UK

On Monday 9 July 2018 we will begin the process of moving the content on our current website to GOV.UK, the main website for Government Departments.

Our new homepage will be available at www.gov.uk/forestrycommission when it goes live. This page will provide links to our most important and frequently used guidance, as well as news stories and other information about the Forestry Commission.

We have been working hard to ensure that the transition is smooth and that you are able to find all the information that you need.

The new content has been grouped into guides to help you find the right information and we will also be redirecting you from the old Forestry Commission website to GOV.UK for the next couple of months.

The Woodland Support pages for Countryside Stewardship customers will remain unchanged.

We will be moving content in stages over the coming few months, so some information, such as tree health, will remain on the current Forestry Commission website. We will keep you up to date with progress and will make things as clear as we can during this transition period. We will provide more help and support for you on where key information can be found.

If you are not able to find what you are looking for, please try using an internet search engine such as Google to find the guidance on GOV.UK. If you experience any problems with the information on our pages, please do let us know by using the 'is there anything wrong with this page?' link, which you will find on the bottom-right corner of every page.
