

RESPONSE 43

01 September 2016
14:50

Subject	Publicans and the human rights of all contemporary tradespeople.
From	[REDACTED]
To	Pubs Consultation Responses
Sent	18 November 2015 12:06

Dear Sir or Madam,

Being a fan of fair practise I am shocked to learn of the plight of PUBCO tied landlords.

This is a quote from one such person.

They live in fear of losing their livelihood, their pub, their home and their dignity. They exist in 'perverse isolation' as jovial hosts, entertaining their guests, employing staff as little as possible as it's only their own labour they can afford, the lowest paid people in their business, working eighty to a hundred hours a week, unable to share their reality with anyone outside the family, dependent on tax credits and living hand to mouth out of the business. It's modern day slavery

Modern day slavery?

SURELY dear Sir or Madam, in the modern age tied landlords' bonds should be loosened so as to not cause chaffing or scaring, the PUBCO 'blockade' lifted and the restrictions on their freedom to trading around or beyond the PUBCO 'trade zone' be, if not scrapped then relaxed, slackened and moderated so as to allow for a respectable living for said landlords...

Discuss.

Yours in anticipation,

[REDACTED]